‘No One Tells Trump What to Do’: Netanyahu Unleashes Fiery Defense Amid Iran Conflict

In a striking address to the foreign press, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu repeatedly emphasized the pivotal role of President Donald Trump in the ongoing military campaign against Iran—Operation Roaring Lion—framing the effort as both strategic and deeply aligned between the two nations.

From the outset, Netanyahu made it clear that this is not merely a joint effort, but one shaped by Trump’s decisive leadership. “Under President Trump’s visionary leadership, America and Israel are acting together in Iran with great determination and unprecedented strength,” Netanyahu declared.

Throughout his remarks, Netanyahu pushed back against narratives suggesting that Israel influenced the United States’ involvement in the conflict. Instead, he praised Trump’s independence and conviction.

“Does anyone really think that someone can tell President Trump what to do?” Netanyahu said. “Come on. President Trump always makes his decisions on what he thinks is good for America.”

He went further, suggesting that Trump's decisions are not only rooted in present concerns but also in long-term global stability. "May I add," Netanyahu continued, "I think what is also good for future generations."

The alignment between the U.S. and Israel is not coincidental—it is the result of a shared understanding of the threat posed by Iran. Netanyahu pointed out that Trump has recognized this danger for decades.

"You know who else said that?" Netanyahu asked, referring to warnings about Iran. "President Trump."

He then recounted a personal interaction that he said reveals Trump's clarity on the issue. "I went to see him in Mar-a-Lago. The first thing he said to me was, 'Bibi, we've got to make sure that Iran doesn't have nuclear weapons.' He said that to me. I didn't say it to him."

Netanyahu emphasized that Trump required no persuasion on the matter. “He didn’t need any convincing there either,” he said, reinforcing the idea that Trump’s stance on Iran has been consistent and deeply held.

The Israeli leader also highlighted Trump’s past actions, specifically referencing his decision to withdraw from the Iranian nuclear deal. “He said the Iranian nuclear deal was the worst deal that he’d ever seen, and he walked out of it,” Netanyahu noted.

As the operation unfolds, Netanyahu described the coordination between the two nations as highly synchronized and effective. “Together in close coordination with President Trump… our militaries, our intelligence services, we’re achieving goals in lightning speed,” he said.

But perhaps Netanyahu’s strongest statement came at the conclusion, where he framed Trump’s role in global terms.

“The world owes a debt of deep indebtedness… to President Trump for leading this effort to safeguard our future,” Netanyahu said.

He added that while many world leaders recognize this privately, he is willing to say it openly—suggesting that the implications of this moment extend far beyond Israel and the United States.

For both Netanyahu and the world, this is not just about geopolitics or military success. It is about confronting a threat endangering the entire world.

3-Sided Pyramid Discovered on Mars: Could This Point to a Greater Deception?

A striking image from Mars is stirring global fascination—and controversy—as a pyramid-shaped structure spotted deep within the Red Planet's surface raises questions about what may truly exist beyond Earth.

Located in Candor Chasma, part of the vast Valles Marineris canyon system, the formation appears to be a three-sided, symmetrical structure that bears a striking resemblance to pyramids found on Earth. According to the New York Post, the structure has even been compared in size to the Great Pyramid of Giza, further fueling speculation about its origin.

A Discovery Years in the Making

Though the image is only now gaining viral attention, the structure itself is not new. It was first identified in 2001 by NASA imaging specialist Keith Laney using data from the Mars Global Surveyor. Over the years, the formation has been captured multiple times—between 2001 and 2016—with consistent shape and structure.

Interest reignited after filmmaker Brian Dobbs shared the imagery online, bringing the decades-old discovery back into the spotlight. As reported by NewsNation, the image's resurfacing has sparked renewed public curiosity and debate about what exactly is being seen.

Supernatural Signs of Intelligence?

The most unusual aspect of the discovery lies in its symmetry. Some believe that such geometric precision raises questions about whether the formation could be artificial.

Reports highlighted by the Daily Mail note that interest has also been fueled by references to CIA documents. According to the reports, “Project Stargate” used astral projection to find more information about Mars.

