

Is This the Last Sign? Transhumanism, Nephilim and the Final End-Time Deception

In an eye-opening message, Kap Chatfield explores the chilling possibility that transhumanism could be the final deception foretold in Bible prophecy.

With the rise of artificial intelligence, brain implants and bio-enhanced humans, Chatfield warns that what many hail as technological miracles may, in fact, be spiritual traps designed to sever mankind from its Creator.

At the heart of the message is Daniel's prophecy of the statue made of different materials, ending with feet of iron mixed with clay. Chatfield suggests this symbolizes the unnatural fusion of technology (iron) with humanity (clay). "They will mingle with the seed of men, but they will not adhere to one another," Daniel wrote. This verse, Chatfield says, could reflect today's effort to merge humans with machines—what some call the next phase of evolution, and what the Bible may be warning against.

Technology like Elon Musk's Neuralink is already making headlines, enabling paralyzed individuals to control devices with their minds. While these advancements seem like miracles, Chatfield urges believers to exercise spiritual discernment. "Just because something seems helpful or 'good' doesn't mean it's godly," he warns. Citing 2 Thessalonians 2:9, Chatfield notes how Satan comes "with all power, signs and lying wonders," mimicking God's miracles to deceive even the elect.

He also draws attention to a Microsoft patent—W02020/060606—that links biometric data with financial rewards. Though not the mark of the beast, Chatfield believes it's a prototype for how the Antichrist system could enforce control. "It's the infrastructure for economic allegiance," he says, tying it to Revelation 13, which describes a time when no one can buy or sell unless they bear the mark.

Chatfield also references Peter Thiel, a vocal proponent of transhumanism, who has questioned whether humanity even deserves to survive. Thiel has invested heavily in technologies aimed at extending life and altering the human experience. But to Chatfield, this signals a deeper issue: an attempt to "transform not just the body, but the soul," echoing the serpent's lie in the garden—that man can be like God.

One of the most sobering comparisons Chatfield makes is to Genesis 6, where fallen angels corrupted human genetics by creating the Nephilim. "What was happening in the days of Noah is happening again," says Chatfield. Just as God brought judgment for hybridizing His creation, the final judgment may come when humanity once again loses its original form.

Yet there is hope. Daniel's vision ends with a stone, "cut without hands," striking the statue and destroying it. That stone is Christ. "Jesus is coming back," Chatfield declares, "and He's going to destroy the final kingdom that tries to make itself god.”

The warning is clear: The future isn't just about data and machines—it's a spiritual battleground for the image of God. “You can't be redeemed if you reject your humanity,” Chatfield says. Only those who remain in the image of God will be part of His eternal kingdom.

Antichrist System Is Rising: What Every Believer Must Know

As technological advances continue to accelerate, many believers are asking: What role will artificial intelligence and global systems play in the end times?

According to a recent message by James Kaddis, the answer is clear and urgent: the infrastructure of the Antichrist is already being built—and Christians must stay spiritually awake.

“This infrastructure for the Antichrist is being built right now,” Kaddis warns. Drawing from Revelation 13 and 2 Thessalonians 2, Kaddis outlines how global control mechanisms are quietly being set into place under the guise of convenience and protection.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

Central to this system is artificial intelligence. Kaddis doesn't deny AI's usefulness but emphasizes the potential for abuse. "The things that were put in place, whether you know it or not, during COVID were dry runs," he says, pointing to tracking systems, vaccine passports and speech regulation. "These are the tools that will be used by the Antichrist to control the world."

Order James Lasher's Newest Book, The Revelation of Jesus on !

A particular focus is given to digital currency and biometric identification systems. "You can't buy or sell unless you meet certain criteria," Kaddis states, echoing Revelation 13:17. The concern is that these systems, once implemented globally, will give authorities the ability to shut off access to food, travel or financial services for those who do not comply with their mandates.

Kaddis' warning is not merely political—it's spiritual. He highlights the power of the Holy Spirit through the church as the only thing holding back the full manifestation of evil. Citing 2 Thessalonians 2:6, Kaddis reminds listeners, "And now you know what is restraining, that he may be revealed in his own time."

He also calls attention to a growing ecumenical movement that seeks to unify religions under one banner, something he believes will play directly into the hands of the coming False Prophet. While the world clamors for unity and tolerance, Kaddis cautions that this movement "has the language of peace, but the agenda of deception."

