On Tuesday, Gosselin asked for audiences to pray for her, while showing a photo of the IV in her arm and her finger clipped with an oxygen monitor.

"I will be fine, but I'm scared and would appreciate your prayers! Thanks, guys," Gosselin said.

So, what exactly caused Gosselin to need surgery?

Paws and Prayer? Episcopal Churches to Hold Blessing Ceremonies for Pets and Plushies

For some, pets are more than a furry friend; they really are family.

According to Yahoo News' The Oklahoman, a variety of Episcopalian churches are gearing up for a day of blessing pets and stuffed animals. These animal blessings are part of the day of St. Francis on Oct. 4, with many of the churches having "Blessing of the Animals" programs. For many, this includes cats, dogs and other critters. The participating churches ask that the pets are on leashes or inside of carriers, as well as being fully vaccinated.

However, not only can people seek for their pets to get blessed. If congregants desire, some are allowing stuffed animals to get blessed as well. For example, as The Oklahoman noted, St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral is allowing, "children and the young at heart" to "bring stuffed animals to all services that day."

According to Patch, Blessing of the Animals celebratory events in Tampa, FL at St. Clement's Episcopal Church is allowing guests to bring, "...dogs, cats, pigs, hamsters [and] birds..." The pets are also set to receive St. Francis medals and a prayer booklet for pets.

For years, believers have prayed over their pets, asking God to watch over them in times of sickness or loss. The question of whether animals go to heaven has also stirred conversation among Christians. While Scripture affirms that God deeply cares for all His creation, He has given mankind a unique role as image-bearers of God, possessing an eternal spirit that sets people apart from the rest of creation.

Blessing a child's toy may hold sentimental value, but believers must remember that such objects are not alive and cannot receive God's care the way living animals can. The risk is that well-meaning traditions could blur the lines between symbolic gestures and biblical truth.

Ultimately, while our furry and feathered friends don't share in the eternal Spirit of God the way humans do, they remain a reminder of His creativity and kindness toward His children. It is us as the human race which alone has been created in God's image and given the greatest blessing of all: the promise of eternal life through Jesus Christ.

Thousands Flock to Temple Mount for Historic 40 Days of Prayer Ahead of Yom Kippur

Before the Day of Atonement, thousands in Israel have spent time gathering night after night lifting up their prayers to the Lord at the Temple Mount.

In a powerful video by the Temple Institute, thousands can be seen gathered in prayer and supplication.

“A nation still at prayer in anticipation of Yom Kippur,” The Temple Institute wrote on the post. “Every night for 38 days now, tens of thousands of Jews gather together for prayer at the foot of the Temple Mount.”

The Temple Institute noted that the intercession includes “Selichot prayers,” which are recited every day from the start of Elul until the evening of Yom Kippur, marking a total of 40 days. During this particular day of prayer, hostages who had been freed from the “Gaza torture tunnels,” lifted up their prayers to the Lord in the middle of the crowd.

The number of days of prayer carries deep symbolic weight throughout Scripture. From Moses spending 40 days on Mount Sinai to Jesus fasting 40 days in the wilderness, the number marks a time of testing, preparation and spiritual breakthrough. This 40-day time of prayer to conclude on Yom Kippur also highlights the call for national and spiritual atonement, a cry for mercy, and a plea for God's presence to return to His people.

As we continue to see prophetic words come to pass by the late Kim Clement, one in particular just may be in progress: America is at a Turning Point.

On Mar. 12, 2012, Clement said that he could sense a corruption and exposure that would be coming to light, and it would happen through a "strange happening."

"I sensed corruption after that, and then an exposure of this by a strange happening, a strange turn of events," Clement said. "...the strange happening or strange turn of events that will literally be the turning point in American , repent."

Clement described how this Turning Point would arise from a bitter season, one that challenges hearts and minds, yet ultimately yields sweetness: "I knew if I'd spit it out, I would not have tasted the is bitter will turn out to be sweet." Using the story of Samson and the lion, Clement illustrated how attacks and trials—though bitter at first—can produce life, strength and unexpected blessing. Just as Samson discovered honey in the carcass of the lion that once attacked him, Clement taught that moments of national bitterness can bring restoration and spiritual awakening if God's people respond with faith, prayer and unity.

