“You’re going to see things you never saw,” Cahn said. “It’s a full book with all the mysteries of the harbingers—the sycamore tree, the tower, the utterance, the gazit stone, the Shemitah, the mystery ground—everything.”

It is Cahn’s hope that this will be a new and powerful outreach tool to reach a new audience with the message of Christ. “You’re going to be able to reach unbelievers in your life who wouldn’t read a book. They’re going to read this,” he said.

Do you ever feel completely alone in a room full of people?

In a recent sermon, Pastor Mike Signorelli of V1 Church confronted the epidemic of loneliness that plagues even the most socially active individuals. “For all of you who struggle with loneliness even in a room full of people... Welcome to the club,” he says. “Matter of fact, I think what would happen ideally is we would get so close as a church that you don’t even have to mask anymore.”

Signorelli emphasizes that many people instinctively isolate when they should be doing the opposite. “We isolate when we need to congregate,” he says.

For Signorelli, the church has been a healing force. “Even though church can be an introvert’s nightmare, to be honest with you, this has been the single greatest force of healing in my entire life.”

Drawing from his own experience growing up in a fatherless home, Signorelli says, “It was older men fathering me and hugging me and telling me they were proud of me... I found it in the local church.” He urged believers to become ambassadors of the Father’s heart and emphasized that the local church remains God’s “Plan A” for reaching the world.

Signorelli also identified three common “software systems” in today's culture that are leading people astray into a world of turmoil: hedonism, narcissism and agnosticism.

Hedonism, he explains, is when people seek life for their own pleasure and purpose. "That's why you're addicted. You're not addicted to porn; you're addicted to pleasure," Signorelli says, describing a culture driven by desire rather than service.

Narcissism, on the other hand, is ruled by the "unholy trinity of me, myself and I." Signorelli warns that it's easy to fall into self-centered thinking, especially in a culture that promotes self-worship through participation trophies and constant affirmation. "People become narcissists because we're just made to think that we are amazing no matter what and life revolves around us."

He also presents agnosticism—the belief that God might exist but is unknowable and distant—as the default worldview causing loneliness for many. "Most of the people you work with... have this operating system," he said. But this, he argues, is incompatible with the biblical witness of a God who is present and active.

While agnosticism may reign outside of Christian circles, Signorelli also warns against the overpowering intellectualism that has crept into many churches, where theology is valued over spiritual power. "Sometimes flexing all of the Greek and Hebrew... is not for your education—it's for their edification," he notes.

His ultimate challenge? Don't just talk about God—demonstrate

His power. Don't just stay focused on yourself; go deep into community and let God change your heart and mind. In a culture increasingly driven by individualism and digital connection, the silent epidemic of loneliness continues to grow—even within the church. But true healing isn't found in isolation or self-reliance; it's birthed in authentic community. When believers choose vulnerability over appearance and connection over comfort, they open the door to true, Spirit-filled transformation.

Divine Wake-Up Call: John and Lisa Bevere Reveal the Spiritual Significance of Waking Up Early

One of Kopp's personal stories illustrates this perfectly. While acting as a traveling pastor, he couldn't afford his next ministry trip. As he prayed on a flight, a man sat between him and his ministry partner. Initially sharing wild party stories, the man eventually confessed, "I accidentally turned on a Christian station and I really felt like God was in the vehicle speaking to me." Kopp and his friend led the man to Christ right there on the plane. Moments later, the same man stood up, grabbed his checkbook and said, "I just want to pay for your next flight."

The same way that God provided for Kopp, He has also been providing America the opportunity to shift from our wicked ways to see His hand and His provision present in our nation. Drawing parallels between ancient Israel and modern America, Cahn recounts how both nations were founded in covenant with God—and both have turned away.

“In the last days of ancient Israel... God was calling it back, trying to warn them,” he explains. “Nine harbingers or prophetic signs [appeared], warning them but calling them back.”

Cahn points out that the same spot where much of America was birthed, New York City, is now also the place where God’s judgment has been poured on the country.

“That’s where America was committed to God in prayer,” Cahn shares. “And now that same ground is where judgment to the covenant or face the consequences.”

“We are in this window period of time where the Lord gives a warning and He’s calling us back,” Cahn warns. “We have a choice—to turn back to God or turn away to judgment.”

America stands at a pivotal moment in history, where divine mercy and impending judgment intersect. Now is the time for the nation—and each individual—to awaken, return to God and step into the destiny that can only be fulfilled through repentance, revival and unwavering trust in His sovereign plan.

'Giant Coverup?' What the Occult Doesn't Want You to Know About the Nephilim

In a prophetic message rooted in spiritual warfare and biblical truth, Amanda Grace is urging believers to shift their mindset, expand their vision and prepare for divine elevation. The enemy's greatest battlefield is the mind, and it is there that destinies are either unlocked or denied.

"Every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God...bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ," she says, stressing that unless the knowledge of God is exalted above all else, vision will be blocked.

The church is at a crucial crossroads—one that requires a mindset change to break free from narrow thinking. "The vision in the church is too narrow-minded," Grace says. "In order for the Lord to expand your territory, He must first expand your vision." But vision cannot expand unless the believer comes into agreement with what God is revealing.

The enemy knows this, which is why he targets the mind so fiercely. "If he can, in your mind, get you to exalt your problems, how you are feeling, he can get you in doubt," she warns. "He has now gotten you to exalt your problem above the knowledge of God... and that is idolatry."

