

Sean Feucht's Prophetic Dream: Tucker Carlson, Ben Shapiro and the Future of America

While rushing to catch an early flight to Washington, D.C., worship leader Sean Feucht shared a striking dream that he believes carries a prophetic warning for the church and the nation.

"I don't get tons of dreams," he said in a video posted to YouTube. "But this one was very specific. I woke up really shaken."

Locke spoke passionately about this danger of religious legalism. "The most difficult people you will ever deal with are not demons," Locke said. "But religious people—and they act just about the same." According to Locke, it was not sinners but religious leaders who continually opposed Jesus during His earthly ministry. "The same people that killed Jesus by way of religion still hate Jesus to this day," he emphasized.

Locke unpacked a powerful moment from Scripture when Jesus was questioned about why His disciples didn't fast like the Pharisees or the followers of John the Baptist. Locke highlighted the religious mindset behind the question: "One of the great things religion will do is try to make you feel convicted because you don't worship like everybody else." He warned against the pressure to conform to religious norms, urging believers instead to follow Jesus authentically. "The point of Christianity is not to be like other churches. It's to be like Jesus, 'cause He's the head of the church."

Locke drew attention to Jesus' response in verse 19, where He likens His presence to a bridegroom at a wedding. This was not the time for Jesus' disciples to be fasting because he was there. Instead, it was time to get to work. Locke went on to say that Jesus' words reveal a sense of urgency—a call to action while the presence of God is near. "I expect God to show up when we walk in. If we don't expect it, we'll never see it," he declared, calling on the church to stop living with a defeated mindset.

Jesus wasn't just confronting tradition, Locke said—He was shattering it. "Jesus was wildly a renegade in His day," Locke proclaimed. "He walked right into synagogues on the Sabbath to pick a fight with religious people." That boldness, Locke suggested, is still needed today to combat a system that prioritizes control and appearances over the transformative power of the gospel.

Ultimately, Locke warned that many people hear the truth but don't receive it because of their perception. "How you perceive someone is how you receive someone," he said. "There will be people that hear me but they cannot receive from me." Like Jesus, Locke said, true preachers will always face resistance from the religious spirit—but that shouldn't stop them from preaching the uncompromising truth of the gospel.

In this urgent hour, the church cannot afford to be silent or subdued. The battle is not merely against darkness in the world but against the lifeless traditions that have dulled the edge of true faith. A form of godliness without power will never drive out demons or transform lives.

The world is watching—and the church must decide whether to maintain appearances or unleash the fire of God.

Feeling Like Giving Up? This Bible Verse Will Reignite Your Faith

Deliverance is something we all need, and it is something all Christians can pray for others to receive.

In a recent episode of The Porch, Apostle John Eckhardt revisited the book that transformed his life and ministry over 40 years ago: They Shall Expel Demons by Derek Prince.

“This is the book that changed my life,” Eckhardt said. “This is the book that really helped me understand the subject of deliverance and how to minister deliverance.”

Eckhardt emphasized that deliverance is not merely a fringe aspect of Christianity but an essential demonstration of the power of God. Quoting Mark 16:17, he explained the biblical basis for deliverance: "In my name shall they cast out devils." He broke down the Greek word "ekballō," which means "to eject" or "to force out," showing how Jesus and His disciples were actively engaged in this ministry. "Deliverance is a normal part of the ministry of Jesus and the early church," he said. "Every believer in the name and authority of Jesus can confront and expel demons."

He reminded listeners that Jesus gave His followers power over all the power of the enemy: "Behold, I give you power... and nothing shall by any means hurt you" (Luke 10:19). Far from being something to fear, deliverance is a sign of the kingdom's presence: "If I by the Spirit of God cast out devils, then the kingdom of God has come unto you" (Matt. 12:28).

Eckhardt further gave viewers the challenge of being the hands and feet of Jesus through the power of prayer of deliverance for others. So many people need deliverance and freedom from oppression and bondage, and they need you as a believer to understand this so you can help them and see them set free."

