

Trump and the Prophetic Pattern: Perry Stone Reveals Biblical Clues

Amid the growing political turbulence and protests across America, Perry Stone is revisiting a prophetic narrative that ties President Donald Trump to the only U.S. leader to serve two non-consecutive terms: Grover Cleveland. Stone recounted an article and teaching he released years ago which drew from the biblical account of Nebuchadnezzar in the book of Daniel and suggested Trump could return to office.

“When President Trump lost the election,” Stone said, “I based the article on the story of King Nebuchadnezzar, where the tree was cut down but the stump remained in the earth... and God restored him back to the throne.”

The Temple Mount in Jerusalem stands at the heart of a centuries-long spiritual conflict—one that continues to intensify in modern times.

According to Messianic Rabbi and Bible prophecy expert Jonathan Cahn, this sacred site is not only the focal point of God’s purposes on earth but also the primary target of the enemy’s schemes.

“Jerusalem is the place that God chose for His name to dwell,” Cahn said. “It’s the focal point of God’s purposes on Earth, and because of that, it will also become the focal point of the enemy.”

Citing Deuteronomy 12 and Isaiah 2, Cahn notes that the Temple Mount is central to both biblical history and end-time prophecy. It is the site where Messiah will reign, and where, according to Revelation 11, worship will once again take place in a rebuilt temple. "The temple is the center—the ground zero—of end-time prophecy," Cahn explained. "If it is the central site of God's purposes, then it's going to be the central site of the enemy's battle."

That battle has manifested not only in spiritual dimensions but also in geopolitical events. From the destruction of the Second Temple in A.D. 70 to modern-day tensions between Jews and Muslims over access to the mount, the enemy's strategy has remained consistent: to block God's promises before they can be fulfilled.

"What the enemy has been trying to do in your life against you actually testifies what God wants to do for you," Cahn said. "The very attacks on your life—the very things he attacks—is a giveaway. It reveals that God wants to do something in your life."

Following the Oct. 7, 2023, terrorist attacks in Israel, Hamas leaders cited Jewish activity on the Temple Mount as a catalyst. In fact, the presence of the red heifers—which are prophetically tied to temple purification—are seen by Hamas terrorists as a "detestable religious myth."

Cahn points out that the enemy's outrage over Jewish worship on the mount reveals a deeper truth. "Who would call the holy days of God a desecration that defiles the holy place of God? The devil would. He twists everything upside down.”

He draws a direct line from the enemy’s obsession with the Temple Mount to the spiritual battles believers face in their personal lives. “The Temple Mount reveals to your life the strategy of the enemy—not only concerning God’s purposes for Jerusalem and the world, but God’s purposes for your life.”

Citing Zechariah 4:7, Cahn encourages believers not to be discouraged by the obstacles they face. “What are you, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel, you will become a plain,” he said, quoting the prophet. “You will complete the calling that He has given you—not by might, not by power, but by the Spirit of God.”

As the battle over the Temple Mount escalates, Cahn warns that it is a sign the world is drawing closer to the fulfillment of end-time prophecy. “It’s like the devil giving away something—that it’s getting closer, so he’s getting more panicky.”

Despite opposition, Cahn remains confident that God’s plans will not be stopped. “God’s purposes are going to be fulfilled,” he said. “And the obstacles that stand in the way will fall.”

As tensions rise and prophetic signs converge, it becomes increasingly clear that what happens on that sacred ground echoes across the world and into the lives of believers. Just as the enemy fights to claim the mountain of the Lord, he wages war against the destinies of individuals called to walk in God’s purpose. But no matter how fierce the resistance, the outcome is assured: God’s plans will prevail, His temple will be restored, and His purposes will be fulfilled—in Jerusalem and in the lives of His people.

John Eckhardt: This One Principle Is Unlocking Breakthroughs Nationwide

As the world watches conflict happening in the Middle East, questions about biblical prophecy are resurfacing—particularly concerning the fate of Damascus, one of the world’s oldest continuously inhabited cities.

In a newly released by Living Waters’ Ray Comfort, the evangelist explores how current events may be echoing ancient prophetic warnings.

Central to Comfort’s discussion is a chilling prophecy from the book of Isaiah, written around 700 B.C.: “Behold, Damascus will cease from being a city and will become a ruinous heap” (Isa. 17:1). While parts of Damascus have suffered extensive destruction from years of war and regime-led sieges, it has never fully ceased to exist as a city. Unlike cities such as Berlin, which rebounded from near-total devastation in World War II, Damascus remains broken and unreconstructed, burdened by economic collapse and political corruption.

Comfort suggests that a nuclear event in Damascus could bring this prophecy to total fulfillment—which would act as a significant marker of the last days. He also urges Christians to keep watch not only on Damascus but also on Jerusalem, which continues to play a central role in end-time prophecy.

Comfort emphasizes that in this middle of crisis, humanity's greatest need is not political resolution but spiritual salvation. He explains the gospel message simply: all people have sinned, broken God's Law and are under judgment. But through repentance and faith in Jesus—who lived without sin, died for the sins of the world and rose from the dead—anyone can receive eternal life.

