

Sadie Robertson Details Daughter's Miraculous Recovery After Horrifying Medical Emergency

Sadie Robertson is sharing that God still performs miracles today, even in the middle of the worst situations.

In a post on social media, Robertson detailed the harrowing experience her family had when her daughter Kit began choking on a snack, which led Robertson to perform CPR and her mom to call 911.

In the post, Robertson wrote:

Vulnerable post here. I'm starting with that because this feels hard to talk about in my real life, much less on social media, but I do feel it is worth sharing because I truly believe awareness of it will save lives...

I'm currently walking through the waves of anxiety from the trauma of the situation, and the immense gratitude for the miracle of Kit's full recovery and God's undeniable hand on this situation. I've been off social media and having my family and amazing team help me on here for some time while I work on having a sound mind. With all that said, I want to share to help raise awareness...

Kit was sitting in her high chair this week, eating a snack while I was finishing up dinner prep, when she began to choke. Within seconds, you could tell the severity of the situation. My mom pulled her from the high chair and placed my girl into my arms just as she stopped breathing.

Everyone went into action and into prayer. Mom called 911, I started CPR, and everyone began to pray out loud and move the other kids downstairs.

Bible teacher John Bevere believes the Antichrist walks among us – and that the church's greatest days are still ahead.

He may be a teenager. He may still be a small child. But according to bestselling author, John Bevere, the man the Bible calls the Antichrist is almost certainly alive on the earth right now.

"I actually believe he's alive today," Bevere told his son and co-host Arden on a recent episode of The John Bevere Podcast. "He might be an 18-year-old young man. He might be a 7-year-old man."

"He is the perfect antithesis of Jesus Christ. Just as Jesus was filled with the Spirit of God without measure, this guy is going to be filled with the spirit of Satan without measure.” – John Bevere

Bevere further grounds his timeline in Jesus’ own words. When Christ declared that the generation that sees Israel restored would not pass away before all things are fulfilled, He set a prophetic clock in motion, one that, by Bevere’s reckoning, began ticking in 1967 when Jerusalem was no longer trampled by Gentiles. “I believe between now and 2075,” he said, “we’re going to see the return of Jesus.”

Central to their discussion is a figure Paul calls “the restrainer” in 2 Thessalonians 2, the force holding back the full unleashing of lawlessness. While many theologians have argued this is the Holy Spirit, Bevere pushes back strongly.

"I don't believe it's the Holy Spirit," he said. "The Bible says nobody can confess that Jesus is the Christ without the Holy Spirit. There are going to be a massive amount of people saved in the Tribulation. So if you remove the Holy Spirit, how do people get saved?"

His answer: the restrainer is the church itself. "Think about if we pull every bit of the church out of all sectors of society," he warned. "You won't have a Red Cross. You won't have nursing homes. Utter selfishness will rule and reign."

"You pull the church out and your world goes to utter darkness – rapidly.”

– John Bevere

Arden pushed back on what he called an “escapism mentality” that can paralyze believers.

“If you’re just living in this mentality of the world getting darker and darker,” Arden said, “then the gospel is not being advanced. There’s opportunity in persecution – that persecution is going to lead to more salvation.”

His father agreed without hesitation.

“We, right now, present time, are never to have an escape mentality,” John responded. “We, right now, present time, are to have an advancing-the-kingdom-of-God mentality.”

He compared the church to runners in a 5K –

the closer to the finish line, the faster the sprint.

“The kingdom of heaven suffers violence,” he added. “The violent take it by force. We have to have a violent love.”

Yet for all the sobering prophetic weight of the conversation, Bevere closed with something that sounded less like a warning and more like wonder. He said he believes a great end-times revival – what Scripture calls the latter rain – is coming before the catching away of the church, and that the generation to carry it is already here.

“This generation – I’m talking about the 18 to 25 year olds right now – they would die for their faith. I haven’t seen a group of young men and women like this in my lifetime.” –

John Bevere

"I've never had this kind of urgency in 43 years of ministry," he said. "I believe the hour is very, very late. We're approaching the midnight hour. And I don't want to see you without oil."

As the end of time draws to a close the question we must all ask now is this: Are we ready for the return of our King?

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Alex Jones Says Trump Under 'Demonic Influences ' After Blasting Critics Online

President Donald Trump is not holding back his feelings regarding some of the most influential right-wing podcasters on the internet.

In a post on his Truth Social, Trump blasted commentators Candace Owens, Tucker Carlson, Megyn Kelly and Alex Jones.

In the post, he wrote:

I know why Tucker Carlson, Megyn Kelly, Candace Owens, and Alex Jones have all been fighting me for years, especially by the fact that they think it is wonderful for Iran, the Number One State Sponsor of Terror, to have a Nuclear Weapon – Because they have one thing in common, Low IQs.

The president continued by pointing out that they have all gone on to make their own podcasts after working at larger networks, and that they are not “MAGA.”

