

Are We Living in the Book of Revelation? Insights for Today's World

Best-selling author and prophetic voice Jonathan Cahn is calling the church to wake up in these last days.

In an impactful message, Cahn discusses the warnings Jesus gave to the churches of Sardis, Philadelphia, Laodicea and Thyatira, showing how they mirror conditions in today's church.

Speaking of Sardis, Cahn explained that the city once flourished with wealth and trade, yet the church there received one of the sharpest rebukes from the Lord: "I know your deeds, that you have a name and that you are alive, and yet you are dead" (Rev. 3:1). Cahn warned, "This can be said of multitudes of churches, denominations that once were alive but are now dead. They exist in name as if they were alive ... but the heart is gone." He urged believers to "guard the flame" and not simply go through the motions of faith.

Moving to Philadelphia, Cahn pointed out that it was one of only two churches in Revelation that received no correction, only encouragement. Jesus described Himself there as the One who holds the "key of David," meaning ultimate authority. "Though Israel doesn't realize it yet, the one called Jesus possesses the key of David," Cahn said. "Whatever He opens, no one can shut. Whatever He shuts, no one can open." He emphasized that even when evil seems to prevail in the world, Christ's authority remains supreme.

When addressing Laodicea, Cahn described Jesus' sobering words to a church that had grown complacent: "Because you are lukewarm, I will vomit you out of my mouth" (Rev. 3:16). Cahn explained that prosperity and comfort often become spiritual substitutes for passion and hunger for God. "The more you fill yourself up with the world, the less you're going to fill yourself up with spiritual things," he said. "Beware of idols. Beware of comfortableness instead of the Comforter."

Perhaps the strongest warning came when Cahn turned to Thyatira and the mention of "Jezebel." While noting that the Bible does not explicitly speak of a "Jezebel spirit," he acknowledged the manipulative, idolatrous and immoral influence Jezebel represented. "Jezebel is long gone, but spirits don't die," he said. He cautioned believers to avoid demonizing one another but also recognized that the same dark spiritual forces Jezebel embodied—idolatry, immorality and deception—are still at work today.

Ultimately, Cahn's message was both sobering and hopeful. The Book of Revelation reminds the church to repent, overcome and keep its first love alive. "Always be on guard. Always guard the flame," he urged. "Make sure you're not just ending up going through the motions. Get back to the heart in the secret place."

Ché Ahn Commits to Statewide Day of Prayer and Fasting if Elected Governor

Pastor Ché Ahn is making a spiritual promise for the people of California if he is elected governor: A day dedicated to prayer and fasting.

In a campaign rally video, Ahn explains why he is running for governor and how he believes prayer and fasting can change the trajectory of California's path.

"Why I'm running is because I want God to have mercy upon this state," says Ahn. "Unless God intervenes, we're going down. And so, the first thing I'm going to do when I'm governor [is] I'm going to call for a national day of prayer and fasting. I want to call all those who come together, humble ourselves and pray, seek His face..."

For Ahn, this principle of prayer and fasting is related to 2 Chronicles 7:14, which says, "if My people, who are called by My name, will humble themselves and pray, and seek My face and turn from their wicked ways, then I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and will heal their land." Ahn knows that the world won't participate in this call for humility, but he still invites all to join together in seeking God's will for a brighter future in California.

“I believe that this will once again be the best state in the world,” says Ahn.

*I'm running so God would have mercy on California.
On day one, I'll call a statewide day of prayer and fasting.
This isn't politics – it's a cry for revival. ☐☐*

Pastor Ché Ahn's call is a reminder that God's power is available to transform any situation when His people humble themselves, pray, and seek His face. His vision for California reflects a biblical principle: revival and restoration begin with repentance and unity in prayer.

In

Should we heed a spiritual warning from prophetic voice Kim Clement that was spoken years ago?

Back in 2013, Kim Clement felt a stirring in his spirit about the need to pray regarding those who would try to make heinous attacks on others throughout the United States. Now, his daughter, Donn e Clement Petruska, along with Trey Smith, are sharing this weighty word with the world.

“I feel that this search for these ‘terrorists’ will end soon. However, there are lone wolf individuals who are trained to ‘cripple’ various states in the United States of America,” Clement said.

“These states need to be protected,” he continued. “Their ‘souls’ need to be protected. Their enemies are determined and motivated. And then I heard the name, ‘Paul.’ I was led to pray for various states and the South was a concern. Let’s join together and pray for exposure. For God to expose the individuals who are plotting an attack in the South, the mountains and against the innocent.”

