

The Prophetic Planet Parade Has Arrived: What You Need to Know

Recently, we've seen blood moons, eclipses and spectacular signs in the sky. Now, we are looking at a "planet parade" that will take over the skies for the next few weeks.

According to Forbes, viewers will be able to see this parade of planets two hours prior to sunrise for the next few weeks, and this phenomenon will not be seen again until October 2028. This current planetary show includes Jupiter, Venus, Neptune, Saturn and Uranus. Last month, Mercury was part of this planetary feature, but has since disappeared. Saturn, Jupiter and Venus are the planets that stargazers should be able to see with the naked eye.

As Forbes pointed out, the Jupiter and Venus are the easiest to locate, with Venus in the east and Jupiter in the southeast. Saturn can be found in the southwest. They also noted that "Neptune comes to its annual opposition on Sept. 23, 2025," which falls on Rosh Hashanah.

This unprecedented alignment of planets, coming on the heels of recent blood moons and eclipses, has powerful prophetic implications when viewed through the lens of Scripture. In the Bible, celestial signs often precede significant events on earth, serving as warnings, markers or messages from God or those watching closely, these signs may point to a season of divine activity, calls for repentance or unfolding events in the end times.

Bill Gates Issues Chilling Warning on AI and the Future of Humanity

Microsoft co-founder Bill Gates is giving a chilling prediction about how the growth and expansion of AI could rapidly change the world we live in.

According to CNBC, Gates told Jimmy Fallon in an interview on the Tonight Show earlier this year that humans will not be needed "for most things" with AI's continual progression. He noted that human specialists such as doctors and teachers, will no longer be useful.

“...with AI, over the next decade, that will become free, commonplace – great medical advice, great tutoring,” said Gates.

As CNBC noted, Gates previously discussed with Harvard University professor Arthur Brooks that we are going into a new “free intelligence” period.

“It’s very profound and even a little bit scary,” Gates said. “...it’s happening very quickly, and there is not upper bound.”

From a biblical perspective, these warnings about AI are not just technological predictions but signs that align with what Scripture foretells about the last days. Revelation speaks of a coming system where human life, commerce and even thought will be controlled and monitored (Rev. 13:16–17).

The idea of machines replacing doctors, teachers and human specialists points toward a world where dependence on technology could easily be manipulated into a global system of control—one that prepares the way for the rise of the Antichrist. Daniel also prophesied that in the end times “knowledge shall increase” (), and we are watching this unfold at a pace humanity has never experienced before.

While AI may promise convenience and advancement, believers must recognize the deeper spiritual implications. As we witness these rapid developments, we are reminded of Jesus’ words in Matthew 24 that deception will increase in the last days. The chilling predictions of Gates may well be part of that prophetic picture, urging us to stay watchful, discern the times, and anchor our hope not in technology but in the soon return of Christ.

Pope Leo Canonizes First Millennial Saint as ‘God’s Influencer’

The first ever millennial saint was just canonized by Pope Leo to be “God’s influencer.”

Carlo Acutis, who died at the age of 15 in 2006 due to leukemia, became a saint in the Catholic Church on Sept. 7. According to the Guardian, Acutis spent his life building websites that impacted the world with teachings on the Catholic faith and is credited with performing miracles which occurred after his death.

As Acutis’ mother, Antonia Salzano described, that after his death, people who were gravely ill began to pray to him to be healed. Prior to Pope Francis’ death, he gave Acutis the credit for two miracles, one for a boy that was suffering from a congenital disease that impacted his pancreas and the other for a student who had a brain bleed which led to their mother praying at the tomb of Acutis.

Salzano credits her son's faith for also bringing her to God.

Speaking with Fox News, Salzano says that "Carlo, for me, was a was a mystic."

Salzano has told the outlet that he visited her in a dream and prophetically declared that he would be canonized someday as a saint. She also said that after Acutis died she tried to have more children, but could not. However, Salzano claims that her son visited her in a dream once again and told her, "Listen, you will become, again, a mother. Don't worry." A month after this, Salzano says she became pregnant.

Shockwaves Hit as Vatican Displays Rainbow Crucifix in

Blasphemous LGBTQ Pilgrimage

What has happened to the Vatican?

Over the weekend swarms of Catholics identifying as part of the LGBTQ community took to the Vatican on a pilgrimage as NBC News put it, “celebrating a new level of acceptance in the Catholic Church.”

The group came carrying a rainbow crucifix, in hopes of celebrating the Jubilee of the Catholic Church. As NBC News reported, Bishop Francesco Savino said in his homily to the crowd, “The Jubilee was the time to free the oppressed and restore dignity to those who had been denied it... Brothers and sisters, I say this with emotion: It is time to restore dignity to everyone, especially to those who have been denied it.”

Fox News further reported that over a 1,000 of those celebrating considered the changes to be a sign of welcome for the LGBTQ community.

This may appear to the world as progress, but in reality, it is a dangerous distortion of the truth of God’s Word. Scripture makes it clear that sin cannot be celebrated or rebranded as righteousness. When the church begins to embrace what God has called sin, it ceases to be a light to the nations and instead becomes a stumbling block. No amount of cultural acceptance can change the eternal truth of God’s commands.

The Lord never intended for His people to carry their sin into His house as a banner of pride. Instead, He calls us to lay it down, to repent and to walk in the newness of life that Christ offers. True freedom is not found in affirming our brokenness, but in surrendering it at the foot of the cross. To follow Christ means to deny ourselves, take up our cross and leave behind anything that separates us from Him.

