

Sid Roth: These are the Two Most Important Words for 2025

In a recent podcast, Vlad and Lana Savchuk discussed the struggles they've encountered with blending their marriage and ministry lives, and how the Lord has graciously led them to grow together over the years.

After the two first got married, Lana experienced spiritual warfare, including attacks in her sleep. She says she was going through a cycle of attacks that made her feel unlike herself and she could not seem to get out of this cycle. Vlad notes that during this time he also dealt with expectations that she would be involved in ministry in the certain capacity that he wanted. Despite these obstacles, the two continued to grow with each other and the Holy Spirit.

"When she would give insights into certain decisions that I would make, into certain decisions about our personal life, that I was amazed," says Savchuk. "She just saw things straight. And the Lord started personally dealing with my heart and said, 'You know, there's two people that you need to keep very close, and you need to keep very honest with; that will guarantee your protection.'"

Savchuk assumed that his uncle, his pastor, was the one that he was supposed to keep close with. However, God pointed out that this was not so.

"He says, 'You pretty much can talk your way [out] and you can conceal things, even in your own heart from your pastor.' He said, 'But two people you cannot do that to: the Holy second one is your wife. She knows you through thick and thin, she spots things before...'"

Savchuk says when God started dealing with his heart, he began to shift some of the structure of the church where Lana could smoothly accept the calling on her life to disciple other women. Lana became more of her own individual, and it was within recent years that her gifts started to shine and flourish.

Lana says her natural tendency is to run and hide away, but now she feels empowered, even challenged by the Holy Spirit and her husband to walk in the calling and purpose for her life.

"...when the wife feels the call, and sometimes they will feel the call, if we water that, if we encourage that, not push it, you know flowers don't grow when you pull them, they grow when you water them," Vlad Savchuk says. "If we water that calling and encourage her to step up and to grow and to use her gifts in the Kingdom of God, if the gifts that she has and foster that, it could be a dynamic, beautiful thing."

"We made a decision that our marriage is not our mission; we will not sacrifice our marriage for the mission, but our marriage will be on the mission, and that mission is to serve the body of Christ," Vlad says. "Some people, they will sacrifice their marriage to fulfill the calling of God; other people will make their marriage really the calling of God, everything's about the marriage, everything's about them..."

Jonathan Cahn: This is How You Can Have a Victorious New Year

In a New Year's message, Jonathan Cahn shared biblical principles for living a life of abundance as we enter into a new year.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

The first practice that Cahn encourages believers to take part in is to dedicate their first fruits to the Lord. This includes items like tithing and placing our time before the Lord as critical above all else.

“The principle of the first fruit is if you dedicate the first fruit, the rest is dedicated. If you consecrate the first fruit, the rest is holy. So, by lifting up the first fruit to God, the rest of the harvest is considered consecrated,” says Cahn.

Cahn points out that part of the first fruits of what would come from Jesus' death and resurrection was the outpouring of the Holy Spirit on the 120 people in the upper room.

"So on that day 2,000 years ago, God lifted up 120 people and He anointed them. He poured out His Spirit on them and they spoke in other were speaking the tongues of the nations. Everybody heard them in their own language," says Cahn.

"So the first fruit determines everything else. Consecrates, makes holy, everything else. The first fruit represents the rest, determines the rest," he continues.

Cahn explains that one practice Christians should keep in mind is to ordain our days for the purposes of God.

Poirot says we have to step out in faith and hold fast to the Word of God because the enemy does not accept defeat.

"...it's not just a psychological warfare, but it is a spiritual war that we are facing," says Poirot. "Where we are going to be lured into emotionally reacting to everything we are witnessing with our we will not stay in the secret place for everything we're about to face in the coming year, we will be in the wrong place."

Poirot says this means the body of Christ cannot just fall back into laziness, but we are in a critical time to use and enforce our authority and victory that Jesus won on our behalf. He also urges Christians to keep praying against any schemes set up by the devil to happen regarding Trump's inauguration date. Above all, he believes we must show the love of Christ to all those we encounter, including our family and friends.

