

This Prayer Will Help You Unlock Your Deliverance!

Jonathan Cahn, the prophetic voice behind “The Harbinger” and “The Dragon’s Prophecy,” continues to unveil the mysteries of Scripture with his latest insights into the book of Revelation. In a sermon, Cahn explores the prophetic timeline of Christ’s return, the rise of the Antichrist and the fulfillment of end-time prophecies in our modern world.

As we approach the last days, the Bible provides clear warnings about a one-world system, technological advancements paving the way for global deception and the ultimate triumph of Messiah’s kingdom.

Babylon, Rome and the Persecuting Power

From the days of the apostles, Babylon has been a prophetic symbol of rebellion against God. Peter himself referred to Rome as “Babylon,” a city that became a center of persecution for the early church. In Revelation 17, Babylon is described as a harlot sitting on many waters—an image of a corrupt world system opposing the kingdom of God. Today, the spirit of Babylon persists in the rising tide of anti-Christian sentiment worldwide.

Christ's Return and the Rise of Global Technology

Jesus declared in Matthew 24:30 that His return would be witnessed by the entire world. For centuries, this seemed impossible. Yet, with today's satellites, instant media and digital surveillance, a global event of this magnitude could now be seen by all nations. Likewise, Revelation describes two witnesses whose deaths will be observed by the whole earth—an occurrence now technologically feasible for the first time in history.

The One-World System and the Mark of the Beast

The apostle John foresaw a time when no one could buy or sell without the mark of the beast. With digital currency, biometric tracking and centralized financial systems, we are witnessing the infrastructure of the Antichrist's global control being put into place.

The Spirit of Antichrist in a Post-Christian World

Cahn warns that the most dangerous societies are not pagan ones but those that once knew God and turned away. The West, once a bastion of Christianity, now leads in moral corruption, pushing an agenda that mirrors biblical warnings of the last days. Just as Antiochus Epiphanes defiled the Temple, a future Antichrist will rise to deceive the nations.

The prophetic implication for America, as Cahn elaborates, is profound. As the nation moves further from its Christian roots, this sets the stage for a world order that will welcome the Antichrist—an individual who will present himself as a global savior, much like past false messiahs in history. Cahn also draws attention to the fact that such a culture of rebellion is not merely a spiritual issue but also a societal one that affects every aspect of life, from politics to family structure.

Prophecy Unfolding Before Our Eyes

From the push to rebuild the Jewish Temple to the deception of false messiahs, the signs of the end are converging. For the remnant of believers, these are not days of fear but of preparation. The kingdom of God is near, and the Messiah is coming soon. No longer can we stay quiet and still about what we see happening in the world around us; we must stand tall, share the gospel unashamedly and grow closer in our relationship with the Lord.

Ministers Who Walk in Shallow Faith Are Doomed to Fail—Here's Why

If the pastor walks in shallow faith, likely the congregation will, too.

Recently returned from his trip to Israel, Pastor Greg Locke of Global Bible Vision Church in Lebanon, Tennessee, gave a powerful message to his congregation about why it is so vital to be filled up by the Holy Spirit day after day, especially for ministers.

“I’m not going to be lukewarm just because everybody else in America wants to be lukewarm,” Locke says. “God is sending out that lukewarm crowd, that loveless crowd, that powerless crowd that unbaptized by the Holy Ghost crowd.”

Locke makes it clear that what is needed in the American church is the presence of God. He believes that we cannot have more of the power of His Spirit without being receptive to His presence above all else.

Locke points out that if someone can go to a church year after year without ever hearing the gospel, feeling a sense of community and receiving healing and deliverance, then that is a reflection of a particular church not moving in the power of the Holy Spirit.

“The only people who get mad at fired up churches are dead ones,” Pastor Locke says. They’re the only people complaining about demons and healing and supernatural and baptisms and praying in tongues.

Ultimately, a minister must be willing to bring in the presence of God. And a minister can only pour out to others what he has to give.

In a compelling prophetic message, Amanda Grace shared how the year 2028 just may be a pivotal time in American history aligning with a Jewish leap year and double Purims, marking a time when the Jewish people experienced deliverance. However, there just may be one key figure to how this prophetic word plays out: Vice President J.D. Vance.

As the 50th Vice President of the United States, J.D. Vance is a central figure in this prophecy, with his middle name, David, carrying significant prophetic weight. The Jubilee, a year of freedom and restitution, symbolized by land being restored and slaves being freed, aligns with Vance's role in this unfolding prophetic season.

Known for his fiery passion and deep convictions, Vance is described as a 'David' in the White House, called to lead with authority and spiritual conviction. His rise is compared to a burning bush, enduring the fires of affliction but never consumed, much like the Israelites' trials in Egypt.

Grace also likens Vance and Trump to Joshua and Moses. Trump, who is leading the country through tumultuous times, is seen by Grace as a Moses figure, guiding our nation through the wilderness. In contrast, Vance is the Joshua, chosen to carry the torch forward, leading the nation into a new era, just as Joshua led the Israelites into the promised land.

