"They say right now ADHD is at a record-breaking high for kids, that it's all no attention span; kids can't sit through anything, sit through class, sit through a movie because their attention spans are being ruined from shows like CoComelon and from TikTok and from Instagram," Saldivar says.

The first thing that the video shows is the deceptive ways CoComelon uses color patterns and saturation to addict children to what they are watching.

"My heart was broken like everyone else's heart's were broken at the revelation of the scandal that came to light," Lucado says. "I immediately reached out to the people I know at Gateway who are members and expressed my love and prayers for them."

Lucado says he was on vacation at the time of the news breaking about Morris, and after he returned they reached out to see if he could speak for one weekend. During this time, Lucado met with some of the elders who asked if he would be willing to help teach for about six months.

“I was invited and so was Pastor Joakim Lundqvist from Sweden, just a delightful man, and he and I are splitting the teaching privileges at Gateway,” Lucado says.

Lucado also made it clear that he has not left his church in San Antonio, but that he is happy to fly back and forth right now to help out a church in need.

“The church is showing some beautiful signs of health. Here we are, almost two and a half months, maybe three months into this and initially of course, understandably, they were shell-shocked. But every time I go, I sense there's more energy, there's more joy, there's heartfelt worship, and they are being reminded as any Christian is, at some point in their life that we don't put our trust in a person, a leader or a pastor. We put our trust in the Lord Jesus Christ, and that's what they're doing. They're trusting Christ,” Lucado says.

Lucado says renewal will take a while, but that there are early signs of it already happening at Gateway. One of the things Lucado has been doing is seeking the counsel of the elders at Gateway in preparation of his messages. One of the keys that they decided to focus on at this stage in Gateway is the core message of the gospel and the life of Jesus.

Lucado also points out that even in the middle of the hardest trials and tribulations of life, the one thing that will never change is Christ Himself. It is this core of the gospel that the people of Gateway need to keep in mind at this present time.

John Ramirez: How You Can Fight For Your Testimony

“They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb and by the word of their testimony, and they loved not their lives unto the death,” (Rev. 12:11).

There is power in telling our testimony to other people so they may hear the Good News of the gospel. However, we can easily get caught up in the amazement of someone else’s story that we forget to tell our own. Yet, God has a purpose for every single one of us and the stories He wants to tell through us.

In a recent video, evangelist John Ramirez discussed the power of victory that comes through our testimony.

“I enjoy other people’s testimonies, I’m excited about other people getting victories, but I hear a lot of Christians talking about other people, but they don’t talk about themselves,” Ramirez says.

He points out that not sharing one’s testimony comes partially from a lack of understanding spiritual warfare.

“They don’t engage, they don’t know how to fight a good fight, they don’t know the battlefield, they don’t understand the strategies and the weapons of the enemy, they don’t have ‘The Devil’s Playbook,’” Ramirez says.

“When her own sons have given up all hope of her, then is God to appear to her, she is to be re-organized. Her scattered bones are to be brought together. There will be a native government again. There will again be a form of a body politic. A state shall be incorporated,” he continues.

Spurgeon’s prophecy continued to discuss how Israel, while currently cast down and out, would not be this way forever. He saw that the people of Israel would come together again one day, and they would live in a fruitful land, the land flowing with milk and honey.

Cahn points out how these words from Spurgeon came about in 1864 when there had not been a nation of Israel in 2,000 years.

“All these promises certainly imply that the people of Israel are to be converted to God and that this conversion will be permanent for the Tabernacle of God is to be with them,” Cahn says.

Max Lucado: Exploring the Millennial Reign of Christ

One of the most debated discussions within Christianity is the Millennial reign of Jesus Christ. In an exclusive interview with Charisma Media, author and pastor Max Lucado discussed the exciting and mind-boggling topics of the thousand-year reign of Christ, the Great Tribulation and the rapture.

Speaking about Revelation chapter 20, Lucado says, "There are a variety of ways that passage is interpreted, but for the sake of simplicity, I think there's two buckets. One is that person who says that's all symbolic language; we're living in the Millennium right now. The other is the person who says no, that's not symbolic; that's literal language, and that Millennium is yet to come."