After this, Jones made a video on X, where he said that he prays for

Trump to be released from “demonic influences.”

To order Troy Anderson’s new book, Designated Disrupter,
visit .

Melania Trump just contradicted her husband and said that the Epstein case cover-up is real and needs to be investigated.

*In the below report,
I respond to President Trump’s unprecedented attack against myself and his other former top supporters..*

*– Alex Jones
(@RealAlexJones)
April 9, 2026*

“At the end of the day, I just feel sorry for him and pray that God touch his heart and soul, free him from the demonic

influences that he's under," Jones stated. "This is a 's gone from wiping out whole civilizations and acting like a super villain; I have to come out and say I don't support him."

In a time when voices are clashing and alliances are shifting, the call for discernment has never been more urgent. Scripture reminds us that our struggle is not merely against flesh and blood, but against unseen forces—and moments like this serve as a sobering reminder to pray, seek wisdom and stay grounded in truth as the noise grows louder.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a

B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Why Deliverance Alone Won't Set You Free: The Missing Half Most Christians

Never Address

Grace believes that just as there was a final showdown at the Red Sea between the Jews and the Egyptians, there may be one more battle at the Strait of Hormuz.

“Continue to be watchmen right now. Be in the Word of God every single day,” she charged audiences with.

As tensions rise and timelines collide in ways that echo Scripture, this moment serves as more than just a geopolitical flashpoint—it is a wake-up call. Just as God delivered His people through the waters in the days of Exodus, believers today are being called to stand firm, discern the times and remain anchored in truth.

In an hour marked by shaking, uncertainty and spiritual confrontation, the charge is clear: stay vigilant. The same God who parted the Red Sea is still sovereign over nations, leaders and outcomes.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Thousands Impacted as Revival Fire Sweeps Through Samford University

The next generation isn't lost. They are embracing Jesus with all that they have.

UniteUS had their most recent event at Samford University in Alabama, where thousands of students joined together in praise, worship, prayer, repentance and even baptism.

In a post on

Instagram, UniteUS founder Tonya Prewett described the event as one where students were set free of chains and bondage.

To order Kathryn Krick's new book, Ignite Revival, visit .

God moved at Samford University where thousands of college students gathered for a powerful night of worship. So many students were set free from years of unforgiveness, secret sin and addiction. The testimonies are pouring in. We baptized students until after midnight! To God be the glory!

Christine Marie wasn't sent in. She chose to go. A cult expert with real education and experience, she relocated from Las Vegas to a remote Utah community – two and a half hours away – where members of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints were living in the shadow of their imprisoned leader, Warren Jeffs.

In a powerful interview with CBS Sunday Morning, Marie explained why she moved to the area and what she discovered once she was there.

" I moved from Las Vegas, two and a half hours away, to this community. Because I had experience and education, I thought that I could help the people in that community. I went there to help," Marie said.

What she found was not the stable, if unconventional, community she expected. It was something more dangerous: a power vacuum being filled by one man's hunger for control.

The parasite prophet

Samuel Bateman had a reputation before he became a so-called prophet. Neighbors described him as a man who was never taken seriously: divorced, dismissed, overlooked. Yet within a fragile community desperately missing its spiritual leader, he found the opening he needed.

"Sam became a parasite off Warren Jeffs. Because people had so much loyalty and love for Warren Jeffs, with Warren Jeffs in prison, Sam started representing that Warren Jeffs was communicating with him, and made himself the new mouthpiece," she shared.

To order your copy of the Spiritual Warfare Bible,
visit .

His following was small – just three converted families – but the damage he did inside those families was catastrophic. Bateman forced the marriage of minors and used his invented prophetic authority to control every aspect of their lives.

The wall of silence

Marie explained that the situation was brought to law enforcement repeatedly. The response was always the same: without a victim willing to come forward, there would be no charges.

"The minute I learned a new piece of evidence, I would let them know, and then the fact that they didn't act on it was so frustrating to me. But it's not unique to this town. A lot of law enforcement agencies want a victim before they will charge," Marie said.

The weight of betrayal

The title of the Netflix docu-series that Christian Marie was part of, Trust Me: The False Prophet, carries a double meaning. It names the lie Bateman told his followers. But it also names the impossible position Christine found herself in.

Director Rachel Dretzin saw this conflict as the emotional spine of the entire film.

"In many ways, Christine is our proxy – the audience learns the story just as she does, in real time. The torture she goes through, the internal conflict, is very central to the story," Dretzin said.

The hero nobody expected

In the end, the evidence that put Bateman away didn't come from law enforcement. It came from a mother, Julia, who had five daughters among Bateman's wives. She broke the community's code of silence and became, as Christine put it, "the real hero."

Bateman was sentenced to 50 years in prison. The community, fractured and healing, continues to rebuild. Pray that Bateman's victims are able to find true healing and restoration through Jesus Christ.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.