John Eckhardt's reflections are more than a tribute to a book—they're a wake-up call to the church. In a time when spiritual oppression often goes unaddressed, his words point to a foundational truth: deliverance isn't an outdated ministry or fringe practice—it's a vital expression of the authority believers carry in Christ.

His message is clear: the power to drive out darkness resides in every Spirit-filled believer, and now more than ever, the church must rise in that authority to bring healing, liberty and the presence of God's kingdom to a bound and broken world.

Diddy and the Demonic: Exposing the Spirit Behind the Culture

In the middle of the Sean "Diddy" Combs trial, the world has been watching on edge as grotesque details continue to emerge of what happened at his elite parties. However, what if there's something more to this case? What if in fact there's a dark spiritual side to all of it?

In a gripping message exposing the underbelly of the entertainment industry, Amanda Grace delivers a sobering warning: the story behind Sean "P. Diddy" Combs isn't just about fame and fortune—it's about deep spiritual bondage rooted in trauma, manipulation and the occult.

Would you have the faith to believe God for a miracle?

In an interview with Deep Believer's Jennifer Bagnaschi, John Green shares the tips Christians need to pray bold and effective prayers that move both heaven and earth.

"When you go into a home, a hospital, a university or work," Green began, "you're going to hear you in front of your face, 'I am not well.' And as simple as that is, sometimes Christians hear this and they do nothing."

So, why do so many believers hesitate?

"We don't know what to do... or we've never been taught how to."

Green says that like others, he used to be this way until the Holy Spirit taught him the key to healing while praying for others: compassion.

"My Lord is telling me to feel something that I knew I didn't have... His compassion." Green described this as a holy fire that swelled within him: "It hits my midsection just below my stomach. It swells up and comes through me... I'm fully aware of what's happening."

This compassion led him to pray powerfully and effective for a sick woman. "I began to cry profusely... It wasn't a crying of saying, 'Poor person, they're sick.' No. This was the love of God for the person." He recalled Jesus' words in the Gospels: "When the Lord saw the crowds, He had compassion for them..."

They were like sheep without a shepherd.”

This moment became a foundational principle: “Before even He approached them and prayed for them, He felt that compassion. This is so important and so vital for you to learn and me to learn.”

Another profound moment for Green was when he prayed over a pastor who the doctors had declared doom over. However, God had the final say. “The doctor said he won’t pass through this.” But while driving to the hospital, Green prayed, “Lord, this is going to be awesome. Your glory is going to come down. Your compassion to flow.”

When he entered the ICU room, the atmosphere changed. “I just looked at them... and said, ‘Stop crying. The Lord is here.’” God’s presence filled the room. “I went to the bed and gently placed my hand on his chest and said, ‘Coma, in Jesus’ name, you’re going to leave him right now.’” As Green prayed, “Tears were rolling down [the patient’s] face... and a beautiful smile came upon him.” That same afternoon, the man woke up and asked for food. “He’s still pastoring. This happened about 12 years ago.”

Ultimately, before we ever lay hands, before we speak healing, Jesus invites us to feel what He feels. The power doesn’t begin with our words; it begins with the attitude of the heart. When we pause and let His compassion flood our spirit, we’re no longer ministering from emotion or duty, but from divine love. That’s where miracles begin.

If we want to see lives transformed, we must first be transformed by His love. Then, and only then, will the glory of God move through us—and the sick will rise.

American Missionary Arrested for Insulting the Quran—Then a Mysterious Stranger Walked In

On a recent podcast with Katie Souza, Tony Kemp joined in to discuss astonishing miracles caught on camera, the spiritual dynamics behind them and how believers can access similar experiences through revelation, obedience and intimacy with God.

Souza began by honoring Kemp's longstanding influence on her own ministry. "We've known each other over 15 years now," she said. "I see amazing miracles because of your mentoring, honestly." What followed was a deep dive into the unseen realities behind supernatural healing and manifestations of God's power.