The Daily Mail also noted that a former CIA agent, Joe McMoneagle, said the agency found a pyramid larger than anything seen on Earth, “filled with monster rooms.”

A Prophetic Perspective: Discerning the Times

While discoveries like this captivate the imagination, they also raise deeper, spiritual questions.

Scripture warns that in the last days, deception will increase. Jesus Himself said in Matthew 24 that false signs and wonders would arise, capable of misleading many if possible. The apostle Paul echoed this in 2 Thessalonians, describing a coming deception marked by “lying signs and wonders.”

Could the growing fascination with UFOs, extraterrestrial life and unexplained phenomena be laying the groundwork for something greater? Could this belief that life on a far away planet be part of that deception?

Right now, our call is not to fear, but to remain grounded in truth. As the noise grows louder and the mysteries deepen, discernment becomes essential.

Because in an age of increasing signs and speculation, the greatest deception may not be what is seen—but whether it can take us off course from following Jesus.

A Prophetic Sign? Something From 2,000 Years Ago Is Blooming Again in Israel

Something extraordinary is happening in the heart of Israel—and for many, it feels deeply prophetic.

From the Negev Desert, Israeli tour guide Yoav Rotem shared with CBN News what he calls a "super exciting" discovery: a tree grown from a 2,000-year-old seed, dating back to the time of Jesus and the fall of Jerusalem.

“Right over here behind me, there’s a fascinating story… they plant this tree behind me,” Rotem explained. “This is Methuselah, the tree that sprouted in 2005… We are having here the oldest seed that ever sprouted.”

A Miracle Rooted in History

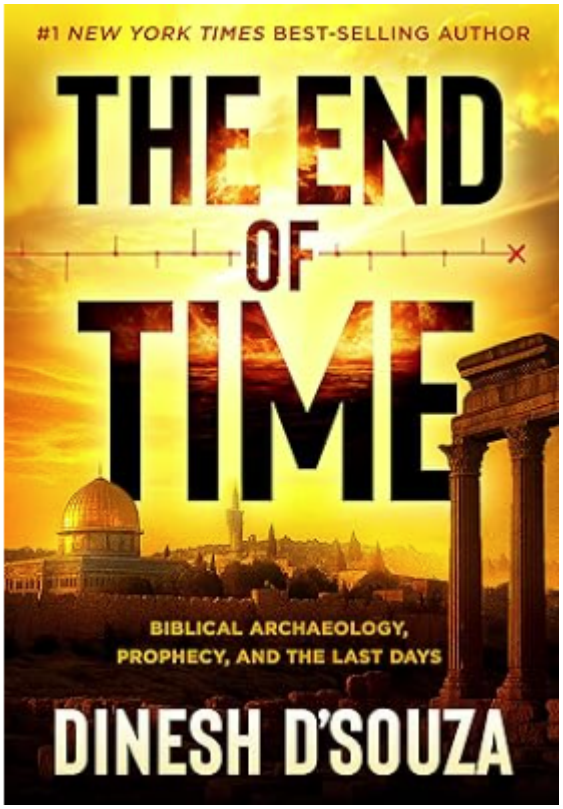
The story begins in the 1960s, when archaeologists excavating Masada—the famed stronghold tied to Jewish resistance against Rome—discovered ancient date pits.

These seeds sat dormant for two millennia.

Then, in 2005, scientists at the Arava Institute successfully revived one.

“Date pits from 2,000 years ago… and that’s very exciting,” Rotem said. “Scholars… actually managed to sprout one of these date pits.”

The result was Methuselah—a living link to biblical times.



To order Dinesh D’Souza’s new book,* The End of Time, *visit

Amazon.com.

Though initially disappointing as a male tree that could not bear fruit, later discoveries changed everything.

“Among them, two female trees… If you have female trees and a male tree, you can have fruits,” Rot said. “We can have today right over here some dates from 2,000 years ago.”

A Biblical Symbol Reborn

This isn’t just a scientific breakthrough—it’s a spiritual sign.

“The date palm tree is going with the land of Israel… it’s connected to God. It’s connected to promise,” he said.

