

Digging Deep With God When You're Strapped for Time

I was exhausted from two nights of poor sleep, so I announced that Panda Express would be making dinner for the night. Matt had just gotten back from a four-day trip and realized he had forgotten his tablet at the church, so he offered to go with me to get the tablet and the Chinese take-out.

Four days without that man, and I had missed him something fierce. In the car, I kept reaching for his hand, and we took advantage of rush-hour traffic to catch up with each other. (That means I talked and talked and talked, and he listened.)

The trip was short, maybe 20 minutes, but it was a sweet time to be in love and to relish our friendship before we got home to enjoy the evening with our kids.

This has been a wonderful but full couple of weeks. Our daughter and her husband just bought a house that they're trying to fix up before they move in, so we invited them to eat dinner with us every night. Also, our son is home from college with his sweet girlfriend, so we've been clocking precious family time around the table.

Great family time but not a lot of Matt-and-I time, you know? (Stinkin' kids.)

But hey, we snag us-time whenever we can get it, even if it's just a chat and holding hands while we run a few errands. Because we're in loooooove. So in love. It's almost our 26-year anniversary, and we are livin' in the sweet spot.

All that to say, my relationship with God looks much the same. This has been a full season—trying to finish up school while having the kids in the house all the time. I haven't had a lot of energy or brain space for long times of Bible study over the last few weeks.

In seasons like this, I go to reading a short devotional book instead of doing more intense Bible study. And you know what happened just this morning? I had been discouraged about something, and in my short devotional reading, God specifically spoke to my need. (Cool thing –the devotion was written by one of my longtime friends. I think God was planning all along for her words to build me up right at that moment.)

I just want to tell you to stop worrying about the length of your quiet time with the Lord.

Be in love with him.

Want to talk to him.

Quit watching the clock and simply smoosh in as much communication with the Lord whenever you can, even if it's while you're in the car running errands.

Here's what Jesus says:

'You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind' (Matt. 22:37).

If someone asks you how long your quiet time with God is every day, just get all starry-eyed and say, "Never long enough. Never long enough." That's love talking. {eoa}

Christy Fitzwater is an author and pastor's wife living in Kalispell, Montana. She is the author of Blameless: Living A Life Free from Guilt And Shame and My Father's Hands: 52 Reasons to Trust God with Your Heart. Find her devotional writing at .

Could Matthew 5:9 Prevent North Korea From Igniting World War 3?

On May 30, 2017, a delegation led by WCC general secretary Rev. Dr. Olav Fykse Tveit met with the president of the Republic of Korea, Moon Jae-in, who took office on 10 May 2017.

Mr. Moon is a former human rights lawyer who once served as a member of the National Council of Churches in Korea (NCCCK) Busan Chapter for human rights.

“That President Moon received us so early in his term is a sign of his recognition of the role that churches in Korea and the WCC have in building relations for peace on the Korean peninsula,” noted Tveit.

President Moon received the delegation—comprising WCC general secretary Tveit, Dr. Chang Sang (WCC President for the Asian Region), Mr. Peter Prove (director of the WCC’s Commission of the Churches on International Affairs), Metropolitan Ambrose-Aristotle Zographos (of the Orthodox Church in Korea and President of the NCCCK), Rev. Dr. Kim Young Ju (NCCCK general secretary) and Rev. Shin Seung-min (NCCCK Program Executive)—in his executive office in the “Blue House” in Seoul.

President Moon expressed his appreciation for the work of the WCC and the ecumenical movement in promoting democratization, human rights, peace and reconciliation in Korea for more than 45 years. The president affirmed that such religious and civilian exchanges are important in helping to reduce tensions and to promote normalization of relations. He stressed that his administration is committed to engaging in dialogue with North Korea but that recent repeated missile tests by the North obstruct this intent. He called for North Korea to help create the conditions for inter-Korean dialogue by suspending such tests.

President Moon underlined that establishing a “peace regime” and the denuclearization of the Korean peninsula are key priorities for his administration. He expressed the hope that the WCC and the NCCCK would continue to work for these purposes, too.