Finally, he also gives a profound reminder for the end times from 1 Thessalonians 5:3: "For when they shall say, 'Peace and safety'; then sudden destruction cometh upon them." As calls for peace grow louder amid escalating global tensions, Comfort warns that false security could lull many into spiritual complacency.

As global tensions escalate and ancient cities like Damascus sit on the edge of prophetic fulfillment, the urgency to discern the times has never been greater. Whether through geopolitical upheaval or personal conversations about faith, the signs are mounting. In the face of uncertainty, the most critical response isn't fear—but spiritual readiness.

Greg Laurie: Can America Flourish Without Israel?

Perhaps there is something more to conflict with Iran than what meets on the surface.

For believers who are watching growing conflict taking place with Iran through the lens of Scripture, this may be more than just another geopolitical development—it could be a turning point in the prophetic calendar.

In a recent video by Max Lucado, he urged viewers to look at what is happening through the focus of biblical prophecy.

“Like many of you, I’m watching with keen interest as history takes a major turn,” Lucado begins, recognizing that this is not a moment to be overlooked.

As Lucado notes, ever since the rebirth of Israel in 1948, prophecy scholars have watched closely as world events seem to align more and more with what the Bible describes about the end of the age. The regathering of the Jewish people was not just a historic event—it was a prophetic marker, a “watershed event” that set in motion a series of end-times developments foretold in Scripture.

To be clear, Lucado asserts that no one knows the day or hour of Christ's return—not even the angels in heaven. As Jesus said in Matthew 24:36, that knowledge belongs only to the Father. Still, Scripture encourages believers to discern the signs of the times. And among those signs are increasing tensions involving key nations mentioned in end-times prophecy, including Turkey, Russia and Iran.

“It certainly seems that the key players in the final divine drama are taking their places on the stage,” Lucado continues. And in light of that, Christians are faced with a choice: to respond with fear or with faith.

While the eyes of fear focus on instability and uncertainty, the eyes of faith see God's sovereign hand guiding history toward a promised future. “God tells us what to expect—not to scare us, but to prepare us,” Lucado encourages. Much like a seasoned pilot informing passengers of turbulence ahead, our Heavenly Father is preparing His people for what is coming.

The days ahead may bring difficulty, but they also bring opportunity—for prayer, for hope and for holy anticipation. “Let's be numbered among those who are looking toward the heavens, inviting our Savior to return,” Lucado exhorts. At the same time, we are called to be the aroma of Christ, to shine brightly in a darkening world.

Lucado's message invites all believers to pray and hold onto hope for the ultimate Second Coming of Christ. “We do not know what lies ahead, but we do know that our sovereign Lord holds the world in His hands.”

Prophetic Word: God Has Positioned Trump and Netanyahu for This Critical Hour

In a striking message by prophetic voice Joseph Z, he gave viewers a sobering word to pray into: the possibility of sleeper cell attacks in retaliation from Iran after the U.S. strike on their nuclear facilities.

Z recounted a prophetic word he had from Sept. 16, 2023, which declared that “Israel would march on their enemies.” That word came three weeks before October 7, when Hamas launched its infamous attacks—triggering a cascade of military escalation. Now, following a decisive U.S. strike on Iran, the prophecy has once again proven timely.

But the warning doesn’t stop there.

According to Z, retaliation is already being set in motion, not necessarily through conventional warfare, but through what he called “the rise of sleeper cells” within America. “They’re going to try to make problems in America in an unprecedented way,” he warned.

Alongside this warning came a vivid dream—a graph symbolizing a storm of difficulty, followed by a breakthrough and the emergence of a “New America.” Z declared, “We are now going to see the fulfillment of this storm. But on the other side—I saw the words 'The New America.'"

This shift will not be without pain. The vision included people being lifted and dropped, sand falling and disruptions across the heartland. Yet in the midst of this chaos, the Lord spoke to him: "The name of the Lord is a strong tower; the righteous run into it and are safe."

Z's message connected the chaos to a broader four-year cycle of redemptive instability, a time in which God is calling His people to "keep striking the ground" in prayer and intercession. He specifically referenced spiritual warfare against the Babylonian system—a demonic infrastructure influencing culture, politics and finance.

A symbolic phrase—"Decapus," meaning 10 burning cities—surfaced again in his vision, representing the enemy's agenda for destruction. But, Z prayed against that, stating, "We bind that in Jesus' name."

More urgency emerged in a nuclear flash vision. Z heard, "The church—the ecclesia—is the nuclear deterrent." He stressed that if the church continues praying and pushing, nuclear incidents can still be averted.

As the world stands at a crossroads marked by conflict, uncertainty and shifting power, this prophetic word calls believers to unwavering faith and persistent prayer. Though storms of chaos and retaliation loom on the horizon, there is a divine promise of protection and renewal for those who seek refuge in God. Now more than ever, the church must stand as a beacon of hope, interceding boldly to shape the future and usher in breakthrough in these turbulent times.