He pointed to Scripture, noting, “In the book of Psalms… the righteous is referred to as a palm tree that is blooming.”

He also highlighted how palm trees appear in the future temple described in the Book of Ezekiel and were central to Israel’s identity.

Even the “honey” of the Promised Land, he explained, was not bee honey—but date syrup.

“The biblical honey is date syrup… This is the honey of the land,” Rotem said.

From Destruction to Restoration

The symbolism deepens when considering the tree’s origin.

“These pits [are] from the time of the destruction… and what’s going on here? It’s blooming. It’s sprouted,” Rotem said.

He connected this directly to Israel’s history and prophetic restoration:

“Think of the Jewish people… the destruction… the Jews are kicked out of Judea… but then 2,000 years later, we have something huge that is happening here in the land.”

Referencing the vision of dry bones in the Book of Ezekiel 37, he added:

“Our hope is gone… and then God is bringing them back to life.”

The Desert Is Blooming

Beyond one tree, Rotem says the transformation of Israel itself points to something greater.

“When you drive… you see carpets of green,” he said. “The desert becoming a farmland… only prophecy can describe.”

He pointed to Isaiah’s words about the desert flourishing, saying what is happening today is “unbelievable… part of maybe prophecy that is being fulfilled right now.”

Despite ongoing conflict, he remains hopeful:

“With all of that… we’re going to get peace. We pray for peace… and it will come.”

From a seed buried in the ashes of destruction to a tree now bearing life again, the message is hard to ignore.

What once symbolized defeat has become a sign of renewal.

And in the deserts of Israel—both physical and spiritual—something ancient is blooming once again.

Tommy Robinson to Glenn Beck: Europe's Crisis Is a Preview of What's Coming to America

In a powerful interview with Glenn Beck, British activist and citizen journalist Tommy Robinson laid out a sobering warning about what he believes is happening across Europe—and what could soon unfold in the United States.

Robinson made clear from the outset that he does not believe current global trends are accidental. "None of it's a mistake," he said. "This has all been planned… and it's being very fastly accelerated right now."

Throughout the conversation, Robinson pointed to what he described as dramatic cultural and demographic changes across major European cities. "Most cities now, most major cities," he said. "You could blindfold yourself, get off a plane, land in London, Berlin, or Paris… you'd think you're in Kashmir."

He argued that these shifts are not simply about diversity, but about a deeper issue, in particular, of Muslim identity and integration. According to Robinson, entire communities are forming without adopting the culture or values of the nations they now inhabit.

A central focus of the discussion was the ongoing scandal involving grooming gangs in the United Kingdom. Robinson claimed the scale of the crisis was hidden for decades. “They successfully conspired to cover this up for 30 years,” he said.

He further asserted that when the issue finally began to surface publicly, it created a ripple effect that exposed those in power. “When someone starts talking… all the people who have covered up from over those 30 years have rose into prominence into power,” Robinson said.

Beck reacted strongly to the claims, expressing disbelief at how such cases could go unaddressed. Robinson responded by insisting that full accountability has not yet been reached. “They’re just covering everything,” he said. “They’re hiding everything still now.”

The conversation also turned toward the future of the United States. Robinson warned that America could follow a similar trajectory if leaders fail to recognize what he sees as warning signs. “You’re only at 1% at the minute,” he said. “Are any of your leaders actually looking and thinking, what are you going to do?”

Beck acknowledged the concern, noting the importance of addressing threats early. The two agreed that cultural and political complacency can carry long-term consequences.

Robinson also spoke about what he believes is a growing effort to silence dissenting voices across the West. “They’re trying to clamp down,” he said, referring to increasing pressure on independent voices and citizen journalists.

Despite the gravity of his message, Robinson said he remains committed to continuing his work, regardless of the personal cost. “I believe I’m meant to be doing this,” he said. “I don’t believe I have a choice.”

Robinson’s message was clear: the time to confront these issues is now—before the consequences become irreversible.

Does an ‘Empty Entity’ Lead Iran? Mojtaba Khamenei’s Leadership Faces Intense Scrutiny

Is Mojtaba Khamenei nothing more than an “empty entity” at this point?