An international conference convened by the WCC in Hong Kong in November 2016, with participants from North and South Korea and from 11 other countries, called for future ecumenical initiatives to be purposefully and explicitly configured to model and exercise leadership toward a peace treaty for the Korean peninsula, to replace the Armistice Agreement by which the Korean War was suspended in 1953.

“Everywhere I go around the world, especially in these times of heightened geopolitical tensions,” remarked the general secretary, “I am asked about the situation in the Korean peninsula and about how the WCC and the churches in Korea can do more to help reduce tensions and to promote peace and reconciliation in this region. We have a long history of supporting encounter and dialogue between Christians from both North and South Korea, and we are committed to doing more.”

“We and our member churches place much hope in your leadership for a fresh start for peace among the divided Korean people, and we pray for you as you serve in this high position in this significant time for your nation and for the world,” Tveit told the new president. {eoa}

Kathy Griffin Represents the Left's Visceral Hatred of Trump, Deplorables

Like many Americans, Barron Trump has seen the image of his father's decapitated head. And as you might imagine—the 11-year-old boy was traumatized by what he saw:

D-List comedian Kathy Griffin holding a bloody replica of President Trump's severed head.

It was gruesome, gory and despicable.

"Kathy Griffin should be ashamed of herself," President Trump wrote in a Twitter message. "My children, especially my 11-year-old son, Barron, are having a hard time with this. Sick!"

Controversial photographer Tyler Shields said he and Miss Griffin were hoping to create a bold message.

"That's what art is meant to do," he told Fox News. "Some people look at it, and they love it. Some people look at it, and they hate it ... I understand there are going to be people that hate this. It's a very touchy subject ... but this is not real. We didn't kill anybody, nor do I feel anybody should be killed."

Cable News-ers seemed to shrug it off. MSNBC's Morning Joe said it was not a story worth covering.

I wonder if they would've said the same if Miss Griffin had been holding President Obama's severed head?

It's cliché, I know. But it needed to be said. The hypocrisy of the left needs to be exposed; it must be exposed.

Miss Griffin is no stranger to the cable news landscape. Since 2007 she has co-hosted CNN's New Year's Eve coverage with Anderson Cooper. The show is known for its vulgar content and sexually-charged innuendo.

Mr. Cooper denounced the faux-beheading, calling it "clearly disgusting and completely inappropriate."

At this point CNN has been non-committal on her future with the network.

"We found what she did disgusting and offensive," the network said in a statement published by Fox News. "We are evaluating our New Year's Eve coverage and have made no decisions at this point."

Miss Griffin has since apologized for the act of artistic savagery, but I sincerely question her sincerity.

I will give her credit, though. That one photograph encapsulates the unbridled fury and visceral hatred of the progressive left towards those on the right.

It's just more evidence of the political and cultural jihad they are waging not just on President Trump, but on all of us gun-toting, Bible-clinging Deplorables.

As they say, a picture is worth a thousand words. {eoa}

World Council of Churches
Pushing for Korean Peace

Treaty

The World Council of Churches is pushing newly elected South Korean President Moon Jae-in to sign a peace treaty with North Korea that would replace the current armistice agreement that has been in effect since 1953.

WCC is highly critical of what it claims is President Donald Trump's "escalation" of the conflict on the Korean Peninsula. Last month it issued the following statement after the Department of Defense announced the USS Carl Vinson was being positioned off the peninsula in the Sea of Japan:

The World Council of Churches (WCC) joins the National Council of Churches in [South] Korea (NCCCK) in expressing grave concern at the re-deployment of the USS Carl Vinson aircraft carrier group to the seas surrounding the Korean peninsula. In a context of already heightened tensions—especially in the midst of the ongoing joint U.S. and South Korean Foal Eagle-Key Resolve military exercises and the steps being taken to deploy the U.S. missile defense system THAAD in South Korea, and North Korean threats of a nuclear response—this constitutes a further escalation of military confrontation in the region.