Yet amid the sobering warnings, Kaddis' message remains anchored in hope. “We’re not looking for the Antichrist—we’re looking for Jesus Christ,” he declares. The urgency, then, is not fear but preparation. Believers are encouraged to be discerning, rooted in Scripture and ready for Christ’s return.

Kaddis concludes with a call to spiritual vigilance and a rejection of compromise: “When the church is removed, the man of sin will be revealed. But until then, we are that restraining force.”

In a time when headlines are filled with technological breakthroughs, digital controls and calls for global unity, this prophetic message serves as a sobering reminder: the Bible’s warnings are not distant—they are unfolding in real time. And for those who belong to Christ, it’s a wake-up call to walk in holiness, boldness and unwavering faith.

Why Jeremiah 29:11 Is a Prophetic Promise for the Nation of Israel

Jeremiah 29:11 is perhaps one of the most famously quoted Scriptures in the entirety of the bible: “‘For I know the plans I have for you,’ declares the Lord...” But according to Pastor Mike Signorelli, we’ve been reading this verse completely wrong.

In a recent teaching, Signorelli offers a hard but necessary correction to how many Christians—especially in America—have interpreted this beloved verse.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

“Let’s bring it back to context,” Signorelli says. “What we’re often guilty of in Christianity is deleting the context and taking a prophecy for the nation of Israel and making it personal to ourselves.” He explains that Jeremiah 29:11 was spoken by God through the prophet Jeremiah to a very specific audience: the Israelites in Babylonian exile. It was not a promise of immediate personal blessing, but a prophetic assurance that after 70 years of captivity, God would restore the nation.

Order James Lasher’s Newest Book, The Revelation of Jesus on !

Rather than being about quick, individual prosperity, the verse points to God’s long-term faithfulness to His people—even in seasons of suffering. “This was not about 2020s American Christians getting a new job or house,” Signorelli warns. “It was about a collective hope for a nation in crisis.”

So where does that leave believers today? “Although the promise is not for us,” Signorelli affirms, “the principle is for us.” The heart of God revealed in Jeremiah 29:11 is still relevant—it shows a God who has redemptive plans for His people, even in their darkest seasons. But the verse must be interpreted through a “we over me” lens.

American Christianity, with its strong emphasis on individualism, often turns collective promises into personal motivational slogans. Signorelli challenges this thinking. “Even Jesus taught us to pray using plural language—‘Our Father,’ ‘Give us this day,’ ‘Deliver us from evil.’” The Christian life, he insists, is not meant to be lived in isolation but in unity with God’s people.

The question then becomes: What does it really mean to prosper? By modern standards, prosperity looks like wealth, ease and success. But by biblical standards, it looks like obedience, endurance and faithfulness. “All the apostles except one were martyred,” Signorelli points out. “By our standards, that’s not prosperity. But they were rich in what mattered most—eternal life, fulfilled purpose and gospel impact.”

He concludes with this powerful statement: “True prosperity is fulfilling the Great Commission. Souls are true riches. If my whole family is saved, I’m rich.”

Jeremiah 29:11 is not a feel-good promise of instant success, but a powerful reminder of God’s faithfulness to His people in the midst of suffering. When read in context, it challenges us to shift from an individualistic view of faith to a collective one, trusting that God’s ultimate plan is not just to prosper me, but to redeem us. True prosperity isn’t comfort or wealth—it’s fulfilling God’s mission, together.

Amanda Grace: God Will Expose Deeds of Obama and Elites

A sobering prophetic message from Amanda Grace has surfaced, warning of divine judgment against those who have engaged in secretive alliances and corrupt actions at Martha's Vineyard.

Grace's word begins with a solemn declaration: "It shall, and will in a moment be taken from them," suggesting a sudden stripping away of power, influence or protection from those who have plotted behind closed doors.

Grace's prophecy specifically references "those who plotted at Martha's Vineyard," stating they "shall pay a heavy price this year for their deeds." Interestingly, the word "deeds" was first spelled "deads," a potentially intentional slip that highlights the severity and possibly deadly consequences of the actions being judged. This chilling nuance adds weight to the warning that what was done in darkness will not only be exposed, but judged publicly.

The prophecy continues with a vivid image: "They shall be paraded out before the people." This suggests a coming moment of public revelation and humiliation for those involved, where their hidden agendas and alliances will be made known. According to the word, the opportunity to repent and turn from "foreign gods" and "agreements with haters of My children" was given, but not heeded.

