

Holy Week Shock: Jesus' Tomb Closed as Sacred Fire Mystery Grows

For what may be the first time in modern history, the Church of the Holy Sepulchre—the site widely believed to house the tomb of Jesus Christ—has gone silent during Holy Week.

This unprecedented shutdown comes at the very moment Christians around the world prepare to remember Palm Sunday and the resurrection of Christ. But the disruption does not stop there. Restrictions have also impacted the Western Wall, Judaism's most sacred place of prayer, and even the Al-Aqsa Mosque on the Temple Mount has faced closures amid escalating tensions.

This convergence of events raises a sobering question: Is this merely geopolitical instability, or could it carry deeper prophetic significance?

A Sacred Tradition Interrupted

For nearly 1,700 years, one of the most mysterious phenomena in Christianity has taken place inside the Church of the Holy Sepulchre—the appearance of the “Holy Fire,” a flame said to manifest annually during Holy Week.

However, with access restricted and the church closed, an unsettling question emerges: What happens if the fire comes with no witnesses? Or what if it does not appear at all?

To order Abby Trivett's new book, The Power of Suddenly, visit

.

Echoes of Revelation?

For many believers, the implications stretch beyond current events and into biblical prophecy.

The book of Revelation speaks of a time when Jerusalem will be marked by tension, division and upheaval. Revelation 11 describes a period when the holy city is trampled, and global attention is fixed on the place “where also their Lord was crucified.”

With multiple faiths now experiencing disruption at their most sacred sites simultaneously, some see striking parallels.

As we approach Passover 2026, prophetic minister Amanda Grace went live with what she described as one of the most weighty words she has ever delivered.

The timing, she emphasized, was no accident. Just as a powerful prophetic word preceded Purim and was followed by dramatic events in Iran, this word arrives on the threshold of Passover, the season that forever marked God’s intervention in the affairs of nations.

The Passover Connection: God Is Still Delivering His People

At the heart of Grace’s message is a Passover-rooted declaration: the God who broke Egypt’s superpower is moving again.

“We are honoring what You did, delivering Your people,” she prayed, “honoring that You broke the superpower of the world and put on a demonstration before the world.”

The word itself draws direct lines between ancient Exodus events and present-day geopolitics. Grace warned that Egypt is “about to rise up,” describing it as “a reverse Arab spring” in which leaders will harden their hearts, with language unmistakably drawn from Pharaoh’s story. She told her audience to read Exodus now: “I believe we are going to see very soon align with what we see happening today.”

Lebanon, she declared, faces a similar reckoning: “Lebanon, Lebanon, your time of judgment has come, says the Lord, O King of Tyre. Your cup is full.”

A Nation at a Crossroads

The word carries pointed warnings for American political life. Grace described a season of sweeping exposure: from Congress to the Cabinet to state governments, with Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Chicago, Colorado and New York all named as sites of coming upheaval.

“New York City is about to be shaken,” Grace stated, with departments tied to “terror and espionage” set to be uncovered.

To order Amanda Grace’s new book, Brace For Impact, visit .

Perhaps most striking is the rebuke of the America First movement itself: “Oh America First, when will you realize it is Almighty God first?” The Lord, Grace relayed, declared He is “not in a covenant with America First,” but rather with the nation as originally dedicated to Him for the purposes of the gospel.

Mercy in the Midst of Judgment

Even the word’s sharpest warnings carry an undertone of mercy.

“There is always mercy,” Grace said. “When there is a warning like that, you will see an element of mercy somewhere within it.”

The Church’s Moment

Grace then closed with a thunderclap charge to the Body of Christ. This is not a season for soft sermons or silent pulpits.

“The church needs the watchman. The church needs the fivefold. The church needs voices that will unapologetically speak the truth.”

She sees what is unfolding not as chaos but as the birth pangs of Matthew 24 playing out in real time, with God actively resetting the clocks of nations to align with His word.

“He is not at a stalemate. He is not at an impasse. He is on the throne. He is on the move.”