God's ways are higher than our ways, and His thoughts higher than our thoughts. What He has prepared for those who love Him is far greater than anything the world could promise in counterfeit celebrations. The Vatican may attempt to redefine holiness, but the Word of God cannot be rewritten.

Now more than ever, we must cling to the truth of Scripture, guarding our hearts from deception and choosing to walk in the path of righteousness that leads to eternal life.

Did AI Unlock a Spiritual Portal? Man Claims Chatbot Led Him to Perform Pagan Rituals

Most Christians assume that when they die, they go to heaven—and that’s the end of the story. However, as Pastor Vlad Savchuk points out, heaven is real, but it is not our eternal home. Ultimately, for Christians the new earth will be our destination.

The Scriptures reveal multiple layers of heaven. “There is more than one heaven,” Savchuk notes. The first heaven is the sky and atmosphere, where clouds and weather systems exist. The second heaven is the spiritual realm, a place of angelic and demonic activity and spiritual warfare. Finally, the third heaven is where God Himself dwells. Paul describes being “caught up to the third heaven, the paradise,” also referred to as the Father’s house and the “better country.”

Heaven is meant to inspire hope and joy in the present. As Savchuk explains, “Heaven is our future home, but it’s also our present hope.” Thinking about heaven helps Christians endure the trials of life, much like the excitement of anticipating a new home.

When Christians die, they immediately go to be with Christ. Philippians 1:23 records Paul saying, "I am hard-pressed between the two, having a desire to depart... to be with Christ, which is far better." Likewise, 2 Corinthians 5:8 states, "To be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord." Heaven, then, is a temporary stop until the resurrection.

The ultimate eternal destination, however, is the new earth. As Savchuk emphasizes, "The Bible teaches that God will create a new heaven and new earth, and there will be an eternal dwelling place of the redeemed." Revelation 21:1-4 describes the holy city, the New Jerusalem, descending from heaven and God dwelling with His people. The righteous will inherit and reign on the earth forever, while the wicked will be removed.

This understanding reshapes our perspective on life and mission. Heaven is not a place to escape the world, but a preparation for eternal life on a restored earth. "Heaven may be a waiting room, but the new earth is the throne room where God Himself will be with us forever," Savchuk concludes.

By living faithfully and anticipating Christ's return, Christians participate in God's plan for redemption, joy and restoration—not just for ourselves, but for the world He made.

Controversial Nicolas Cage Movie Reimagines Jesus' Life as Horror Story

We live in a world where the life of Jesus is repeatedly mocked time after time.

According to CBR, a teaser trailer recently released for Nicolas Cage's new horror film that depicts the life of Jesus in a terrifying way. The movie, "The Carpenter's Son," is set to release later this year.

The film is reportedly "inspired by the apocryphal Infancy Gospel of Thomas, which purportedly charts the childhood of Jesus Christ," as CBR explains. Cage, who plays a man known as the Carpenter, has set out to protect his family while hiding in Egypt. However, the description of "the Boy" depicts Jesus as a "...rebellious young being drive to doubt his parents' teachings by another child, the Boy begins using his preternatural abilities in ways that have horrifying consequences of both the natural and divine..."

This description points straight to blasphemy.

Jesus, who lived the perfect, sinless life and selfsacrificially gave His life on the cross for the sake of the world is being portrayed in some of the most degrading ways possible through this kind of media depiction. It's a reminder that as believers, we must be discerning about the media we allow into our hearts and minds. Hollywood and much of the entertainment industry have no hesitation in mocking, twisting, and degrading the name of Jesus for profit or shock value.

Even though the world may continue to mock Jesus, we do not have to participate. Instead, we are called to shine as lights in a very dark world, offering the truth, love, and hope of the real Jesus to a culture searching for answers in all the wrong places. The cross was not a horror story—it was the greatest act of love in history. And while Hollywood may try to rewrite His story, we must stand firm, proclaim the truth and live in such a way that the light of Christ cannot be ignored.

Are You Ready? 87 Million Phones Set to Receive 'Armageddon Alarm' Test for Doomsday

Could the end of the world be closer than we think?

For people all around the United Kingdom, this Sunday will mark an unprecedented event: the testing of an “Armageddon alarm” that will be sent out to 87 million phones.

In a video by the Daily Mail, the media organization explains that this test which will be conducted by the U.K.’s government and is supposed to act as a form of preparation for disasters such as extreme flooding, fires or other uncanny circumstances.

The alarm, which is set to go off on Sunday at 3 p.m., will hit all those with 4G and 5G networks, unless the phone is placed in a mode setting that turns off notifications.

Sound spooky enough?

What else is worth noting from the video is that the numbers “666” appears. Whether intentional or not by the Daily Mail, the spiritual connection of 666 related to the mark of the beast and the end times is uncanny when speaking of an “Armageddon” alarm.

While the government frames this test as a matter of safety and preparedness, believers cannot help but see the striking parallels to the warnings in the book of Revelation. Scripture describes a time when global systems will unite under one authority, where control, fear and signs in the heavens will foreshadow the coming of Christ's return.

For Christians, however, the message is not fear but readiness. Jesus Himself declared that when these signs begin to appear, we are to "lift up our heads, for our redemption is drawing near." Revelation assures us that while the world trembles at the thought of doomsday, believers can take hope, knowing the final chapter ends not in destruction, but in victory, with every tear wiped away and eternal life secured in the presence of God.