A direct rebuke is issued to Barack Obama in the prophecy: “Barack, you did not heed.” Grace’s word then expands its scope to include “those in the highest offices,” indicating that this judgment is not reserved for one individual but extends to an elite network of leaders who have aligned themselves with forces opposed to God’s purposes and people.

One of the more symbolic statements in the prophecy refers to a “garland around their neck.” In many cultural and biblical contexts, a garland represents celebration, honor or reward. However, this message reverses that meaning entirely: “A garland around their neck shall not be a gift, but it is a woe, says the Lord.” What was meant to honor will instead become a symbol of sorrow, perhaps even bondage or divine judgment. It is a stark reminder that what the world may view as success or prestige may, in the eyes of God, be a sign of impending reckoning.

Ultimately, Grace’s prophetic message issues a call to repentance, a warning of exposure and a reminder that God sees what is done in secret. It’s a stark call for leaders—and the nation at large—to return to righteousness and truth before divine judgment is fully unleashed.

Why Israel Matters for God's End-Time Plans

It's the question that keeps coming up within Christian circles today: Should believers support the nation of Israel?

In a recent livestream of Discovering the Jewish Jesus, executive producer and outreach minister Dustin Roberts explained the biblical precedence for Christians to stand behind Israel today.

"The answer has very serious, prophetic implications for the church today," says Roberts.

Pointing out that Israel has been a major part of the news cycle ever since the Oct. 7, 2023 attacks by Hamas, Roberts believes that these signs are "preludes" to the end times battles that Scripture prophesies about.

Pointing to Genesis 12:2-3 where God promises to bless those who bless Abraham and curse those who curse him, Roberts says that this verse goes far beyond just Abraham himself, but to his descendants as well, even to this day.

"It was absolutely passed down to Israel," says Roberts. "The New Covenant doesn't invalidate previous is going to fulfill everything in the Bible that He wrote about Israel."

Further, Roberts calls out replacement theology, which believes that the church today has replaced Israel as God's chosen people.

"Israel and the church have distinct biblical prophecies that need to take place as God fulfills His plan in the earth," Roberts says.

From the promises made to Abraham to the prophetic fulfillment still to come, Israel remains a central piece in God's redemptive plan. For Christians, standing with Israel isn't about choosing sides in a geopolitical conflict; it's about recognizing God's covenantal faithfulness and preparing for what lies ahead.

Why Grace Is the Most Underrated Weapon in the Christian Life

In a powerful message titled "Grace Is the Weapon You Forgot You Had," Vlad Savchuk unpacks the transformative force of God's grace—not just as a theological concept, but as a daily weapon for victory, perseverance and freedom.

Savchuk's sermon begins with a foundation in Ephesians 2:8–9, which declares, "It is by grace you have been saved, through faith—and this not from yourselves, it is the gift of God—not by works, so that no one can boast.” This is a reminder that grace is not earned or deserved, but received through faith.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

To illustrate the uniqueness of grace in Christianity, Savchuk paints a vivid contrast with other world religions. In Islam, one must earn paradise through good works. In Hinduism and Buddhism, karma and detachment determine one’s path. Judaism focuses on obeying the Law, and New Age thought tells people they are already divine. Atheism, he says, offers no real hope at all. But in Christianity, Jesus doesn’t just offer a ladder out of the pit—He climbs into the pit with us and lifts us out by His own strength. That, Savchuk says, is grace in action.

To order Vlad Savchuk’s new book, Make the Devil Homeless, visit .

To clarify the concept further, Savchuk defines justice, mercy and grace using a simple illustration: imagine rear-ending someone’s car. Justice means paying for the damage. Mercy means they let you off the hook. Grace means they pay for your car too, fill your tank and take you out for dinner. Grace goes beyond forgiveness—it lavishes favor.

Get your FREE CHARISMA NEWSLETTERS today! Stay up to date with current issues, Holy Spirit news, Christian teachings, Charisma videos & more!

Grace doesn’t stop at salvation. As Titus 2:11–12 explains, grace also “teaches us to say ‘no’ to ungodliness.” Savchuk reminds listeners that grace isn’t a license to sin, nor is it a rigid system of performance. Rather, it is God’s supernatural empowerment to live a transformed life.

