

JD Vance Hosts The Charlie Kirk Show: 'A Joyful Warrior for Our Country'

For years Kim Clement prophesied major events that would happen in America and around the world with great accuracy. This includes the prophecy of Donald Trump being a two-term president. Now, in the wake of national tragedy after the assassination of Turning Point USA's co-founder, Charlie Kirk, his widow, Erika Kirk, has vowed that his mission would continue. The similarities and parallels between Erika Kirk and the described "Esther" by Clement are striking, making her perhaps anointed for such a time as this.

"As the beginning of the restoration, as it begins, there shall be a woman that shall rise up. A woman that shall be strong in faith, virtuous, beautiful in eyes, and her eyes shall be so beautiful. Eyes shall be round and big. I have crowned her, says the Lord. As I crowned Esther," Clement prophesied back on March 25, 2011.

Kirk, a devout Christian and a former Miss Arizona USA, perfectly fits this description.

"For she shall have the oil of gladness for the pain and the mourning that has taken place. And she shall pour out the oil," Clement prophesied. "Healing shall begin and then it shall flow rapidly. Schools will be free from potential damage and danger, shootings and murder, drug addiction. Cartels shall be afraid of a woman. A woman anointed by God. A woman set aside."

In the wake of Charlie's death, people have come together, denouncing this heinous assassination of an innocent man who was a Christian, a husband and a father of two. Charlie Kirk's work on college campuses, debating students on radical ideologies and preaching the message of the gospel not only will continue, but has been ignited since his passing. Turning Point USA reportedly has thousands of new chapters opening on campuses across the country as people are turning to the messages he preached. In her address to the nation following her husband's death, Erika Kirk promised that the tour would continue and that Turning Point would grow more than anyone ever expected.

Clement also prophesied that this woman would previously have been despised by the people. However, they would turn to her with great love and devotion. This, in itself, describes how the Kirk family has been called out and despised for years for their dedication to Christian and conservative values.

"...they will say, 'We hated her, but now we love her.' For she shall take the oil of healing and she shall pour it upon the scars of those left and those right and of the new party that has come forth and emerged where they will say Christ will reign and this we shall not implement at all socialism."

In the middle of this tragedy, Clement prophesied that this Esther would declare, "No more bitterness, no more anger, no more division, and shall pour the oil that shall come from the Spirit of the Lord Himself."

Now, Erika Kirk has cried out for the soul of the nation, stating that a fire has been ignited and that "the cries of this widow will echo around the world like a battle cry."

In this defining moment of grief and awakening, Erika Kirk's resolve carries prophetic weight. As the nation grapples with loss, her voice resounds with a call to healing, unity and revival. Her stand is a reminder that when darkness strikes, God's light shines brighter through those He anoints.

Tucker Carlson Exposes Bill Gates' Hidden Influence on Global Science and Health Policy

During the 2020 pandemic, many believers struggled to reconcile official guidance with personal experience and medical evidence. One practicing physician, Dr. Kirk Moore, with decades of clinical experience, shared his journey with Tucker Carlson on the medical red flags that shaped his approach to healthcare.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

Moore began by observing that effective early treatments, including hydroxychloroquine and ivermectin, were rapidly restricted in multiple countries. From his own clinical practice, patients who received these medications, along with vitamins and minerals, recovered without hospitalization or severe complications. "Not one of my patients died. Not one of them went to the hospital. Not one of them got intubated," he said, underscoring the importance of firsthand clinical observation.

The second red flag was the unprecedented global alignment of government actions. He described it as extraordinary that nearly every nation adopted the same restrictions and removed certain medications from the market. "You and I can't agree on whether you want baked potatoes or sweet potatoes for Thanksgiving dinner. But yet you have 28 countries that are going to do the exact same thing," he noted.

One of the biggest concerns Kirk had was the distribution of the medical supplies with its speed and scale of distribution. He highlighted influential public figures, including Bill Gates, who stated that life could not return to normal without vaccination. He asked "Is he a doctor?" emphasizing the difference between public pronouncements and frontline clinical experience. He also discussed Dr. Anthony Fauci, calling him "a federal bureaucrat...[who] never took care of a patient in his life."

Reflecting on these events, Kirk encouraged viewers to weigh evidence and consult trusted medical sources. This account serves as a reminder that faith and reason are not opposed; rather, they work together to guide believers through uncertainty, helping them care for their health and navigate competing narratives with integrity.

Charlie Kirk Was a Christian Martyr: Where Does the Church Go From Here?

The death of Charlie Kirk has raised exceptional questions for the Christian Church. Not only was Kirk a conservative, but he was a devout and outspoken Christian that put his faith above all else. The question for the Church now: Are we going to rise up in boldness or shrink back in fear?

