

'Great Miracle': Donald Trump Proclaims the Gospel Before Easter Holiday

President Donald Trump is proclaiming the Good News of the Gospel ahead of Resurrection Sunday.

During a lunch with Christian leaders from around the nation, Trump shared a powerful message about Jesus.

"On Good Friday, the Son of God was nailed to the cross, crucified, and He died," Trump stated. "For all of us. It was a day of darkness, but it wasn't the end. By any means, it was not the end."

Trump further shared how this day of Jesus' death led up to His resurrection on Sunday.

"On Easter Sunday, the stone was rolled away and the grave was empty. Christians everywhere rejoiced, and we continue to rejoice."

The President then called the resurrection of Jesus, "a miracle.."

"It was the miracle in all of history, the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It was one of the was the great miracle, I guess, right? The great miracle.

He told His followers, 'I am with you always, even to the end of the age.' Because of the events of Holy Week 20 centuries ago, people from every nation, language and background can take on any difficulty, press through any trial and endure any hardship. With Christ, not one thing can separate humanity from the powers of God's everlasting love," he continued.

As the message of the cross echoes once again across America, the question is no longer whether God is speaking—but whether a nation will respond.

Scripture reminds us in 2 Chronicles 7:14 that if God's people humble themselves, pray, seek His face and turn from their wicked ways, then He will hear from heaven, forgive their sin and heal their land. The promise has never changed—but it has always required a response.

Could it be that this Easter season marks more than remembrance—but a turning point? As the call to prayer goes forth, America stands at a crossroads between repentance and resistance. The question now remains: Will we answer when God calls?

Powerful Worship Breaks Out at the White House Ahead of Resurrection Sunday

Praise and worship are filling the halls of the White House during Holy Week.

During an Easter luncheon in the East Wing of the White House, a group of Christian leaders gathered to praise and honor Jesus, including through a remarkable rendition of “The Old Rugged Cross.”

From a small gathering of just 12 people in a hotel room to more than 6,000 worshippers each Sunday, the rise of 2819 Church has been nothing short of extraordinary.

In an interview with CBN, Pastor Philip Anthony Mitchell explains how this growth has nothing to do with human strategy.

“There is no way we could manufacture what’s happening right now in our own strength... we’re just thankful that we are allowed to be a part of what He’s doing,” Mitchell said.

Mitchell’s story begins far from the pulpit. Raised in Queens, New York, in what he described as a “very strong urban environment,” his early life was marked by struggle, legal trouble and deep personal darkness.

After relocating to North Carolina at 18, he spiraled further—battling hopelessness and even attempting suicide.

Everything changed in November 2003.

A Supernatural Encounter That Changed Everything

Mitchell recalls a defining moment when his then-girlfriend—now his wife—responded to a car accident by worshiping God.

“I remember watching her thinking... I don’t know what that is, but whatever it is, I want that for myself,” he said.

That hunger led him to cry out to God in a bathroom—a moment he describes as undeniably supernatural.

“God met me in that bathroom in a very supernatural and powerful way... for the first time I felt guilty for sin... and I knew I had passed from death to life.”

Some time later, while reading Proverbs 3:5–6, Mitchell sensed a call to ministry—but ran from it for four years.

From Ambition to Surrender

After launching Victory Church, Mitchell admits his early motivations were mixed.

“I had a lot of jealousy, a lot of covetousness... want a big church... want to be known... all these things were in my heart,” he said.

A turning point came during a trip to Israel, where a prophetic word from a group of Brazilian believers reshaped his calling.

“God says to you, ‘young man, do you want to go back to your country and do something about it?’”

Mitchell responded with a resounding yes.

Soon after, the church was renamed 2819—reflecting the Great

Commission of Matthew 28:19—and everything changed.

“We had 183 disciples when we changed the name and everything changed,” he said.

A Message the Church Can't Ignore

Despite the rapid growth, Mitchell resists taking credit.

“I think people are showing up because God is causing them to,” he said.

Instead, his focus has shifted to a sobering burden—one he believes the global church must urgently hear.

“I feel... this deep sense from God that time is running out on us... and a large portion of His bride is not paying attention,” Mitchell warned.

His message is clear: the church must move beyond division and return to its core mission.

“We need to be about the business of the spread of the gospel... winning souls, multiplying disciples... I'm preaching like a man running out of time,” he said.

A Call to Repentance and Readiness

Mitchell believes the path forward begins with a renewed vision of God's holiness—and a deep awareness of sin.

In a generation hungry for authenticity over comfort, his uncompromising call to repentance is resonating.

And as the clock ticks, his message echoes with urgency: the time for passive faith is over. The church must awaken—before it's too late.

‘Nonhuman Biologics’ Discovered? Inside the Shocking UFO Testimony

In a powerful interview with Benny Johnson, former Congress member Matt Gaetz shared details of what he described as one of the most bizarre briefings he encountered during his time in office—one involving alleged alien-human hybrid programs, unexplained aerial phenomena and technology that appears far beyond human capability.