WCC has been engaged for more than 30 years in promoting dialogue and encounter between North and South Korean Christians, accompanied and supported by representatives of the global fellowship of churches in WCC membership. Our purpose has been and continues to be the promotion of peace and reunification of a country and people divided by an unresolved conflict. Particularly in recent years, almost all other channels of dialogue and encounter have been closed off in favor of escalating military confrontation and tightening sanctions. We do not believe that this is a recipe for peace, but rather for increasing the risk of conflict. War cannot achieve a sustainable peace, as the modern history of the Korean peninsula all too tragically demonstrates.

We call urgently for measures to reduce tensions and promote dialogue and negotiations, rather than initiatives such as those now being taken that can only increase tensions and the risk of conflict that would prove catastrophic for all Koreans, North and South, as well as for people throughout the region and the world.

We call for all people of good will to join in praying for wisdom and restraint on the part of all those with the instruments of such deadly force in their hands, and for peace and unity among the people of the Korean peninsula.

WCC General Secretary Rev. Dr. Olav Fykse Tveit led a delegation to South Korea's Blue House to meet with Moon, who is a former human rights lawyer. Although he said that recent repeated missile tests by the North obstruct peace prospects, he remains committed to "engaging in dialogue" that will lead to "democratization, human rights, peace and reconciliation in Korea."

Following their meeting, Tveit issued the following statement:

That President Moon received us so early in his term is a sign of his recognition of the role that churches in Korea and the WCC have in building relations for peace on the Korean peninsula.

Everywhere I go around the world, especially in these times of heightened geopolitical tensions, I am asked about the situation in the Korean peninsula and about how the WCC and the churches in Korea can do more to help reduce tensions and to promote peace and reconciliation in this region. We have a long history of supporting encounter and dialogue between Christians from both North and South Korea, and we are committed to doing more.

We and our member churches place much hope in your leadership for a fresh start for peace among the divided Korean people, and we pray for you as you serve in this high position in this significant time for your nation and for the world. {eoa}

Prophecy: 50 Years After 1967's 'Summer of Love,' God Now Brings the 'Summer of the Dove'

I am finalizing this word while in Jerusalem, just before Pentecost, where we remember the glorious outpouring of the Holy Spirit in the Upper Room that birthed and launched the church. The Lord has been speaking to me much about the coming breakout of heaven over us this upcoming summer.

It has been so inspirational being here in Jerusalem with so much history taking place and being revisited. My own journey with the Holy Spirit began 50 years ago as I was baptized in the Holy Spirit the same year Jerusalem came back under Israel rule. 1967 gave us 'The Summer of Love,' and now, 50 years later, we are going to get 'The Summer of the Dove.'

I believe that starting this Pentecost, we will experience a fresh outpouring of the Holy Spirit that is connected to an unprecedented release of new songs and sounds of heaven. We really need it. These songs and sounds will pierce the atmosphere with the Holy Spirit's new marching rhythms.

This Pentecost season connects us to the 50th anniversary of Jerusalem miraculously and stunningly coming back under Israel authority after more than 2,000 years. Jerusalem and Israel's resurrected destiny is totally tied into an increase of the work of the Holy Spirit. We are now about to "go double" on what is being poured out by the Dove. It is also connected to the 500th anniversary of the beginning of the Protestant Reformation.

This Pentecost also represents the 111th Pentecost since the Azusa Street Revival that has changed the world forever. Before that outpouring, the percentage of Christians with a defined encounter or baptism in the Holy Spirit did not reach even .1 percent of believers. Now there are an estimated 700 million "Spirit-filled" believers, meaning that almost 1 in every 10 people on the planet has had an encounter or baptism with the Holy Spirit that goes beyond just "saying the sinner's prayer". This is an almost astronomical reality that is becoming the progressive game-changer of all game-changers on our planet.

Now another significant Acts 2:17 outpouring of the Holy Spirit is about to take place. He is going to pour out His Spirit on all flesh, and prophetic songs and sounds are forthcoming.