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Oklahoma House Passes ‘Cindy Clemishire Act’ After Robert

Morris Abuse Scandal

A new bill, unanimously passed by the Oklahoma House of Representatives, has been designated the “Cindy Clemishire Act,” according to a new report from ChurchLeaders.

The bill, 4227, serves to restrict the usage of nondisclosure agreements, or NDAs, when regarding child abuse cases, and make reporting requirements of crimes instead.

According to the report, this legislation is modeled on “Trey’s Law,” which was passed in both Texas and Missouri. Trey Carlock was a victim of sexual abuse as a child at a Christian camp, Kanakuk Camp, located in Missouri. Carlock signed an NDA and could not take any legal measures against the camp before his death by suicide.

Cindy Clemishire has spoken openly about what she endured, stating, “because I refused to sign that document giving up the right to freely speak about events in my Morris was indicted.”

To order Chad MacDonald’s new book, Defeating Darkness, visit .

According to the report, this new act would mean, “Any settlement agreement that conceals the details relating to a claim of child sexual abuse or child sexual exploitation is void and unenforceable.”

This new bill comes as Robert Morris is expected to be released from prison near Easter and Passover after spending six months behind bars.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

From Persia to Prophecy: How the Iran Crisis Is Setting the Stage for Messianic Times

Are we one step closer to a heavily AI-controlled nation?

During a Fostering the Future summit regarding AI and the future of education, First Lady Melania Trump brought a special guest to the White House: a humanoid robot.

During the summit with world leaders, a humanoid robot identified as "Figure 3" took the stage and introduced itself to attendees.

"I am a humanoid built in the United States of America," the robot said. "I am grateful to be part of this historic movement to empower children with technology and education."

The moment marked a striking example of how artificial intelligence is no longer confined to theory but is now taking on human-like form in real-world settings.

AI Education: A Personalized Future

Following the robot's remarks, Trump described how artificial intelligence could soon revolutionize education through humanoid systems designed to teach children.

“Imagine a humanoid educator named Plato,” she said. “Access to the classical studies is now instantaneous. Literature, science, art, philosophy, mathematics and history. Humanity’ is available in the comfort of your home.”

Trump then outlined a scenario in which this technology would create a highly individualized learning experience.

To order Troy Anderson’s new book, Designated Disrupter, visit .

“Plato will provide a personalized experience adaptive to the needs of each student,” she said. “Plato is always patient and always available.”

According to Trump, such systems could help students develop critical thinking and reasoning skills while adapting in real time to their pace, prior knowledge and even emotional state.

A Turning Point in Human History

Trump also pointed to the broader implications of artificial intelligence across society, describing it as a defining moment in history.

“This technology may reset the modern world order and rebalance power,” she said.

Despite the optimism surrounding innovation, Trump also emphasized caution.

“We must balance our tech optimism with caution. The safety of our next generation is always paramount,” she said.

Preparing the Next Generation

Leaders at the event stressed the importance of equipping young people with the skills necessary to thrive in a rapidly evolving, technology-driven world.

“America, we are obligated to ensure that our children become the most technologically fluent and highly educated generation in the world,” Trump said.

A Prophetic Perspective on the Rise of AI

As artificial intelligence advances from digital systems to human-like forms, its implications extend beyond innovation into the spiritual landscape of our time. What once seemed like science fiction is now standing at the highest levels of global influence—speaking, teaching and preparing to shape the next generation.

While these technologies promise progress, they also call for discernment. The same systems designed to educate and empower can influence how people think, what they believe and how they perceive reality.

This is a moment where we must remain anchored in God’s Word and be guided by the Holy Spirit. There is no other option than to walk in wisdom, testing all things and holding fast to what is true.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

‘Absolutely Demonic’: Iranian Christian Sounds Alarm on Growing Anti-Israel Movement

When Kim Clement stood on a platform in Paris on Nov. 14, 2010, the Middle East looked nothing like it does today. Yet the words he spoke that night are now circulating across social media with a sense of urgency that is hard to dismiss.

