

Randy Kay's Near-Death Experience: From Medical Crisis to Heavenly Encounter

In a powerful conversation on The Daniel Kolenda Show, David Diga Hernandez tackled one of the most debated topics in the modern church: healing.

Kolenda and Hernandez spoke about miracles, unanswered prayers and the tension many believers feel when healing doesn't happen as they expect.

Hernandez was clear from the outset – he does not believe healing is something a minister controls.

"I'm not making any claims about the ability," Hernandez said. "I cannot heal the sick. I cannot heal the sick at will. I can only, when directed by the Spirit, minister as He leads – and the rest is up to Him."

To order Daniel Kolenda's book, Furious, visit .

That distinction is crucial in a climate where critics often accuse charismatic ministers of claiming supernatural control over outcomes. Hernandez firmly rejected the idea that the "gift of healing" means a person can heal anyone at any time.

"I've never met anyone who believes they can heal at will," he said.

Instead, he described healing as an assignment – a grace given by God to minister in faith – not a personal power switch.

"God's power backs His Word, but His presence backs His people," Hernandez explained, emphasizing that the gospel itself carries power independent of human perfection.

He also addressed the difficult reality every healing minister faces: not everyone gets healed.

When asked whether he has prayed for people who weren't healed, Hernandez answered without hesitation: "All the time."

He has prayed for people in comas who did not recover – and others who did. He has prayed for the terminally ill who later passed away. Those moments once deeply frustrated him, but over time, his perspective matured.

"It used to frustrate me," he admitted. "But I've learned that I'm not the healer."

That shift brought freedom.

"Sometimes, is it a lack of faith? Yes. Is it always a lack of faith? No," Hernandez said. "Sometimes, is it demonic in nature? Yes. Is it always demonic in nature? No."

Rather than attempting to force a single explanation onto every situation, he embraces humility in the face of the mystery.

"We take what we know, and we trust God with the rest," he said. "That's basic trust."

Hernandez also pushed back against a common criticism: if healing is real, why not empty hospitals?

"What children's hospital is going to allow me to go room to room and do this?" he asked. "Logistically, it makes no sense. Legally, they wouldn't allow it. Not everyone would want prayer. And even still, it would be up to God."

For Hernandez, faith is not rooted in personal success rates but in Scripture itself.

"That's why I believe in healing, because of the Word," he said. “Despite what my experience will sometimes tell me.”

He pointed to biblical examples – Paul advising Timothy to take wine for his stomach, and Jesus not healing everyone at the Pool of Bethesda – as evidence that healing has never operated as a mechanical guarantee.

“It’s possible for two things to be literally true at the same time,” he said. “There’s the spiritual reality, which is still literal, and the material world, which is still literal. And sometimes those two don’t align.”

Yet he continues to preach that healing is God’s will – not as a formula but as a posture of faith. For him, the answer is not hype, manipulation or defensiveness – but simple trust in the Healer.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Kathryn Krick Leads Explosive Revival Movement in New Zealand

The gospel continues to be proclaimed to the very ends of the earth.

In a recent social media post, Kathryn Krick shared about a powerful revival in Auckland, New Zealand, during which many were set free.

Jesus moved so powerfully at Revival Is Now Auckland last night! ☺☺ So many from New Zealand were touched powerfully from God and filled with God's power to spread His revival in their nation! There were also many who traveled from other nations to attend, such as Samoa, Singapore, Philippines, Vanuatu, Malaysia, Fiji, Cook Island, Zimbabwe, South Africa, and Australia. God filled the hungry, set captives free, healed bodies, and poured out His Spirit so mightily!

Krick shared that following this powerful move of God, many hearts were set ablaze with revival.

So many testimonies were shared after the event of how lives were changed, the miracles received, and how hearts are ignited for revival. Glory to God!

To order Kathryn Krick's new book, Ignite Revival, visit .

Even now, in a world filled with uncertainty and spiritual hunger, moments like this remind us that God has not gone silent. He is still moving. He is still saving. He is still healing. The same Spirit poured out in the book of Acts has not diminished in power or purpose. Revival is not a relic of church history—it is a living testimony that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever.

Across nations, He is calling people out of complacency and into consecration. He is igniting fresh hunger for righteousness and pouring out bold faith in a new generation. Miracles are not confined to the past—they are unfolding in real time as the Holy Spirit moves. And if history teaches us anything, it is that when God begins to stir, He is preparing to do even more.

Revival is not ending—it is spreading.

You can read Kathryn Krick's full post here.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Hidden Weapon of the Spirit: Why Praying in Tongues Still Matters

During this time, pray for the Flynn children who have lost their mother, and for the other grieving friends and family as they navigate life without Ashley.

Abby Trivett is a writer and editor for Charisma Media and has a passion for sharing the gospel through the written word. She holds two degrees from Regent University, a B.A. in Communication with a concentration in Journalism and a Master of Arts in Journalism. She is the author of the upcoming book, The Power of Suddenly: Discover How God Can Change Everything in a Moment. For interviews and media inquiries, please contact media@.

Prophecy Fulfilled? Charlie Shamp's 2025 'Miracle on Ice' Word Comes True in 2026 Olympics