

STRANG REPORT: Hope & Promise in 2nd Trump Term, A New Era of Optimism and Opportunity

2025 brings our Jubilee anniversary at Charisma magazine, celebrating our company's founding in August, 1975. We are grateful for God's blessings over the half century He has permitted our team to bring the Holy Spirit's work to your home and family.

The new year arrives filled also with promise even with serious challenges on the horizon. This month the second term of President Trump will kick off with his inauguration. Against all odds in an unprecedented political climate, Trump emerged victorious. For millions across the nation, this victory is not just a political achievement, it is a reprieve for a few more years to turn our nation back to God.

As founder of Charisma magazine, I have witnessed firsthand how prayer and spiritual resilience can shape the course of a nation. As we stand on the precipice of Trump's second term, the question arises: What promises does this new chapter hold for America and the world?

After years of economic uncertainty, social upheaval and international crises, Americans are ready for a leader who embodies strength and determination. There is a sense of optimism sweeping the nation these past few weeks. Entrepreneurs are forecasting growth, families are envisioning brighter futures and faith communities are rallying around a shared vision for renewal. This optimism is not unfounded. During his first term, Trump's administration achieved historic tax reforms, deregulated key industries and spurred unprecedented job creation. There is every reason to believe that these accomplishments will continue—and even expand—over the next four years, even if the first few months might be a bit bumpy.

Beyond economic recovery, Trump's second term promises a deeper, more profound opportunity. The cultural battles that have defined the last decade have left many Americans disillusioned and divided. Yet, as Christians, we understand that such trials often precede revival. Could this be the moment when America turns back to God?

The Trump administration has already demonstrated a commitment to protecting religious freedom, supporting pro-life policies and appointing constitutionalist judges. This vision of hope is not limited to domestic policies. Around the world, millions are watching America, a city on a hill, as a beacon of liberty and faith. With Trump at the helm, there is potential to reaffirm our nation's role as a leader in advocating for religious freedom and human dignity globally. Whether combating persecution of Christians in hostile regions or defending the rights of the unborn at international forums, America's moral leadership is poised for a comeback.

While optimism and hope define this moment, we cannot ignore the challenges that lie ahead. The world today is fraught with geopolitical tensions, economic uncertainties and moral decline. Yet, these very crises present opportunities for the church to shine and for leaders to rise.

Trump's approach to international diplomacy has always been unconventional, yet undeniably effective. During his first term, he brokered historic peace agreements in the Middle East, stood firm against China's aggression and reasserted America's sovereignty on the global stage. As we face crises—from escalating conflicts in Eastern Europe to growing threats from rogue states—there is every reason to believe that Trump's leadership will guide us through these tumultuous times.

For Christians, these crises are also a call to action. As we intercede for our pastors, leaders and each other, we can trust that God's hand is at work, even in the midst of uncertainty.

The second Trump administration offers an extraordinary opportunity for Christians to lead by example. In an era marked by division, we are called to be peacemakers and bridge-builders. Trump's victory should not deepen divides but instead inspire us to pursue reconciliation and unity under the banner of shared values.

This is a moment to engage in civic life more fully, to educate the next generation about the principles of faith and freedom, and stand firm against the cultural currents that seek to erode our nation's foundations. It is also a time to extend grace and compassion to those who disagree with us, embodying the love of Christ in both word and deed.

Looking ahead to the next four years, the path will not always be easy. Yet, as Scripture reminds us, "Let us not grow weary in doing good, for in due season we shall reap, if we do not give up," (Gal. 6:9, MEV).

Stephen Strang has seen major changes in the church, the culture and technology since he founded Charisma magazine in 1975. In addition to being CEO of Charisma Media, he hosts a Strang Report podcast live on YouTube and Rumble at 4 p.m. EST every Tuesday and Thursday. His important recent book Spirit-Led Living in an Upside-World is available wherever fine Christian books are sold d including online at .