"I would say the Lord is really asking His body right now, 'Will you walk in My love?' Because that is the only way you're going to come out of this on top."

'Bishop Lazarus': T.D. Jakes Makes Ministry Return Following Health Crisis

Z says that after watching the new Superman trailer, God spoke to him about this being a representation of America and the leadership of the church. He also says that when Trump won his re-election, the Lord spoke to him about the state of the church.

"As soon as Trump won in November, the word of the Lord came to me and said, 'Here is what we're in danger of right now:

The church is in danger of being defeated by victory,'" Z says. "Although we've seen this good thing happen, we've seen light shine in bottom line is suddenly there's a nefarious supernatural force that's been released into the nation. It's been released into the world. It's a form of witchcraft, it's a form of Jezebel, it's a form of deviant voices, prophetic deviant voices, and all these things that are coming forward are trying to manipulate what's happened."

Z says the darkness did not believe it would lose, almost placing everything in a spiritual lull for a couple of weeks before we saw an increase in strange occurrences like the drones and the threat of nuclear warfare.

"We've seen victory, now the supernatural forces are being released, and what we've got to do is rise up in prayer and do what the ecclesia does best, push back the gates of hell," he says.

Z reveals that in the first two quarters of the year he's seen the threat of nuclear war, and it is the church's job to push back this dark agenda. He also had a vision where he was on a bus and saw a flashing in a mountainous area where everyone was dreading what was to come, with heat coming off of the flash.

"The Lord spoke to me as soon as I woke up from that and said, 'The church is the nuclear deterrent. The body of Christ is the nuclear deterrent.' And I got a witness in my spirit that said, 'If we can go through quarter one and quarter two of this coming year without a nuclear incident, or even if there's a small nuclear incident we can still have the grace of God get us over we get to July without a nuclear incident, without some of these things taking down the nation, I believe we're going to see the turn of the tide completely."

Z believes this turning of things will bring another chance for our generation and our children's generation.

"I believe we're up to 16 years of redemptive instability where we'll see a turnaround and victory come. I believe we could see 20 years of life that begins the build and rebuild to the year 2040; I believe God has a marker on that year."

Z says it is the job of the church right now to keep striking the arrows against the darkness until the enemy is defeated.

"The word of the Lord for 2025 is that we as the body of Christ, the ecclesia, are to storm Babylon," says Z. "We are to continue rising in prayer, pushing back this nefarious agenda of witchcraft, darkness, social evils, this woke ideology, this control over our economics, this wickedness that's happening with an invasion of our nation."

Kim Clement's Amazing New Year's Prophecy

In a recent message, Pastor Mark Driscoll gave his 10 prophetic predictions about what he believes the church will encounter in 2025.

"I believe that we have an opportunity as God's people to pay attention to what is happening in the culture so that we can be best prepared for what God intends for His people, the church, in 2025," says Driscoll.

1. Men are re-emerging as leaders for the future.

Driscoll points out that this year's election was determined greatly by the number of men who showed up to voice their opinion about the kind of society they want to live in. Typically, it is the suburban women who make the difference in the election, but this year, Driscoll says, it was the male voter who stepped up to the plate.

"This is a historic opportunity, and we need to hear what the Spirit of God is saying to the churches," Driscoll says. "And one thing that the Holy Spirit is saying is, 'It's time to make men a priority. It's time for the church to value men again.' And that what we have seen historically is that evangelicalism has become increasingly soft, weak, woke, compromised, and it is time for strong men to enter into the pulpit and enter into the ministry and lead with a sense of actual testosterone-driven, Elijah-like, Paul-like, Jeremiah-like prophetic courage."

2. Young men are not interested in progressive ideology and are becoming increasingly interested in a traditional family lifestyle.

Driscoll points out that as young men are increasingly becoming more conservative and young women are becoming more liberal, we are seeing a fracturing in society.

“So, what does this provide for the church? Well, hear what the Spirit of God is saying to the church; an entire generation of young men is saying, ‘I want to be a man who marries a woman and works a job and has a family...’ the only hope is the church of Jesus Christ. This entire beginning and stirring of a young generation of men who are aspiring to conservative values like faith and family and freedom and fatherhood, the church of Jesus Christ is the only hope,” says Driscoll. “If you are a leader in a church or the pastor of a need to refocus all of your energy and attention toward reaching young men, toward activating young men, toward discipling young men.”