Fantastic Miracles Break Out

Kemp recounted a powerful testimony from a tent meeting in Chicago hosted by Donna Shambach, daughter of evangelist R.W. Shambach. "We were tent," Souza remembered. "There was a guy with a bullet in his skull and he had a constant 24/7 migraine for like 20-some odd years. You prayed for the bullet to disappear, and his pain immediately left.”

That same night, a miracle was performed through Kemp that drew in local youth from a nearby basketball court. One young man had a shorter leg, which grew out in front of their eyes. “Tony said God said we’re going to grow out arms,” Souza explained, introducing video footage from the event. “Tony sat them all down and said, ‘OK, are you ready? You’re going to see a miracle.’ And they all got saved after they watched this miracle.”

Growing Out an Arm—A Creative Act

In one particularly dramatic clip, Kemp commands a woman’s arm to grow after a car accident had left it four inches shorter. “This was a creative miracle,” Kemp explained. “The Lord Jesus had to grow four inches of muscle, skin, bone and tissue.”

Kemp broke down how such miracles unfold—not merely by spiritual power, but through divine revelation and understanding. “The focus is not so much on power. The focus is on the revelation,” he said. “Revelation and relationship release the power.”

Quoting Ephesians 1 and Isaiah 60, he described how believers must move through a process: “You have to move from revelation to conceptualization,” Kemp said. “Then to application, and then you will see the manifestation of the miraculous.”

How Revelation Becomes Reality

Kemp teaches how meditating on the Word of God plays a crucial role in seeing God's miracles come to pass. He explained that before any miracle, God gives instruction. "Before the Lord does a miracle, He always gives you an instruction. And when you follow that instruction, you see the manifestation of the miraculous."

Referencing Moses' encounters with God, Kemp drew a parallel between obedience and dominion over natural laws. "You always have to be able to have authority over time and matter. And you do that by walking under the dominion of Jesus."

Angelic Partnership and the Inner Glory

Kemp also spoke about the presence of angelic beings during miracles. "There is this power angel or healing angel that comes and I can sense his presence," he said. When asked how believers can partner with angels, Kemp gave three key steps: "Bring forth fruit in keeping with repentance. Walk in relational righteousness. And build up the inner glory."

He elaborated, "You must have a certain level of strength in the inner glory to be able to stand up under the weight of the outer glory."

Katie added Psalm 34:7 for context: "The angel of the Lord encamps around the righteous and he delivers them." Kemp affirmed, saying, "Relational righteousness has to do with walking out the fruit of the Spirit, walking in the character of God."

Through intentional partnership with heaven and cultivation of the inner life, the impossible becomes possible. The miraculous isn't meant to be admired from a distance—it's an invitation to live a life where heaven breaks into earth through yielded vessels of glory.

As believers embrace these truths and align their hearts with God's purposes, they step into a realm where miracles become a natural byproduct of divine relationship. This is not just about witnessing the supernatural—it's about becoming a conduit for it.

3 Prayers That Will Change Everything

Can prayer really change your life?

In a new video posted to Instagram, author Dayne Kamela shared three short prayers that have the power to move heaven and earth for your life and for the kingdom of God.

Prayer #1: Prayer to Hear the Holy Spirit Above Distraction

"Dear God, open up my ears so I can hear Your voice above every distraction," Kamela prays.

We all know what it is like to be distracted, to have our eyes and ears focused on something outside of the Gospel. When we intentionally seek the Lord first and ask to hear Him, He is sure to answer.

Prayer #2: Prayer to Trust God's Supernatural Timing

"Dear God, teach me to trust Your timing even when I don't understand the process," Kamela prays.

God often answers our prayers on a different timeline than we anticipated or would have hoped for. However, what He has for us is always better. Learning to trust Him through every high and low is a key piece of learning to walk in the Christian faith.

Prayer #3: Prayer for Discipline

"Dear God, fill me with discipline to seek You daily and stay consistent in prayer," prays Kamela.

It takes discipline to open up our Bibles, actively pray and share the Gospel with the world around us. Godly discipline isn't something we can do on our own, but requires the guidance of the Holy Spirit.