A Fox News report noted that Khamenei is far from providing leadership and direction for Iran. As the outlet put it, Khamenei is: “little more than an ’empty entity’ who is not at the helm of the regime…”

Kobi Michael, who is a defense analyst for both the Misgav Institute and the Institute for National Security Studies, told Fox that: “Mojtaba Khamenei does not appear in public, but we also have reliable information that he does not control or lead the regime or what has been left of the regime.”

He further stated that “The current Iranian leadership is broken, confused and is almost misfunctioning.”

Khamenei has been wounded, though to what extent remains unclear. Reports of him potentially being homosexual and that his father didn’t want him in leadership have also come forth during this time of upheaval in Iran. The classification of him as an “empty entity” also raises spiritual questions about what kind of demonic spirits and takeover may be happening with this world leader.

As uncertainty deepens and reports continue to swirl, what is unfolding in Iran is more than a political unraveling—it is a sobering reminder of how fragile human power truly is. Scripture tells us that “when the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice: but when the wicked rule, the people mourn” (Prov. 29:2).

Leadership that is fractured, hidden or absent leaves a vacuum that can plunge a nation into confusion and instability. What we are witnessing may not simply be a crisis of governance, but a deeper exposure of systems built on fear, control and deception rather than truth and righteousness.

‘They’re Demonic’: Astronaut’s Stunning Warning About UFO Encounters

In a reaction video by Isaiah Saldivar, he shared a clip of former astronaut Charlie Duke speaking with Glenn Beck about science, faith, and the supernatural.

“I don’t believe in alien life,” Duke said. “God showed me the specific answer to two prayers—that they’re demonic.”

A Veteran’s Perspective From Space

Duke, a veteran and moonwalker, did not deny the reality of unexplained phenomena.

Instead, he reframed it.

“They’re demonic beings that make an appearance and appear to be real—and they are real,” he explained. “Satan… can appear as an angel of light.”

Referencing the extreme speed and movement of UFO sightings, he added, “Nothing human can make a 90-degree turn at 3,000 miles an hour and survive.”

Scientific Voices Raise Similar Questions

The discussion doesn’t stop with astronauts. Saldivar shared a video clip of an interview with Billy Hallowell and Hugh Ross, an astrophysicist who challenged the extraterrestrial narrative, pointing instead to patterns in so-called “close encounters.”

“When you look at these encounters, they’re never beneficial,” Ross said. “The best you come away with is recurring, terrifying nightmares. Worst-case scenario, you get killed.”

Even more striking, he pointed to a connection between these experiences and occult involvement.

“It’s almost exclusively experienced by people who have significant involvement in the occult,” he said. “When you remove that occult factor, that’s the end of the UFO encounters. Increase it, and you increase the frequency.”

Deception and Changing Narratives

The astrophysicist also highlighted a curious pattern in reported alien communications.

“They used to say they were from the back side of the moon,” Ross explained. “When that became scientifically impossible, they changed their story—to Venus, then Mars, and now other star systems.”

He described cases where individuals entered trance-like states and produced large volumes of writing—known as automatic writing—claiming it came from alien beings.

“One of the most dramatic examples is a massive book… thousands of pages,” he said. “And much of its content denies the deity of Jesus Christ.”

That detail raises a red flag.

A Biblical Lens on the Phenomenon

Second Corinthians 11:14 warns that “Satan himself masquerades as an angel of light,” while Ephesians 6:12 reminds believers that the true battle is “against spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms.”

Saldivar also believes that such phenomena could play a role in end-times deception.

“The devil’s going to use it,” Saldivar suggested. “People will say, ‘It wasn’t the rapture—it was aliens.’”

As conversations about UFOs and extraterrestrial life continue to surge in culture and even in political arenas, believers are reminded that Scripture has already warned of powerful deception in the last days.

The Bible declares in 1 John 4:1 to “test the spirits to see whether they are from God,” and in 2 Thessalonians 2:9–10 that deceptive signs and wonders will lead many astray. The call for Christians is clear: remain anchored in the truth of God’s Word, discerning, watchful and unshaken.