Songs That Usher in Reformation and Renaissance

I have been aware that our worship songs of recent years have not captured the prophetic ascendancy that has been available. By that I mean, that though there have been amazing songs over the last few years, they have lagged behind in prophetic maturity and declaration. Anointed worship songs and anthems are often 10 or more years ahead of where the advancing church is. This has not been recently the case.

There have been great songs of overcoming fear and great songs of our Father's love for us—both very needed, yet limited prophetic seeing into this day of Reformation and Renaissance. For the last couple of years, I have been declaring the availability of these songs for the anointed psalmists, but I have seen a vision of these songs as the fruit at the top of a tree that we have never climbed to.

The low-hanging fruit satisfied, and so a higher place was not sought out. Part of the reason for this is that we have become quite content with the new formula for the new worship songs, and that has hindered the high creativity and thus the high anointing that was available to be accessed. Don't get me wrong: Worship songs have been fine, but there has been a higher level available. This will not be held back anymore.

The coming outpouring of the Holy Spirit is going to make those high treetop places more readily accessible, but songbirds and songwriters are still going to have to break out of the safe formulaic box and go there and get it. The more successful you presently are, the more unlikely you are to break out of your mold, and so many of the new songs are likely to come from previously unknown sources. The invitation, of course, is to all.

Find the rarefied air in the Spirit and then respond to what you have encountered. There is another dimension and perspective of His heart towards us yet available to be accessed, and when it is found, it will carry a presence power that will literally melt the hearts of the masses. Our new praise to Him will come out of that new revelation of His expanded heart towards us.

Sounds That Bring Heavenly Accelerant

We are going to be greatly propelled by the new songs and the new sounds of heaven that are coming to us and it is going to add heavenly accelerant to the body of Christ. These songs will release new hope, new faith, new joy, new vision and new love. Justice and liberty will ring out from the very sounds that are captured and released.

The new sounds, the new beats and the new rhythms will at times feel like an approaching or a departing train—and I say that prophetically without fully knowing what that means, but I can feel it coming in. It all ties in to the reformation glory train (my first prophetic word of 2017) that is coming into this nation and into the nations of the world. We will have expanded definitions of the love and the glory of the Lord, because we haven't seen anything yet compared to what is coming.

Heaven is about to show up and show off outside of the four walls of the church, and every stage on the planet will be a divine target. Jesus told us, "You are the light of the world, not just "You are the light of the church." We are going to learn to run with this as we have never done before. The seven mountains of society (media, economy, government, education, family, arts and religion) are going to be progressively invaded by the King's kids who understand that narrative and the day we live in. It is not about "domination" of the mountains, it is about loving, anointed, creative, innovative influence on the mountains.

God has a better way for everything. Toss out all end-time expectations of doom and gloom. Yes, we will have intense resistance, and in many nations significant persecution will abound. However, in the midst of all these realities, the kingdom of God will be the prevailing dynamic.

We have just begun an extended period of the most aggressive "kingdom" advancement ever, and we are going to march to the beat of the sound of the incoming reformation glory train. The most dramatic Renaissance period in history is unveiling before our eyes, and ultimately, it will restore the face of God to society in a creative and innovative display that the church has never seen.

In the upcoming "Summer of the Dove," the songs and sounds of heaven are going to help us get on board with a new level of agreement. The new soundtrack of heaven is imperative to accompany the new showtime heaven has planned for Earth. Make sure you position yourself at this time to receive the new double-portion outpouring of the Holy Spirit. Make sure you carry the new wineskin of reformation of society that is required to hold this fresh anointing from heaven.

Psalmists, minstrels, song writers, musicians, house of David—you are vital at this time. You must receive the new soundtrack of heaven that is going to accompany the new “show-time” on earth for the kingdom of God. {eoa}

Johnny Enlow is a social reformer, international speaker, spiritual mentor and author of The Seven Mountain Prophecy, The Seven Mountain Mantle, and Rainbow God. He and his wife, Elizabeth, are focused on awakening individuals to their call to provide practical solutions from the heart of God for every problem in society—until the real God of all of life is displayed in the seven primary areas of culture in all nations: media, arts and entertainment, government, family, religion, economy and education.