In a compelling video, Vlad Savchuk shared how fear is easily trying to creep its way into the church right now, to keep us from speaking up about Christ. However, we are called to preach the gospel no matter what may come our way. This is something we read about in regards to the early church, and we should continue to interact with the world the same way they did back then.

“Fear is the enemy’s weapon to muzzle your mouth,” says Savchuk. “If the enemy cannot destroy the gospel, he will try to silence the messenger. The blood of the martyrs has always been the seed of the church. From the first apostles, to the faithful men and women throughout the history, persecution only spread the message further.”

Just like Stephen, Stone points out that Kirk: “...was a Christian leader who was publicly was in a public gathering of people, a mixed group. Some were supporters and obviously some of them were there to hear him and try to counter his beliefs. So, there were supporters and enemies in the gathering of Stephen and with Charlie Kirk. They came to hear the disputing. They were disputing. They were going to ask questions and go back and forth about religious, political and social Kirk would put people just in their place with wisdom. Not just argument, not debating or disputing, but he had great wisdom in what he said.”

In a short video, Isaiah Saldivar also pointed out that: “This was not a a political assassination. This was martyrdom. His political views were based on scripture.”

He also noted that those who are martyred for their faith according to Scripture will be robed in white. “I have no doubt that Charlie Kirk is wearing a a white robe right now and has heard those words, ‘Well done, good and faithful servant.’”

Best-selling author and prophetic voice Jonathan Cahn is describing his new book, The Avatar, as “one of the most explosive books I’ve ever written.” Far from just another cultural commentary, Cahn says the work pulls back the veil on the invisible realm driving events in politics, culture, and even entertainment.

In an interview with Dinesh D’Souza, Cahn explains Scripture’s clarity on the spiritual dimensions influencing earthly affairs. Cahn seeks to expose that connection – from the attempted assassination of Donald Trump to the chaos unfolding in national elections, to the shocking imagery displayed at the most recent Olympic Games.

Look for Dinesh D’Souza’s powerful new book, The End of Time, coming soon!

Cahn highlights the Olympics opening ceremony, which replaced Christ’s Last Supper with men dressed as women and a pagan god seated in place of Jesus. To him, this is not just artistic expression but a prophetic sign of what happens when a culture that once knew God drives Him out. He ties the revival of pagan imagery to the warnings of philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche and the destructive ideologies that inspired Adolf Hitler and the Third Reich.

“The danger is clear,” Cahn warns. “When God goes out, something else always comes in.”

The Avatar acts as a prophetic book to discern the times, recognize the unseen forces at work and return to the foundation of God's truth.

In a related development, Cahn's best-selling book, The Dragon's Prophecy, is being brought to life by Dinesh D'Souza. The film, set to premiere in select theaters on Oct. 6 and 8, 2025, and stream on SalemNOW starting Oct. 9, delves into the prophetic themes of Cahn's book, exploring the spiritual and geopolitical implications of current events. In today's rapidly shifting cultural and political landscape, prophetic voices Jonathan Cahn and Amanda Grace are revealing a deeper spiritual dimension at work—one rooted in ancient biblical archetypes.

Cahn's new book, The Avatar, discusses these deep spiritual implications. "The overarching theme is a spiritual warfare narrative, where leaders embody archetypes and spiritual forces: Trump as a God-appointed warrior purging anti-biblical powers, Biden and Harris representing apostasy and anti-biblical influences," he says.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

Donald Trump, for instance, is identified with Jehu, a warrior king from Israel's history. "Trump is unpredictable, what he's going to say," Cahn notes. "He was very impulsive, like a wild man... he purges the government of basically people who have anti-biblical values." In contrast, Joe Biden is likened to Jehoram, a king who initially sought what was right but ultimately fell into apostasy. "Jehoram... became an apostate and he turned against all these biblical values. Well, so did Joe Biden,” Cahn explains.

Kamala Harris is framed as Athaliah, Jezebel’s daughter, inheriting anti-biblical agendas. Harris’s life, Cahn suggests, mirrors the mythology of the goddess Kamala, highlighting a spiritual alignment with ancient pagan patterns. “Her middle name is Devi... it means the goddess... she was born as India was celebrating the day of the goddess Kamala.”

The narrative extends beyond mere symbolism to reveal a strategic spiritual battle influencing the nation. “The rise and fall of leaders, their alliances, and their policies are part of a divine pattern that has repeated itself throughout history,” Cahn notes. Each leader, whether knowingly or not, is a vessel for spiritual archetypes—forces either aligned with God or opposing His purposes.

Ultimately, this prophetic perspective transforms the way faith communities view leadership and cultural movements. It serves as both a warning and a call to action: to discern the spiritual forces at work, to intercede in prayer and to align with God's purposes in a nation at a crossroads.