Forbidden Practices and Giants: Troy Brewer Claims Shapeshifting Entity Linked to Satanic Rituals

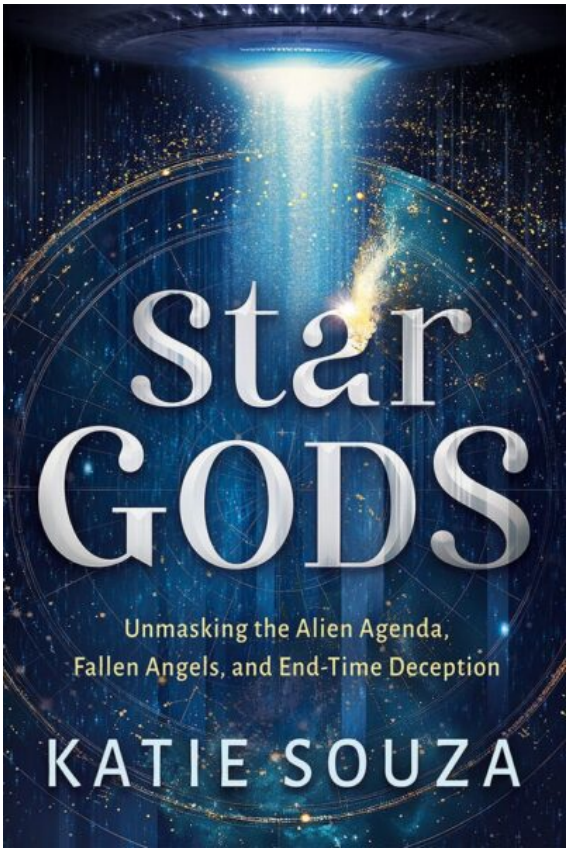
Minister and child rescuer Troy Brewer shared a stunning firsthand account of what he says was a supernatural encounter with a giant while serving in Chiapas, Mexico—an area where his ministry has long worked to rescue children from trafficking.

Speaking with host Katie Souza, Brewer explained that the experience did not happen in isolation, but in the larger context of spiritual warfare surrounding the rescue of exploited children.

“We rescue kids in Chiapas, Mexico, and we have a ministry that rescues children all over the world out of sexual trafficking,” Brewer said. “I’ve been doing that for 30 years. And when you do that, you come across really blurry stuff.”

According to Brewer, the region carries a long history of darkness, ritual abuse and stories of a giant presence. He said that when groups of children disappeared, local people would say, “They fed them to the giant.”

At first, Brewer thought such language was symbolic. But that changed during a prayer gathering on what local believers called “prayer mountain.”



To order Katie Souza's new book,* Star Gods, *visit Amazon.com.

Brewer recalled sitting outside while a group of intercessors prayed over him for hours. As he looked across the landscape, he noticed something unusual on a nearby ridge. "There was this one big lone tree, and I thought that's odd that there's only one big tree there," he said.

Later, when he looked back, he was startled to see what appeared to be a second tree where there had only been one.

Then, he said, the impossible happened.

"As I was looking at it and as I was pondering it, this second tree… all of a sudden, it transformed and two arms came out of the side of it, and two legs appeared, and it turned into a being, and it made a couple of moves, and then it turned back into a tree again," Brewer said.

Brewer said the figure repeatedly shifted between tree-like camouflage and humanoid form. "That is a regional entity. That is a regional little 'G' god. That is the giant that they've been talking about," he said. "This thing had a physicality about it. It wasn't a poof kind of demon. It had a true physicality about it."

When Brewer realized the being seemed to be listening to the prayers going up from the mountain, he confronted it directly. "I leaned forward, and I said, 'I see you, you devil,'" he said. "I am here in the name of King Jesus, and we're going to rescue so many kids, and there's nothing you can do about it."

Brewer said the entity immediately changed into a more menacing form. "It changed into a very scary form," he said. "He didn't care who saw him after that because I told him I saw him."