How the Arches of Baal Prove the Rise of the New World Order

Yet another major metropolis erected a replica of the arch of Palmyra, otherwise known as the arch of Baal.

The Italian city of Florence installed the arch in March, days ahead of world leaders meeting together for the G20 Summit.

While the events may be over, one scholar believes their unity symbolizes the new world order.

“This arch brings together all the necessary elements for the new world order,” Rabbi Daniel Assur, a member of the nascent Sanhedrin, tells Breaking Israel News. “If you look at where this arch has appeared, it is clearly a pattern moving towards a specific goal: Messiah. The question is, whose Messiah will it be?”

As an Orthodox Jew, Assur believes the Messiah has not yet come, and the arch could be a gateway for His entry.

“There is no question that the arch is the portal for a new world that the Talmud is speaking about. If the new world order succeeds, then they will rule, God forbid. But if the Moshiach ben David (Messiah from the House of David) comes through the portal, he will rule over them, over the new world order.”

Other arch replications have popped up around the world, including in Paris, Dubai, New York and London.

It’s all part of United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization’s plan to establish a new world order, Assur says.

“UNESCO, as part of the new world order, has to usurp the true name of God,” Rabbi Assur explained. “It is towards this end that UNESCO is working toward changing the name and history of the Temple Mount, in order to control the original name of the Jewish God. That is why they made the most absurd claims about the holy places in Israel, but the power of the new world order is real, so they were successful, despite their obvious lies.”

Since various arches’ unveilings, some end-times scholars have noticed an increase in demonic activity.

“First there were the terror attacks in New York, New Jersey and Minnesota, then there were the unprecedented riots in Charlotte, and over the weekend there was a horrific mass shooting near Seattle. All of these events took place within a week after the Arch of Triumph was put up in New York. Baal was an ancient deity that was often associated with violence and bloodshed, and those that erected this arch have no idea what they are messing with,” blogger Michael Snyder writes.

What do you think? Sound off! {eoa}

Bernie Sanders Urges College Students to ‘Stand Up and Fight Back’

Usually, when a politician is invited to speak at a college commencement, he or she will give an inspiring speech that motivates the graduates with a call to action—but not U.S. Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt.

In a speech that seems to have been pulled out from his failed 2016 presidential campaign, the one-time student of Brooklyn College spoke to the institution’s graduates Tuesday and urged them to “stand up and fight” for socialist ideals. The system, he reminded them, is “rigged” to make the rich richer and poor poorer.

You can watch the full speech in the video clip above. The following is a transcript of the speech:

Brothers and sisters,

Let me begin by congratulating the graduating class of 2017.

Today is an important day in your lives, something that you've worked hard to attain, and I want to wish all of you the very best of luck in your future endeavors. May you all live healthy and happy lives, doing the work you enjoy and surrounded in love by family and friends.

Let me thank president Michelle Anderson, Nicole Haas, the Brooklyn College Administration, faculty and staff and all of you for inviting my wife, Jane, and me back to Brooklyn, where we were both born and raised. I am greatly appreciative of the honorary degree which you bestow on me today.

I grew up in Flatbush and graduated from James Madison High School. Jane was raised in Flatbush and Bed-Stuy, and graduated from St. Savior's High School a few miles away from here.

In 1959, I attended Brooklyn College for a year—a year which had a major impact in my life. Thank you, Brooklyn College. After that year I left for the University of Chicago, where I eventually graduated. My mom had died the previous year and I felt it was time to leave the neighborhood and see what the rest of the world looked like.

My childhood in Brooklyn was shaped by two profound realities. First, my mom, dad and older brother Larry, who graduated from Brooklyn College, lived in a 3 1/2 room rent-controlled apartment. As with many families who don't have a lot of money, financial pressures caused friction and tension within our household. From those experiences, I have never forgotten that there are millions of people throughout this country who struggle to put food on the table, pay the electric bill, try to save for their kids' education or for retirement—people who face painful and stress-filled decisions every single day.