Growth, both personal and corporate, demands discomfort. "Growth never happens when you're comfortable. Greatness never happens when you're comfortable," Grace declares. Using the imagery of a mother eagle pushing her young from the nest, she illustrated how God often disrupts comfort to provoke growth. "She instinctively knows this... if she doesn't push these babies that have now grown up out of the nest, they're going to die."

This principle applies not only to individuals but also to the church and the nation. A shift in mindset must happen at every level. "The mindset has to change to affect and expand the vision," the speaker urged. "Submission is not comfortable. However, it's necessary."

Mindsets are spiritual magnets. They either draw demonic interference or divine resources. "That force will either... draw people to you who are stumbling blocks... or that force will draw people and resources to you that will help to elevate you," Grace explains.

Grace further warned against entitlement and undisciplined stewardship. "If you are undisciplined in many areas of your life, it doesn't matter how much God gives you, you're going to squander it." Instead, the believer must commit to growth through rootedness, discipline and faith. "You have to be willing to push your roots deeper in order to drive higher and higher towards the light."

Finally, to break generational and cycles of bondage, repentance and mindset renewal are required. “Repentance is a re-engineering, a rewiring of your thinking that begins to disrupt the pattern of thinking,” says Grace. “You break the cycle, you break their power.”

God is calling His people to a higher standard—a renewed mind, a servant’s heart, and a warrior’s focus. “Power, love and a sound mind are a three-fold cord... difficult for demons to infiltrate when you are operating in all three.”

In this hour, the battle is raging in the arena of the mind. What we entertain, agree with, and meditate on shapes the trajectory of our lives and the authority we walk in. God is calling His people to renew their minds, to break the cycles of fear, trauma and compromise, and to align their thoughts with the truth of His Word.

This is not a decision we made lightly or without heartache. It comes after prayer, wise counsel, planning, financial sacrifice and an unwavering desire to see lives transformed through worship and community. We invested not just resources, but our hearts-believing this tour could be a powerful move of God across our nation.

While the initial excitement around the tour was strong-both from the general public and across Canada-the growing “lack of interest” and mounting questions came as a direct result of Michael Tait’s unexpected departure, which we were not informed of in advance. Since that time, additional information regarding the nature of his exit has surfaced. This information has come from sources we consider credible and trustworthy, and while we will not speculate publicly, we can say with confidence that what has come to light has raised serious concerns for us as a faith-based organization.

The handling of the transition lacked clarity and transparency, leaving both our team and the public in a difficult position.

Furthermore, we were instructed not to address any questions regarding the lineup change-an approach we do not believe served the best interest of our guests or partners. The resulting confusion led to widespread speculation, and as more information came forward behind the scenes, our conviction to step away only grew stronger.

On their Facebook page, Newsboys shared their own statement about this ongoing situation with Faith Live.

God desires to use all of us at all moments and times to bring lost and broken people out of the pit of darkness and into the light.

In a powerful street-side encounter in downtown Orlando with Richard Lorenzo Jr. and Nik Keswani, a young girl named Isabella experienced healing, deliverance and salvation just moments after stepping off her school bus.

“This right here was directly ordained by God,” Keswani says. What unfolded was an unplanned, spirit-led moment of transformation.

The encounter began with a simple question from Lorenzo: “What do you think the purpose of life is?” Isabella responded, “Just be yourself,” explaining how peer pressure and bullying at school made that difficult.

To order Richard Lorenzo Jr.'s new book, What's the Purpose of Life? visit .

As the conversation continued, it became evident that Isabella was carrying deep emotional wounds. “I feel like you go through a lot of pressure even with school work,” says Lorenzo, sharing a vision he had of her feeling alone and depressed in her room. “Have you ever had a feeling of suicide?” he asked gently. “Yeah. And that was recent... actually Friday,” Isabella admitted. What followed stunned her. “How would he know something like that?” she asked through tears. Keswani explained how it is, “Because the Spirit of God just revealed that to him, not because he’s a psychic.”

She listened as they shared their own stories of rejection, addiction and how they encountered Jesus. Isabella then revealed she was a Seventh-day Adventist and had just been at church that past Saturday. “I told my mom, ‘Mom, I really need to talk to someone. I need prayer,’” she says. “It’s crazy that you guys are here now.” She shared how she had encountered the presence of God before, even during a week-long fast, but had also seen dark, spiritual manifestations in her lifetime. “I seen the shadow on my wall like it was reaching out,” she said, remembering a moment that first happened when she was six.

The group began to pray for her, and Isabella experienced a powerful release. "I felt like I had goosebumps. I felt like I needed it," she says. They led her in renouncing fear, anxiety, depression and suicide.

With tears in her eyes, Isabella gave her life to Christ. "Jesus, I believe you died on the cross... your blood washes my sin clean... I repent of all sin," she prays aloud. They declared her future would be used for God's glory. "She's going to be used to bring many Seventh-day Adventists out of religion into relationship with Jesus," prophesies Lorenzo.

In that moment, on a street corner, God answered her cry. "I really needed that," she says. "Like, I really did."

This encounter is a powerful reminder that no moment is too ordinary for God to move. What began as a simple walk down the street became a divine appointment that altered the course of a young girl's life. In a world clouded by confusion, pain and spiritual darkness, the light of the gospel still breaks through—often when it's least expected.

This is the heart of evangelism: bringing the love and truth of Jesus to the doorstep of the broken, the searching and the lost. And when we show up in obedience, heaven meets earth in ways that can transform lives forever.