Wanting confirmation, Brewer called over his son Ben and asked him what he saw. Without being prompted, Ben replied, "It's a giant." Brewer answered, "Yes, sir. It sure is." He then brought over another ministry leader, Jerry, who also reportedly reacted with alarm.

Local pastors were not surprised. Brewer said when he asked if anyone had ever spoken of a giant in the area, "all the pastors went, 'Yeah, there's one that lives on top of that mountain right up there.'"

The moment was not about spectacle. It was about the reality of spiritual opposition surrounding the mission to save vulnerable children. Even so, his conclusion was unwavering: "We are going to rescue children here. Your days of getting away with this is done."

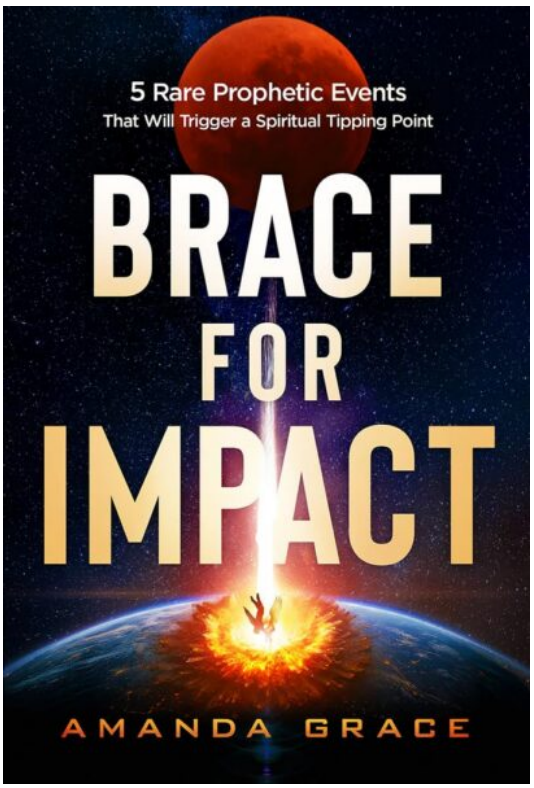
Kim Clement's 2014 Words Are Echoing Again—Is This the Moment He Saw?

Did prophetic words spoken by the late Kim Clement refer to this particular time?

In a post shared to X, Donné Clement Petruska, Clement's daughter, shared how the nation of Estonia is open to helping the United States in their fight against Iran.

"First of all, there must be [a] clear picture of what actually the U.S. needs, if they need anything," Estonian Minister of Foreign Affairs Margus Tsahkn said. "We're taking responsibilities up in North Europe…Russia's still waging the full-scale war in Ukraine and also is a direct threat to Europe. So, we take full responsibilities there…all is ready to support our allies."



To order Amanda Grace's new book,* Brace For Impact, *visit Amazon.com.

This statement eerily echoes a prophecy Kim Clement shared back on March 20, 2014.

> Russia, Ukraine, Poland, Germany, Estonia! You shall be the troublemaker. You shall rattle Putin, who claims himself as a czar to bring back a system of control and pain and suppression.

So, are we about to see the overthrow of Putin?

As global alliances continue to shift and tensions escalate across Europe and the Middle East, moments like this should cause believers to pause and discern the times. Scripture reminds us in Daniel 2:21 that it is God who "removes kings and raises up kings," and no leader, no matter how powerful, stands outside His sovereign hand.

Whether or not this moment directly fulfills Kim Clement's words, the pattern is unmistakable: nations rising, powers trembling, and a world moving toward increasing instability.

Jesus Himself warned in Matthew 24 that in the last days there would be "wars and rumors of wars," not as random chaos, but as signs pointing to a greater unfolding plan.

For the Church, this is not a time for fear—but for awakening. When prophetic words resurface in alignment with world events, they serve as a reminder that God is not silent and history is not spiraling out of control. Instead, we are being called to watch, pray and remain anchored in truth as everything around us shakes.

'Tired of Fluff': Bryce Crawford Uncovers Gen Z's Bold Shift Toward Authentic Faith in Jesus

Gen Z is done with trivial religion. Instead, they are craving a real relationship with Jesus with all that they have.