The second reality that impacted my life was that my father left Poland at the age of 17 from a community which was not only very poor, but from a country where anti-Semitism, pogroms and attacks on Jews were not uncommon. While my father emigrated to the United States, and escaped Hitler and the Holocaust, many in his family did not. For them, racism, right-wing extremism and ultra-nationalism were not "political issues." They were issues of life and death—and they died.

From that experience, what was indelibly stamped on me was the understanding that we must never allow demagogues to divide us up by race, by religion, by national origin, by gender or sexual orientation. Black, white, Latino, Asian American, Native American, Christian, Jew, Muslim and every religion, straight or gay, male or female we must stand together. This country belongs to all of us.

As a United States senator from Vermont, let me give you a very brief overview of some of the very serious crises we currently face—crises which do not often get the kind of discussion they deserve.

As a student at James Madison High School, many years ago, I recall my social-studies teacher talking about how there were small developing countries around the world that were oligarchic societies—places where the economic and political life of the nation were controlled by a handful of very wealthy families. It never occurred to me then that the United States of America, our great nation, could move in that direction. But that is precisely what is happening.

Today, the top 1/10 of 1 percent now owns almost as much wealth as the bottom 90%, 20 Americans now own as much wealth as the bottom half of America and one family—the Walton family—owns more wealth than the bottom 42 percent of our people. In the last 17 years, while the middle class continues to decline, we have seen a tenfold increase in the number of billionaires—going from 51 to 565. In America today, CEOs of major corporations now earn about 350 times more than the average worker makes. In terms of income, 52 percent of all new income goes to the top 1%. In other words, the very rich are becoming much richer.

At the same time as we have more income and wealth inequality than any other major nation, 43 million Americans live in poverty, we have the highest rate of childhood poverty of almost any major country in earth, half of older workers have nothing in the bank as they approach retirement, and in some inner cities and rural communities, youth unemployment is sky-high. Unbelievably, in many parts of this country today, as a result of hopelessness and despair, life expectancy is actually declining as a frightening number of people experience drug addiction, alcoholism and suicide. And, because of poverty, racism and a broken criminal justice system, we have more people in jail than any other country—disproportionately black, Latino and Native American.

Directly related to the oligarchic economy that we currently have is an oligarchic and corrupt political system which is undermining American democracy. As a result of the disastrous Citizens United Supreme Court decision, corporations and billionaires are able to spend unlimited sums of money on elections. The result is that today a handful of billionaire families are spending hundreds of millions a year to make sure that candidates who represent the rich and the powerful get elected.

And we are seeing the results of how oligarchy functions right now in Congress where the Republican leadership wants to throw 23 million people off of health insurance, cut Medicaid by over $800 billion, defund Planned Parenthood, cut food stamps and other nutrition programs by over $200 billion, cut Head Start and after school programs, make drastic cuts in Pell grants and other programs that help make college more affordable.

And, unbelievably, at exactly the same time, they want to provide the top one percent with $3 trillion in tax cuts. The very rich get much richer, and they get huge tax cuts. The middle class shrinks and the poor struggle, and they will find it harder to get health care, housing, nutrition, education or clean water.

In response to these very serious problems, it seems to me that we have two choices. First, we can throw up our hands in despair. We can moan and groan. We can withdraw from the public reality we face. We can loudly proclaim that we can't beat the system.

That is one response. It is an understandable response, but it is not an acceptable response.

It is not an acceptable response because the reality we face today impacts not only our lives, but the lives of our children, the lives of our grandchildren and, with regard to climate change, the very future of this planet. The truth is that the only rational choice we have, the only real response we can make, is to stand up and fight back—reclaim American democracy and create a government that works for all of us, and not just the 1 percent. {eoa}

Danny Danon Taking on Huge New Role With the United Nations

Each year, in September, the United Nations General Assembly convenes for a new year, and for that one year, it has a new president and vice president—as well as an assortment of committee chairs—but the 72nd General Assembly that begins later this year will feature a name recognizable to many Americans.