He then confronts three common misconceptions about grace. First, that grace is a pass to keep sinning. Second, that we must earn our way back into God's favor after we're saved. And third, that grace means we never have to grow. Using the analogy of a child learning to walk, he shows that grace is what picks us up when we fall and teaches us how to walk in maturity.

Join Charisma Magazine Online to follow everything the Holy Spirit is doing around the world!

One of the most striking moments in Savchuk's message comes from Zechariah 4:7, where the people shout, "Grace! Grace to it!" to a mountain. This, he says, is how we overcome obstacles—not by striving, but by proclaiming God's grace over what stands in our way. Whether you're trying to finish school, start a ministry or break free from a stronghold, grace is the force that moves mountains.

Savchuk closes by urging listeners to drop their pride, which blocks grace, and instead embrace humility—because grace always flows to the lowest place. "Stop carrying the world on your shoulders," he says. "Shout to your mountain: 'Grace! Grace to it!'"

Savchuk's profound message is a reminder that grace is not only God's unearned favor—it's your greatest weapon.

Warning to the Church: Gossip is Quenching the Fire of the Holy Spirit

Gossip is a sin that often hides in plain sight, yet it is one of the most damaging forces within the church today. As Proverbs 18:21 warns, “Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and those who love it will eat its fruit.” Words carry power, and gossip wields this power to divide, hurt and destroy, often without visible evidence until it’s too late.

As Richard Lorenzo Jr. notes, while some sins are obvious, like anger or fornication, gossip can sound innocent but leaves deep wounds behind the scenes. The spiritual root of gossip is particularly serious – Lorenzo points out that the Greek word for slanderer is diabolos, “the very same root word used for the devil.” This reveals that gossip is more than just talk; it is collaboration with the enemy’s kingdom.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

The damage of gossip extends far beyond broken relationships. James 3:6 describes the tongue as “a fire, a world of iniquity... set on fire by hell.” Gossip spreads like wildfire, assassinating reputations without any confrontation and fostering suspicion without evidence. Ministries and friendships have been splintered through unchecked gossip, and many people are wounded not by demons, but “by the unbridled mouth of believers,” Lorenzo says.

To order Richard Lorenzo Jr.’s new book, What’s the Purpose of Life?, visit .

The Bible provides clear instructions on how to deal with sin in the church. Lorenzo explains that Matthew 18:15-17 emphasizes if you see a brother or sister sinning, you should “go up to them one-on-one.” Public rebuke, especially online, is not supported by Scripture. Unfortunately, internet culture encourages viral videos and public accusations that often spread division rather than healing.

Gossip also exposes what is in our hearts. Lorenzo quotes Luke 6:45: "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks." Bitterness, jealousy, insecurity and unresolved offense all fuel gossip. Often, it reflects more about our own inner wounds than the person we speak about.

Get your FREE CHARISMA NEWSLETTERS today! Stay up to date with current issues, Holy Spirit news, Christian teachings, Charisma videos & more!

The culture of gossip breeds fear and suspicion, making people reluctant to be vulnerable. Those who talk about others frequently lose trust. As Lorenzo further says, this breaks down unity and replaces love with offense and suspicion, "creating a culture where people are afraid to be vulnerable."

But there is a powerful remedy. Lorenzo cites Proverbs 26:20: "Where there is no wood, the fire goes out; and where there is no talebearer, strife ceases." The fire of gossip goes out when Christians refuse to participate. Lorenzo advises that when the temptation to speak negatively arises, we must "shut our mouth and walk away," praying instead and choosing to "speak life over them."

Join Charisma Magazine Online to follow everything the Holy Spirit is doing around the world!

Let this be a wake-up call: the words we speak either build up or tear down. As Lorenzo says, we must "nip gossip in the bud" and commit to nurturing an atmosphere where love reigns, and God's kingdom is spread to all creation.

Prophetic Dream Reveals Why 2025 Could Be the Year Trump Helps Usher in the Third Temple

Could we be witnessing the beginning of the fulfillment of ancient prophecy in our lifetime?

In a recent interview with Alan DiDio, David Herzog shared a vivid prophetic dream that he says points to a coming announcement about the rebuilding of the third temple in Jerusalem—and that President Donald Trump may play a surprising role.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

“In the dream, I’m talking to President Donald Trump,” Herzog revealed. “I said, ‘Mr. Trump, Mr. President, are you doing something behind the scenes to help pave the way for Israel to build their third temple?’ And he looked at me super shocked.. and he said, ‘Yes, I am.’”