3. Confidence in mainstream media continues to trend downward.

Driscoll points out that statistically, people continue to lose trust in traditional media, especially as its bias against Trump and toward Harris was so blatant this year. There is also a rise of alternative media that continues to grow. So, how is the church to respond to this change in media consumption?

“What does this provide for the church of Jesus Christ? It provides an opportunity to tell the truth. It provides an opportunity to function not in a political way, but in a prophetic way. Not where you’re trying to gain an audience, but where you’re trying to glorify we are seeing is people are looking for the truth. People are desperate for the truth. People are hungry for the truth. People are sick of being lied to. They’re sick of sound bites and manipulation. What they want is truth, unvarnished...”

4. The reality of the demonic is coming to light in the mainstream culture.

Driscoll points to Tucker Carlson's experience of being attacked by a demon and how his story has permeated throughout the nation, showing the reality of dark and evil forces.

"Ultimately, the demonic is mainstream. Demons are no longer just hiding; they're parading," says Driscoll.

"There really is an unseen supernatural realm, there really is a God and a Satan, there really are angels and demons, there really is spiritual warfare."

5. There has been an explosion of Bible purchases made by non-Christians.

Driscoll notes that those who may not necessarily go to church or who do not know Jesus are seeking God in droves as they read the Bible for the very first time.

"Isn't it curious that the Word of God is really, truly, living and active? Isn't it amazing that all Scripture really is God-breathed and profitable? Isn't it incredible that every Word of God is flawless and proved true? Isn't it amazing that though we have so much technology what people want to do is find a copy of the Bible and open it and read it for themselves? Well, what is the Spirit of God saying to the church? You need to be in God's Word."

6. Israel has successfully taken out many terrorist leaders since the Oct. 7, 2023 attacks.

After the world was shocked by the Oct. 7, 2023 attacks in Israel, Driscoll points out that the this attack and the takedown of terrorist leaders by Israel has end times, prophetic implications.

“If you understand the Gog-Magog war, if your view of the battle of Armageddon is consistent with more of this [premillennial] view of the end times, it seems to indicate that there will be a war at the end of time where the nations surround Israel and seek to attack and destroy it,” says Driscoll.

7. The transgender agenda is beginning to plummet.

Driscoll says that as the transgender movement continues to become more outrageous, there is also a growth of people rejecting the ideology as valid altogether.

“It provides an opportunity to teach people that we’re made in the image and likeness of God. We are made with a soul, we are made with a body and we are made male and female. And, that the Bible speaks to men and women. It speaks to husbands and father. It speaks to wives and mothers, and it tells us to raise not just children, but sons and people who have come to the conclusion that they have been lied to, that their children have been brainwashed, that a generation has been mutilated, they need Bible teaching...”

8. The number of abortions in the U.S. have increased since the end of Roe v. Wade.

As abortion was one of the center topics during the election season, Driscoll compares the act with the sacrificing of children as commanded by the demon, Molech.

“What is the Spirit of God saying to the churches? That we have to be pro-life from womb to tomb,” Driscoll says. “That we have to help those women who have made a tragic choice and now regret it to know the love and forgiveness of Jesus Christ and to know healing for themselves and hope for the eternal salvation of their child, whom God can call and save from the womb...”

9. God is cleaning house in the body of Christ.

Looking at the declining numbers of pastors who hold a biblical worldview, Driscoll says God is cleaning house in the church for only the true believers in Christ Jesus to remain.

“God’s people need to be given a biblical worldview. And it’s not just accept Jesus and you’ll go to heaven when you die; it’s how to grow in your relationship with God every step of the journey.”

10. Our children can be wise counselors.

Driscoll points to the story of how Barron Trump served to help his father understand and work with podcasters, which ended up being a key for Donald Trump in securing his re-election bid. Just as Trump listened to his son and saw valuable leadership skills in him, the church too is to raise children to be world-changing leaders.