In a powerful interview with Fox News, evangelist and podcaster Bryce Crawford explained why young adults today are so fervently pursuing a relationship with Jesus.

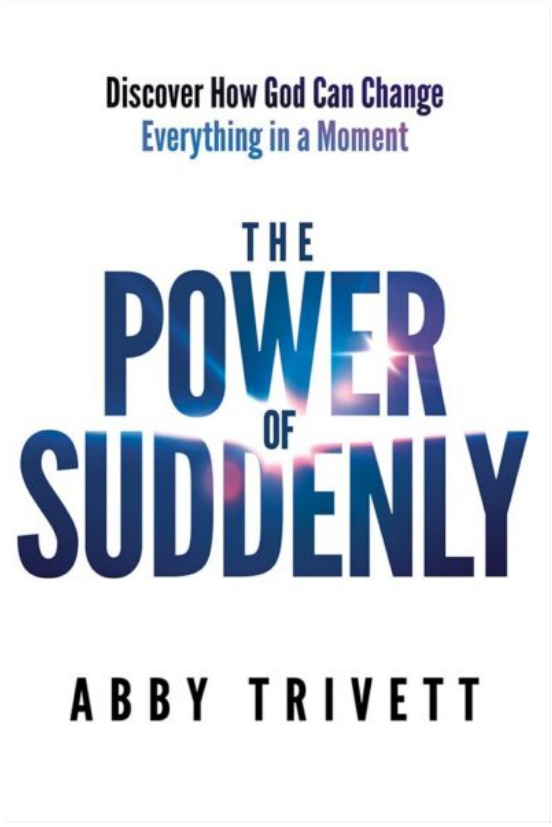
“We’re tired of fake stuff. We’re tired of fluff,” Crawford stated. “We’re fed fluff through our phones, through desires, through whatever we think is going to satisfy.”

Crawford further stated the necessity of what each person is desperately longing for. “Every human being is on a quest for love, and we try to fill that void with different things, and I think people are naturally understanding, ‘Wait, this thing isn’t working anymore. This isn’t going how I thought it was going to go,’ so ultimately, people don’t just want a truth, they want the truth, and that would be Jesus.”



To order Abby Trivett’s new book,* The Power of Suddenly, *visit Amazon.com.

Crawford sees a true wake-up call happening within the next generation to see true change in their lives. “We’ve lived for so many different things, different people, relationships, substances, different vices, and it doesn’t fulfill us.”

What we are witnessing is more than a generational shift—it's a spiritual awakening stirring beneath the surface. Gen Z is rejecting the counterfeit versions of faith that lack power, presence and truth. There is a deep cry rising from this generation: Give us something real. And that cry is not going unanswered. God has always responded to hunger, and Scripture reminds us that those who seek Him will find Him.

The challenge now falls to the church. Will we continue offering polished presentations and empty routines, or will we return to the raw, life-changing reality of the gospel?

'Trojan Horses' and Betrayal: Amanda Grace Sounds Alarm on Media, Government and War

Amanda Grace says the period between Purim and Passover has become one of the most spiritually charged windows she has seen in recent years, especially as turmoil intensifies in the Middle East.

"This window between Purim and Passover has probably been one of the most intense, rapid-fire, no pun intended, events one after the other that I've seen in recent years," Grace said.

According to Grace, the key to understanding this season begins in Jeremiah 49, where she believes Scripture speaks directly to modern-day Iran through the ancient nation of Elam.

Jeremiah 49 and the Prophecy Against Elam

Reading from Jeremiah 49:34-39, Grace emphasized verse 37 in particular: "So I will cause Elam to be shattered before their enemies and before those who seek their lives. And I will bring disaster on them."

Grace argued that the passage is remarkably specific for what is unfolding now. "Elam is Iran," she said, noting that the prophecy concerns "the ruling men of Elam."

She then pointed to what she described as a stunning numerical alignment tied to Iran's leadership. Grace said, "The Ayatollah ruled for 37 years and was killed." She added, "If you add 49 and 37, you get 86. The Ayatollah was 86 years old when he died."