Speaking at a prophetic gathering in Paris, Clement declared:

But Europe will be affected. And the same way that Daniel was praying, there was a war in the heavenlies – Prince of Persia. There was a battle going on as there is today. And France shall join forces with Great Britain and some other nations. There will be a war. It shall be a short war. Hear me please. This war – and I’m not talking about a spiritual war – a war will take place. It shall be short-lived because as France destroyed the power of invasion from the Middle East in the seventh century, so shall it rise up and destroy the invading forces or the beast of the east, and they will overcome an agreement between Russia and Iran.

Fast forward to March 19, 2026. A joint statement was issued by leaders of the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands, Japan and more than 20 other nations pledging support to secure the Strait of Hormuz – the vital waterway carrying roughly 20 percent of the world’s oil supply, now under direct threat from Iran. The alignment of nations is nearly point-for-point what Clement named on that Paris stage.

“The Beast of the East”

What makes Clement’s prophecies particularly striking is that they went beyond geopolitics. He identified the conflict not merely as a regional war but as an ideological and spiritual collision. He also named the enemy directly.

Three days before the Paris gathering, on Nov. 11, 2010, Clement delivered a separate prophecy in the Netherlands. In that message, he said:

Now there is a storm brewing, says the Lord, but this is not a natural one. And God said there will be a great massive fight. Just one war. One war shall manifest in four different countries. The beast of the east who has said we will remove Christianity in total – in total – from Europe, America, Israel. We will remove their God and we will bring Allah. There is a storm brewing. But God says, “I have already prepared the angels. I have already prepared an outpouring and that which is dying shall suddenly come back to life.”

Clement framed the entire conflict as a spiritual campaign aimed at the erasure of Christianity from Western civilization. He then addressed the nations in the room directly – nations now appearing in the same joint statement on the Strait of Hormuz:

Italy... Germany... France... You made an alliance. You were an ally to the Third Reich. There is a fourth one arising from the east to take over your streets, to take over your children and remove Jesus. But the spirit of God said truth will prevail. A cause will not prevail and the people will begin to arise from the streets.

He went on to prophesy a spiritual outpouring across Europe, declaring that places of pain would become places of revival.

Estonia: The Stone in David's Sling

Perhaps the most unexpected detail in Clement's prophetic record is the one that has stunned even longtime followers of his ministry.

In March 2014 – more than a decade before the current conflict – Clement called out a nation that most Americans had never heard of. Speaking March 20 in Camarillo, Calif., he declared:

Russia, Ukraine, Poland, Germany, Estonia – you shall be the troublemaker. You shall reckon Putin who claims himself as a czar to bring back a system of control and pain and suppression. I laugh at you. When all the nations stand before me now without intelligence, without understanding, they know nothing.

Nine days later, on March 29, he returned to Estonia with even greater specificity:

Estonia. Estonia. Full of little nation that will bring the stone to the head of Goliath. I prophesy – light, light, victory, salvation. Your kingdom come. Your kingdom come. Your kingdom come.

In March 2026, Estonia's foreign minister stepped forward before most of Europe's larger nations had committed, stating that the country was "ready to discuss participation" in a mission to secure the strait and offering what the minister described as "some maybe specific capabilities." It was a small nation stepping into a global moment – much as Clement had described.

To order Amanda Grace's new book, Brace For Impact, visit .

A Short War – and a Reformation

Consistent across Clement's prophecies on this subject is his insistence that the conflict would not spiral into a prolonged engagement. Closing the Paris prophecy, he said:

They will only win because I placed this house on the soil of France, and because of your words the battle shall be won in the heavenlies, says the Lord... Now don't get frightened. We have an enemy that wants to invade, take Christ out of Europe. Sitting on the front row here, there's a pastor from the Netherlands and a pastor from England. They represent the soil and the territories. God is going to pour out his spirit. Germany will be included, Italy – there shall be a great move of the Spirit.