That encounter wasn’t just symbolic. Herzog says he later contacted a trusted high-level government source—someone who once worked closely with Klaus Schwab on the great reset—and the insider confirmed the dream’s accuracy: “They are planning on announcing it this year from the White House—something about the third temple,” Herzog said.

According to Herzog, this announcement won’t necessarily mean construction begins right away. But it will set the wheels in motion. "It won't be finished till sometime between 2030 and 2032," he added. "So it won't be during Trump's time, but he would be used and announce that—yeah, they can do this."

Order James Lasher's Newest Book, The Revelation of Jesus on !

Herzog pointed to Ezekiel 42:20 as a biblical clue that the third temple may not require the destruction of the Al-Aqsa Mosque. "It had a wall around about it... and it had a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place," he said. "They're actually building a wall right now... something is up."

This prophetic moment may also tie into a broader spiritual pattern Herzog has observed. "Every time there's a war with Israel and Israel takes back land, the church takes back land spiritually," he explained. From the 1948 rebirth of Israel and the 1950s healing revival, to the Six-Day War and the Jesus Movement, Herzog believes revival and conflict go hand-in-hand. "Look at all the land Israel is taking back now. That means a huge move of God's coming on the church."

He also warned that what's coming in the fall of 2025 could bring both glory and shaking. "I think we're going to come into such chaotic times... chaos and revival at the same time," he said, referencing an Acts four level of glory where "no one laid hands on anybody... blind eyes [are] opening up... mass salvations."

As reports emerge of red heifer sacrifices and the fully prepared Temple Institute in Jerusalem, Herzog says the message is clear: "These are signs to get us encouraged that the Lord's coming back soon—but get to work... do God's will."

Join Charisma Magazine Online to follow everything the Holy Spirit is doing around the world!

For those growing weary in the swirl of prophecy, Herzog has one reminder: “Don’t suffer from prophecy fatigue. Connect each prophetic word to the Word of God that you’re personally studying... so that you hear the word of the Lord for you.”

Perry Stone Reveals Hidden Battles Ministries Face

Perry Stone isn’t shying away from the growing criticism aimed at ministers and churches. In a recent message, the prophetic evangelist addressed the confusion, controversy and disappointment many Christians feel toward modern ministry—and why believers need to look deeper.

“I had someone tell me, ‘Perry, ministry should not look like this.’ And I had to agree,” Stone began. He acknowledged that with so many negative headlines involving churches, ministers or doctrinal debates, it’s understandable why some believers are confused or disillusioned. But according to Stone, what’s happening today is not new—it’s biblical.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

“Matthew 13:47–48, the parable of the good fish and the bad fish,” he explained. “All the fish are in the same net, but then there is a separation.”

Using these illustrations, Stone pointed out that the kingdom has always included both the genuine and the false—and that separation comes in God’s timing, not man’s. “People talk about, ‘I don’t go to church because there’s division...’ From the very beginning of the church, it involved people... and anytime you’ve got sheep, you’re going to have manure. Anytime you’ve got goats, you’re going to have manure.”

He also reminded listeners that the early church dealt with major conflict. “They played the favorite preacher game... There was a division over should a Gentile be forced to be circumcised... an argument over meat sacrificed to idols... a division over women and their operating of gifts inside the church.”

“These conflicts don’t affect mature Christians... What they do is they affect baby Christians,” he added, warning that confusion often leads young believers astray.

Stone also spoke personally about the hidden struggles of ministry: “I have been away from my family at major dates... you carry the financial weight of the ministry [and] the demonic pressure when you’re tapping into nations, the principalities and the powers...”

Still, Stone says the reward is worth it. “This is why I do what I do... to be able to feel the presence of God in ministry... the testimonies... from prisoners and the overseas people, the people from Israel, the people from Indonesia who have come to know the Lord.”

Stone ended with a strong word of advice: “Don’t be judging every ministry by some things that have happened negatively...

Keep the prize on your mind. Keep Jesus as the author and the finisher of your faith... He is there and He's going to always be with you if you'll trust Him."

In a world where ministry can often be misunderstood, misjudged or even attacked, Perry Stone reminds us that division and controversy are nothing new to the body of Christ—they've existed since the earliest days of the church. Yet amid the noise, confusion and spiritual battles, one truth remains: we must fix our eyes on Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith.