Danny Danon, the Israeli ambassador to the world body, was elected Wednesday to be vice president of the General Assembly. In that role, he will chair General Assembly meetings and participate in setting its agenda for the year.

Danon has been a rising star among the 109 members of the General Assembly. Last year, he was elected to his current role as chair of the 6th Committee, which is the primary forum for the consideration of legal questions in the General Assembly.

“It is an honor to represent the state of Israel in this leadership position at the United Nations,” he said in a statement released following the election. “We have proven once again that Israel is ready and able to serve in significant positions in the U.N. and the attempts to block this progress won’t succeed.”

Danon was nominated as the representative of the Western European and Others Group. Slovakian Minister of Foreign and European Affairs Miroslav Lajčák was elected president of the 72nd General Assembly.

As of this writing, U.S. Permanent Representative Nikki Haley has not yet responded to the new development. However, her office announced Wednesday that she will be traveling to Israel for a three-day trip next week to meet with Israeli and Palestinian leaders and to observe U.N. peacekeeping activities in the Middle East. {eoa}

How North Korea and the US Could Be the War of the Second Seal

The potential war between the United States and North Korea could fulfill the Revelation 6 prophecy of the second seal, author John Shorey says.

John writes:

When He opened the second seal, I heard the second living creature say, "Come and see." Then another horse that was red went forth. Power was given to him who sat on it to take peace from the earth, causing people to kill one another. Then a great sword was given to him (Rev. 6:3-4).

Shorey says there are specific reasons why war with North Korea would fall into this prophecy as opposed to other end-times predictions.

"I believe a possible war with Korea could so easily turn into the war of the second seal where one quarter of the earth will be involved in this war, which means it's not going to be all-out global war. It's going to be limited."

Watch the video to see more.

{eoa}

Digging Deep With God When You're Strapped for Time

I was exhausted from two nights of poor sleep, so I announced that Panda Express would be making dinner for the night. Matt had just gotten back from a four-day trip and realized he had forgotten his tablet at the church, so he offered to go with me to get the tablet and the Chinese take-out.

Four days without that man, and I had missed him something fierce. In the car, I kept reaching for his hand, and we took advantage of rush-hour traffic to catch up with each other. (That means I talked and talked and talked, and he listened.)

The trip was short, maybe 20 minutes, but it was a sweet time to be in love and to relish our friendship before we got home to enjoy the evening with our kids.

This has been a wonderful but full couple of weeks. Our daughter and her husband just bought a house that they're trying to fix up before they move in, so we invited them to eat dinner with us every night. Also, our son is home from college with his sweet girlfriend, so we've been clocking precious family time around the table.

Great family time but not a lot of Matt-and-I time, you know? (Stinkin' kids.)

But hey, we snag us-time whenever we can get it, even if it's just a chat and holding hands while we run a few errands. Because we're in loooooove. So in love. It's almost our 26-year anniversary, and we are livin' in the sweet spot.

All that to say, my relationship with God looks much the same. This has been a full season—trying to finish up school while having the kids in the house all the time. I haven't had a lot of energy or brain space for long times of Bible study over the last few weeks.

In seasons like this, I go to reading a short devotional book instead of doing more intense Bible study. And you know what happened just this morning? I had been discouraged about something, and in my short devotional reading, God specifically spoke to my need. (Cool thing –the devotion was written by one of my longtime friends. I think God was planning all along for her words to build me up right at that moment.)

I just want to tell you to stop worrying about the length of your quiet time with the Lord.

Be in love with him.

Want to talk to him.

Quit watching the clock and simply smoosh in as much communication with the Lord whenever you can, even if it's while you're in the car running errands.

Here's what Jesus says:

'You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind" (Matt. 22:37).

If someone asks you how long your quiet time with God is every day, just get all starry-eyed and say, "Never long enough. Never long enough." That's love talking. {eoa}

Christy Fitzwater is an author and pastor's wife living in Kalispell, Montana. She is the author of Blameless: Living A Life Free from Guilt And Shame and My Father's Hands: 52 Reasons to Trust God with Your Heart. Find her devotional writing at .