Gaetz recounted being approached by a U.S. Army official who claimed the military was operating secret programs involving “non-human biologics” and claimed hybridization efforts between aliens and humans.

“I had someone come and brief me who was in a military uniform... that was briefing me on the locations of hybrid breeding programs where captured aliens were breeding with humans,” he said.

According to the account, the individual—described as a senior enlisted Army member—claimed there were “between six and 12 locations around the country” where such activities were taking place.

“I turned to my general counsel at the time and was like, ‘What was that?’” he recalled, adding that his team considered the possibility the individual “lost his mind and made a PowerPoint deck.”

Despite the extraordinary nature of the claims, the conversation did not end there.

Gaetz pointed to testimony given before the House Oversight Committee by whistleblower David Grusch, who alleged that the U.S. government had recovered not only crashed craft but also “biologics” that could not be identified as human.

“The testimony was that... it wasn’t just the hard materials. It was also biologics, but that they couldn’t identify a human source,” he said.

While he expressed skepticism toward the more sensational claims, he made it clear that his own experiences with classified material left a lasting impression.

“I do believe that there has been crash recovery,” he stated.

Even more striking were his descriptions of classified radar footage he personally observed—footage he says defies current technological understanding.

“When you see radar of multiple vessels or craft merging into one vessel and then being able to merge out of that repeatedly, that is not a technology that we possess,” he said.

He went on to describe formations of objects moving in coordination, splitting apart and reforming mid-air—capabilities echoed in publicly circulated drone footage showing similar phenomena.

“I’ve seen things in classified settings that are not explainable with the technology we know is available,” he added.

The discussion also touched on the possibility that such technology has been studied or even reverse-engineered by U.S. defense contractors, including Lockheed Martin.

“I believe that the United States military has benefited from the acquisition of technology... I just know it’s not something that is indigenous to our own defense ecosystem,” he said.

As conversations around UFO disclosure continue to grow, Gaetz suggested that if more information were made public, it could fundamentally challenge humanity’s understanding of technology—and possibly our place in the universe.

In a time when Scripture warns of deception and signs that would astonish the world, moments like these serve as a reminder to remain grounded in truth, discerning what is real, what is unknown and what may point to a greater spiritual war on the horizon.

Heaven Showed Him What's Coming: Why This Near-Death Survivor Says We Are Almost Out of Time

On the eve of Passover 2026, prophetic minister Amanda Grace delivered one of the most wide-ranging and weighty words she has released – a sweeping declaration of divine exposure, judgment, political infiltrators and corrupt institutions.

“This is a time of great transition and change in the administration,” Grace declared, recounting what she heard in the spirit on March 26. “The secrets of those who have turned in their hearts – those of conservative thought and influence – in this time it is appointed to be exposed.”

Grace described a sophisticated web of infiltration within conservative political circles, warning that the America First movement itself has been “hijacked” and “weaponized against” President Donald Trump by a foreign entity. “It’s mutated into something it was never meant to be,” she said pointedly.

Among the most striking declarations was a direct prophetic warning over the White House itself. “A prophetic door will open at the White House,” Grace announced, “and the foot that has been blocking such will be exposed and removed, says the Lord.” She also issued an urgent call to pray for Director of National Intelligence Tulsi Gabbard: “A coup will be attempted against her. She will see the supernatural move on her behalf, says the Lord.”

Grace also gave a stark warning for Pennsylvania Governor Josh Shapiro. “For that governor, his name is about to be smeared in such scandal and debauchery,” Grace read, adding that “the government of Pennsylvania is about to be implicated, says the Lord.”

On the international stage, Grace prophesied a coming reckoning over Lebanon and Hezbollah, warning that “the serpent that feeds you in Lebanon shall be struck at the head,” and that “physical plans for one of the largest terror attacks in the region that was to come within six months, says the Lord” – shall be found and thwarted.

For the World Economic Forum’s most prominent voice, Grace offered a sobering ultimatum. “[Yuval Noah] Harari shall indeed be put in his place and silenced from his continual venom. He shall now meet his maker, who he has proclaimed before the world does not exist,” she said, framing it as a mercy warning before the window of repentance closes.

Grace reserved some of her most personal and tender words for President Trump’s own spiritual journey. “Even the president himself in a moment of crisis shall in humility call on Me,” she read, describing a coming encounter where, she explained, “the Holy Spirit really gets a hold” of him – mind, soul and spirit.

Secretary of State Marco Rubio received a remarkable prophetic mantle in the word as well. “Marco Rubio shall evangelize the nations, the hardened leaders, diplomats and rogue oligarchs. He shall be compelled to preach. Marco Rubio shall preach the gospel in Israel,” Grace declared, “that will open a door that has remained closed until now.”

Grace closed the word with a thunderous promise: “A prophetic door is opening. A Red Sea moment will bring global attention to my word, says the Lord.”

The hour, she insists, is not one of fear – but of preparation. “When the Lord says these things,” Grace urged, “it’s always to warn ahead so you’re getting ahead of it.”