This prophetic theme of a "Turning Point" is taking on a renewed significance in light of the tragic death of Charlie Kirk, founder of Turning Point USA. While Clement spoke of a moment when America would face bitter challenges that would ultimately yield something sweet, Kirk's passing seems to be one of those bitter moments birthing unexpected spiritual fruit.

In the weeks following Kirk's death, reports have surfaced of an unprecedented number of young people turning to Christ, seeking hope, truth and reconciliation amid cultural chaos. What initially appeared as loss and sorrow is now revealing itself as a catalyst for spiritual awakening, echoing Clement's message that God can transform bitter circumstances into moments of sweetness and divine restoration.

As America navigates this pivotal moment, Clement's vision serves as a reminder that God is always at work behind the scenes. The bitterness of trials, corruption and national unrest is never the final word. Those who seek reconciliation, prayer and spiritual alignment with God will witness the sweet fruits of His providence—a turning point not only for the nation but for the hearts of its people.

Witch Behind Charlie Kirk Curse Wants to Speak to Erika Kirk

Just days before his assassination, witches were paid by the left-wing website, Jezebel, to put curses on Charlie Kirk. Now, the witch who cursed Kirk is speaking out, and her understanding of the spiritual world is perhaps just as scary as the curses.

According to Yahoo News' Blast, the witch, priestess Lilin, is saying that she did not mean for physical harm to come Kirk's way, and would like to have a private conversation with Erika Kirk.

"We regret any distress experienced. What we do is done based on an impartial perspective and at a professional level," Lilin told the Daily Mail. "We respect the widow's feelings and welcome a private conversation to address her concerns."

Lilin reportedly did not believe that her spiritual curses could reap any physical harm on Kirk.

Witchcraft, visit .

“Our spells are spiritual in nature and we do not perform actions that are intended to cause physical harm,” said Lilin.

According to Blast, Lilin and another witch, Leamashtu, were contacted by Jezebel through Etsy. Their ritual supposedly included burning a picture of Kirk. After he died, Lilin said that, “...While we cannot and would not claim responsibility for Mr. Kirk’s death, we do affirm the magic we work with in our daily lives is very real.”

Perhaps one of the most horrifying things the witch said was that she believes: “Summoning demons and communicating with spirits were not inherently ‘evil acts...’ The spiritual community views demons as multi-faceted Spirits and not one-dimensional big bad evils. Mediumship is also perceived as an ethically neutral practice...”

This horrific curse was brought up to the Kirk’s prior to Charlie’s death, and the two had a Catholic priest pray over Charlie, as Megyn Kelly described.

This tragic situation is a sobering reminder that the spiritual realm is not a playground and that every action taken there carries real consequences. Scripture warns that “the thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy,” and summoning demons and casting spells open doors to forces of darkness. Christians must be discerning, recognizing that what is called “ethically neutral” in occult circles is, in reality, participation with powers that oppose God.

The death of Charlie Kirk and the confessions of the witch who cursed him should serve as a wake-up call: engaging with occult practices is not harmless spirituality but an invitation to destruction. Believers must remain vigilant, prayerful and rooted in Christ—understanding that spiritual warfare is real and that dabbling in darkness can unleash consequences far beyond what anyone intends.

Jonathan Cahn Slams Tucker Carlson and Blasphemous Nun Over Israel Lies

Recently, Tucker Carlson teamed up with an Eastern Orthodox nun to broadcast a provocative message to millions, claiming that Israel is harming Christians, that Hamas is “good” and that traditional Christian eschatology is false. In a passionate response video, Jonathan Cahn provided biblical clarity and historical context for believers.

On Carlson’s broadcast, the nun, Mother Agapia Stephanopoulos, made sweeping claims, including that Israel is “actually causing the Christian population in Israel to decrease.” According to Cahn, these assertions are completely inverted. “First of all, it’s decreasing all over the Middle East. Why is that? There’s no Israel in Syria. There’s no Israel in Saudi Arabia. There’s no Israel in Iraq. But in these places, Christians are being persecuted, coerced, subjected... attacked, and killed by Muslim rule,” he explains. In contrast, the Christian population in Israel is actually increasing, even under Israeli sovereignty.

Carlson and Stephanopoulos also attempted to diminish the threat of Hamas. The nun portrayed Hamas as a “resistance” and even suggested they were “wonderful people.” Cahn responded sharply: “The Bible says, ‘Woe to those who call evil good and good evil.’ The truth is Hamas is evil, evil, evil... They massacred innocent fathers, mothers and children.”