Clement felt that there was a cult tied to these wicked plots, and that with God’s intervention, we could see a Saul-to-Paul moment play out in front of us.

“There is a cult that is ready to do anything to destroy our faith. They will be exposed. But will it be too late? We need to pray that God intervenes as He did with Saul of Tarsus,” he said.

In another prophecy from that same year, Clement recognized that there were enemies awaiting to see the destruction of America. However, the God of Moses and Elijah would be there to protect them even in the very worst of moments.

“It is the Lord Jesus Christ,” Clement said. “I will protect you, and I will fight for you Myself, says the Spirit of God. Once again, there will be singing in your hearts, in your homes. Salvation shall come to you, America the Great, says the Lord.”

Clement also warned that day about the wolves in sheep's clothing who were lurking around, encouraging believers to “pray together” against their attacks.

Even in the face of darkness, Kim Clement reminded believers that God is never caught off guard by the schemes of the enemy. Just as Saul was transformed into Paul, the Lord can take even the most hardened hearts and turn them for His glory. What the enemy intends for evil, God can use to bring about salvation, revival, and a greater revelation of His power.

As we discern the times, the call is not to fear, but to pray with faith—trusting that the same God who fought for Israel will fight for His people today, turning every plan of destruction into an opportunity for His light to break through.

After US-Russia Summit, Trump to Hold Key Meeting With Zelenskyy

After President Trump met with Vladimir Putin on Friday in Alaska without coming to a peace ceasefire deal, Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelenskyy is now coming to the United States to meet with the president.

According to Fox News, later today Zelenskyy will discuss the land area of Kyiv with Trump as tensions between Russia and Ukraine continue to cause havoc. While Zelenskyy's last meeting with President Trump and Vice President J.D. Vance intensified, it is his hope that this one will be fruitful.

During an European Union Commission on Sunday, Zelenskyy said that "The constitution of Ukraine makes it impossible to give up territory or trade land."

Even in the face of such obstacles, Trump is pressing forward in what many have called his effort to be a "peace president." Time and again, he has emphasized his desire to bring calm and resolution among nations gripped by war. For believers, this pursuit echoes biblical principles of peacemaking.

In the prophetic realm, some see even greater significance unfolding. As Trump engages world leaders on the global stage, prophetic voice, Amanda Grace, pointed to Alaska the location of the summit—as a spiritual signpost.

Pastor Jack Hibbs has raised serious concerns about California Assembly Bill 495, calling it “the most dangerous bill we’ve ever seen.” Right now, he is urging parents to take action to protect their children. Speaking with CBN News, Hibbs explained that the bill poses unprecedented risks to parental authority and child safety.

According to Hibbs, AB-495 allows individuals to gain temporary custody of a child simply by presenting an affidavit to the school. “All they need to know is the name of a child,” Hibbs said. The affidavit does not require the individual to provide identification, background checks or proof of relation to the child. Once the affidavit is presented, school authorities are legally obligated to hand over the child, regardless of parental consent. The designated individual also gains the authority to make medical decisions for the child, including authorization for treatment, further escalating the risks.

Hibbs described the bill as being written under the guise of compassion, claiming it protects children from situations involving ICE or immigration enforcement. “The author says it’s to protect children from ICE and from Trump’s immigration efforts,” Hibbs said.

However, he emphasized that the vague language of the bill makes it extremely dangerous, opening the door for potential exploitation. “There are no details except it is a pedophile and human trafficker’s dream come true,” Hibbs warned.

Hibbs also highlighted that the bill's implications extend beyond public schools. "Somebody could come into a daycare, a private school or even a Christian school and attempt to extract your child," he said. While private institutions may legally challenge such attempts, the initial risk is alarming. Hibbs and his attorneys noted that the law's ambiguity places parents in a precarious position, potentially making it difficult to locate a child once taken.

Hibbs encouraged Californians to take action immediately. With a supermajority Democratic control in the state, bills like AB-495 can pass without a public vote. To mobilize opposition, Hibbs and his team are organizing a rally at the state Capitol in Sacramento on Tuesday, August 19, 2025. "We want a minimum of 5,000 people to show up," he said.

The goal is to demonstrate visible opposition, potentially influencing Governor Gavin Newsom, who has presidential aspirations in 2028, to reconsider signing the bill.

Hibbs further expressed his hope that residents would not have to leave California due to the dangerous legislation. "It would be a shame if families had to uproot because of a law like this," he said.

California parents are urged to stay informed, get involved and make their voices heard. AB-495 represents a pivotal moment for parental rights and child safety, and Hibbs is calling on citizens to act decisively before the bill becomes law.