“In a way, if you think about this, J.D. Vance is the first president of the United States to be chosen as a successor by Trump. Meaning, he chose J.D. Vance purposely to carry on if something were to happen to him, right? He chose somebody younger, right? And eager and fiery and passionate to carry on if anything should happen to him,” Grace says.

Grace describes Vance as a man of deep thought and conviction, someone who has been through the fire of affliction, and is now prepared to lead. The prophetic imagery of the burning bush in Exodus 3 resonates deeply in this context. The fire of affliction, as seen with Moses and the Israelites, is a symbol of purification and endurance. Just as Trump’s trials have not consumed him, neither will Vance be destroyed by the challenges ahead.

As we reflect on Amanda Grace’s prophetic words, it’s clear that the coming years could be a time of profound transformation for America. Even in the midst of affliction, God’s purposes will prevail, and His people will not be consumed. The future is bright, and the best is yet to come.

You're Praying Incorrectly—Rabbi Schneider Explains the One Thing You're Missing

In a recent spiritual question and answer session, Kathryn Krick shared powerful insights on discernment, spiritual warfare and walking in God's power. Known for her dynamic ministry and deliverance anointing, Krick answered poignant questions from viewers, offering wisdom for believers seeking to grow in purity of heart, resist the enemy's lies and embrace God's refining process.

1. Can discernment be perverted by jealousy?

"Absolutely," says Krick.

When jealousy or selfish ambition taints the heart, it distorts discernment. Krick emphasizes that the Bible says, “The pure in heart shall see God,” (Matt. 5:8). This purity of heart enables believers to recognize God’s voice, His works, and the people through whom He moves. However, an impure heart—infected by pride, jealousy or hatred—creates agreement with the enemy’s deception. Maintaining purity is essential for true spiritual discernment.

2. How do we protect ourselves from being deceived by the devil’s lies?

Krick advises that we protect ourselves by rejecting impure thoughts—and choosing to align our hearts with God’s truth. By keeping our minds and spirits grounded in God’s Word, we become more adept at identifying and rejecting the lies of the enemy, which often try to infiltrate our thoughts and lead us astray.

When we ground ourselves in God’s truth, we strengthen our spiritual armor and protect ourselves from being misled.

3. What do we do when someone confidently claims to speak for God but seems off?

Some people may be deceived but genuinely believe they are speaking the truth, much like the Pharisees of Jesus’ time. Having a pure heart helps us see things clearly, allowing us to discern whether someone’s message truly aligns with God’s will.

When surrounded by people influenced by the enemy—whether in the workplace, family or social circles—Krick encouraged listeners to maintain a heart of grace. Reject the demonic influence in your mind without becoming defensive or confrontational. Guard your heart and renew your mind, staying sensitive to the Holy Spirit's leading.

4. How do we stay Christlike during times of weakness and fatigue?

Krick acknowledges that moments of weakness and fatigue can make it hard to stay Christlike, but she reminds us to first receive God's grace and love. It's from that place of receiving grace that we are empowered to respond with love, even when we feel exhausted or vulnerable. Staying Christlike is not about perfection, but about continually choosing to walk in love and grace, even during the toughest moments.

5. How do I act when I know the enemy is speaking through someone around me?

Krick encourages us to reject the lies internally but to remain respectful externally. Whether it's in the workplace, family or another setting, when you recognize that the enemy is influencing someone's words or actions, it's important to stand firm in the truth without reacting in anger or hostility. Internally, reject the lies; externally, maintain composure and respect.

6. Should I apologize if I've acted out of impure thoughts or spiritual attacks?

Krick strongly believes in the power of repentance and reconciliation. Apologizing when we've acted out of impure thoughts or under spiritual attack can bring healing to both ourselves and others. Apologies break the chains of spiritual lies and wounds we may have inflicted. It's a way to restore relationships and seek peace, as we embrace God's healing for ourselves and those around us.

7. How do I be a light in the world without being pushy or religious?

Krick encourages believers to share their faith authentically and humbly. She advises using platforms like social media to express God's love in a way that's gentle yet bold. Instead of being preachy or religious, simply share your personal testimony and how God has worked in your life. This authenticity resonates deeply with others and makes the gospel more relatable and approachable.

8. How do I know when to stop defending myself or the work of God?

When defending ourselves or God's work, Krick stresses the importance of knowing when to step back. If a conversation turns into an argument or leads to strife, it's time to stop. While it's important to speak the truth, striving to convince others through conflict often does more harm than good. Trust that God will continue to work in people's hearts, even if we don't have the last word.

9. What do I do with old lies or condemning words from my past?

Krick offers powerful advice: expose those old lies, reject them in the name of Jesus, and receive the truth of who you are in Christ. The lies from our past no longer have power over us when we reject them and embrace God's identity for us. Through this process of spiritual renewal, we can break free from the condemning words that may have held us captive for years. Our victory comes from keeping a godly perspective.

Walking in Discernment and Power

This video with Kathryn Krick offers a powerful reminder: purity of heart is the key to discerning God's voice and resisting the enemy's lies. As believers walk through trials, embracing the cost of discipleship, they are refined, strengthened and lifted into greater levels of influence and spiritual authority. Let us remain steadfast, walking in purity, humility and unwavering faith.