And beyond the conflict itself, Clement saw a sweeping spiritual awakening rising from the nations now standing together:

God said there's going to be a reformation, but this time God said, "I'll use Germany. I'll use Italy. Yes, I'll use Holland, the Netherlands. I'll use France. They will stand and they will stand against the spirit – and that will be the countries that I'll begin a great reformation and there will be an abolishment of the laws of men and your young men and young women shall rise, rise, rise and shout, shout, shout."

Scripture tells us in Ephesians 6:12 that "we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers," pointing to a deeper conflict beneath the surface of global events. The urgency of the hour is clear: the church must awaken, stand firm in truth and recognize the times we are in.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Salvations, Baptisms and Healing: Hundreds of Students Encounter Jesus at the University of Pittsburgh

We are not waiting for a spiritual revival to happen. It's already taking place.

During the latest UniteUS event, hundreds of students gave their lives to Christ and buried their old lives through baptism.

In a powerful video, students can be seen coming to the altar, where they hear the Good News of the Gospel: that nothing they've ever done can keep them out of heaven or bring them into it. Instead, it's all a magnificent gift from God.

UniteUS founder Tonya Prewett posted on Instagram about the event, writing:

Hundreds made decisions to go all in with Jesus tonight and were baptized at the University of Pittsburgh! God continues to do something new on every campus and tonight we witnessed many people getting physically healed! We baptized until after midnight and the testimonies are pouring in!

Deliverance is powerful. It's real. And through the power of the Holy Spirit, chains are broken every single day.

But there's a sobering reality many believers face: freedom doesn't always last.

In a striking teaching, John Ramirez addressed the question many quietly wrestle with—why do people get delivered, only to fall back into bondage months later?

“The same devil in a different suit shows up... back in shackles... back in strongholds... back in bondage,” he said.

The Door Was Closed—But Never Locked

According to Ramirez, the issue isn't that deliverance wasn't real. The Holy Spirit truly sets people free.

But something critical is often overlooked.

“You closed the door on the devil... but you forgot to lock the door,” he explained.

To order John Ramirez's book, Exposing the Devil's Playbook, visit

.

Using a powerful analogy, he compared spiritual life to securing a home. Closing a door isn't enough—without locking it, the threat can return at any moment.

Spiritually, that “door” represents access points—habits, mindsets and behaviors that once gave the enemy legal ground.

Deliverance Is Not the Finish Line

One of the most impactful truths from the teaching is this: “Deliverance is not the finish line... it is the starting line of a new season,” Ramirez said.

Too many believers treat deliverance as the end of the journey instead of the beginning of a transformed life.

After freedom comes responsibility.

“What am I going to do from the starting line... with that moment of freedom that God gave me?” he asked.

The Danger of an Empty House

The teaching draws on a biblical principle: when a spirit leaves, the “house” is left empty.

And emptiness is dangerous.

“The problem is not the disorder... the danger is the emptiness,” he warned .

Many believers remove sinful patterns or demonic influences—but fail to replace them with godly ones.

That empty space becomes an invitation.

“You remove things out of the house, but you don’t replace it with nothing,” he said. “That is the key.”

How to Lock the Door for Good

So how does lasting freedom actually happen?

The answer is not a moment—it’s a lifestyle.

“Submission is not a moment... submission is a lifestyle,” he emphasized.

Daily obedience to the Holy Spirit becomes the lock on the door. This includes:

- Guarding what you watch and listen to
- Controlling your words and reactions
- Resisting the urge to return to old habits
- Developing new, godly patterns of thinking

The enemy, he explains, doesn't just come back for the person—he comes back for familiar patterns.

"The demon recognizes old patterns of your life that you never changed," Ramirez said.

Fill the House, Guard the Door

Ramirez's final charge is both simple and profound: "Fill the house. Guard the door."

The Word of God becomes the "broom" that cleans the house. The Holy Spirit fills it. And a renewed lifestyle keeps it secure.

Drawing from his own testimony of being delivered after 25 years in the demonic world, he declared victory is possible:

"I swept the house with the Word of God... I filled the house with the Holy Spirit... and I guard the door... those demons don't know my address anymore."

And for every believer seeking lasting freedom, that can be your story too.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism.

She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.