For Grace, the connection was undeniable. "This Scripture was written thousands of years ago," she said. "And it is aligning precisely with the details of the event surrounding the Ayatollah's death."

'The Sword You Have Chased My Children With'

Grace also connected Jeremiah 49 to a prophetic word she says the Lord gave her on Nov. 15, 2024. In that word, she declared, "Iran, Iran, you have ran from the Lord long enough."

She said the warning continued with a sobering line: "The sword you have chased My children with shall now chase you, O leadership."

To order Amanda Grace's new book,* Brace For Impact, *visit Amazon.com.

That, Grace noted, mirrors Jeremiah 49:37: "I will send the sword after them until I have consumed them."

"This is incredible how all of this aligns," Grace said.

Reversals in the Middle East

Another major theme in Grace's message was reversal. She pointed to Hamas allegedly warning Iran not to strike neighboring nations as evidence that the region is entering an unexpected turn.

"You know you're in trouble when Hamas is the voice of reason in the middle of that region," Grace said. "When that happens, you know you're in trouble."

She tied that development to an earlier word from Jan. 28, 2025, in which she said the Lord promised “a plan so brilliant that shall arise, it could only come from Me.” Grace said that word also spoke of Hamas being cut off from resources, declaring, “Without the root and the resource, the vine will die.”

A ‘Victory’ Pattern in the Nations?

Grace also suggested that global alignments may not be random. Listing nations involved in current tensions—Venezuela, Iran, Cuba, Turkey, Oman, Russia and Yemen—she noted that their first letters appear to spell a single word.

“If you look at the first letter of each country… it happens to spell victory,” she said, calling the sequence “a really crazy order” unfolding in real time.

For Grace, even this pattern points to what she believes is a divinely orchestrated outcome despite the chaos.

The ‘Ides of March’ and a Warning of Betrayal

Shifting from global events to domestic concerns, Grace said she sensed a warning tied to the “Ides of March,” the date associated with Julius Caesar’s assassination.

“There is an ambush being set… there is a literal active ambush being set with the Senate,” she warned.

Drawing parallels to Caesar being lured into the Senate and killed, Grace cautioned that similar patterns of betrayal could attempt to repeat. “We have to intercede and pray that it is exposed, thwarted and stopped,” she said.

She also emphasized a critical 30-day window following March 15, linking it to both historical events and biblical themes of betrayal. “Thirty, biblically speaking, has to do with betrayal," she noted.

'Trojan Horses' and a Shaking in the Conservative Movement

Grace further warned of deception within media and political circles, referencing what she described as "Trojan horses" rising in influence.

"In this season… impostors shall arise, and they have been groomed to be the Trojan horse," she said, quoting from a previous prophetic word.

Referencing the controversy surrounding Tucker Carlson, Grace presented two possibilities: "Either Tucker… contacted the IRGC of his own accord," or "he has been acting as a double agent… There is no in between."

She added, "We need to pray… Tucker needs prayer either way."

More broadly, Grace said a major "sifting" is coming to both government and the church. "The conservative movement is in a civil war," she said, warning that pride, corruption and hidden alliances will be exposed.

A Call to Discernment and Repentance

Amid warnings of upheaval—from Congress to global powers—Grace urged believers to stay anchored in Scripture and sensitive to the Holy Spirit.

"See to it that no one takes you captive through philosophy and empty deception," she said, citing Colossians 2:8.

She stressed that obedience and humility will be key in the days ahead. "Obedience is better than sacrifice," she said. "The Lord wants the obedient."

God Is Not Surprised

Despite the sweeping warnings, Grace closed with a message of hope rooted in God's sovereignty.

"Almighty God is on the throne right now," she said. "He is not surprised by the fall of Iran. He is not surprised about what's happening… He is not taken off guard by any of it."

For Grace, the response is clear: return to Christ.

"In a lost and dying world… you need to come to know Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior," she said.

In what she describes as a time of global shaking and spiritual exposure, Grace believes one thing remains certain: God is moving—and calling His people to be ready.
