

Miracle Amid Flames: Family Bible Survives As Tesla Fire Destroys Entire Home

There is something remarkable happening at 2819 Church located in Atlanta, Georgia.

In a powerful interview with the Associated Press, Pastor Philip Anthony Mitchell shared that the church's rapid growth is an unexpected gift from the Holy Spirit.

"Sometimes I don't know why my preaching is reaching the various people groups that are being reached," Mitchell says. "I think there are times when I'm still shocked was raised in the hood. I don't have a seminary degree. I'm still a little rough around the edges, and I think for me sometimes I stand up on Sunday and I'll turn my back to the church and I'll just cry staring at the screen when I see the beauty of what Jesus is doing."

Tatjuana Phillips, director of ministries at 2819 Church, also spoke about the church's rapid growth, noting, "We went from 180 people to like five or six thousand very quickly."

While this move of God may be unprecedented, those who attend the church believe that Mitchell's unashamed, bold preaching, along with his personal testimony, are the pieces that are connecting with the masses. In a time when more people are moving away from religion, 2819 is seeing souls saved and set free through the blood of Jesus.

“The Gen Zs and the is a hunger for spirituality, and I think a hunger for authenticity,” says Mitchell. “I think a lot of them are tired of fluff.”

The story of 2819 Church and Philip Anthony Mitchell is a reminder of how God can use anyone to fulfill His divine plans and purposes to bring the kingdom of God onto this earth.

Zac Brown Band's Devilish Deal: Demonic Imagery Overtakes Their Latest Show

Country music has now been infiltrated by the demonic.

The Zac Brown Band is facing heavy criticism after their Las Vegas residency show, “Love & Fear,” portrayed blatant Satanic imagery, as Penn Live noted.

In a video shared to X from the concert, a giant skeleton wearing a spiked crown with images of fire whirling around the building. Brown himself wore a horned crown for the occasion as well, and the room was decorated with what appeared to be a Satanic statue of a fallen angel and skeletons everywhere in a dark and dreary room.

Another scene from the show depicts a person standing at a red door on fire, symbolizing this entrance into hell.

The post from Shadow of Ezra reads that, "Fans say the visuals plunged the audience into hellish scenes filled with demons, tortured souls, and imagery that included a crown resembling devil horns. Zac Brown says the show simply tells the story of his life and personal journey."

This show is just another marker of a major artist showing their allegiance to death, destruction and the devil, all the while pushing this type of imagery and agenda on their audience.

From the Grammys to films, TV, and streaming services, the enemy is no longer hiding. Instead, the world is openly embracing this violent and dark view. If something is not good, pure, noble, holy, and honorable, there is no reason to dwell on it. The lines between good and evil are clearly being drawn in the sand, and those who have fellowship with the darkness cannot be in fellowship with the Lord.

As we rush further along toward the end of time, we must choose who we are going to have fellowship with: God or Satan. We must hold onto the treasure of Christ and not let go of Him, no matter what we see happen in the world. The darkness may be mounting, but the light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it. Choose to be part of God's light, revoking any friendship with what is dark.

Could the Antichrist Already Be Here? Jack Hibbs Breaks Down Biblical Prophecy

Former Satanist John Ramirez shared a dire warning with Pastor Vlad Savchuk about the snare creeping into the body of Christ: the occult is intentionally imitating Christian practices—and millions of believers don't even recognize the counterfeit.

According to Ramirez, who once operated deep inside the occult, nothing in the demonic realm is original. "We copy everything in the church," he says. "We fast, we pray, we put hands on people, we speak in tongues. The only thing witches don't have is the presence of God."

He further explains that demonic power is real, but it's conditional—built on fear, manipulation and spiritual contracts. However, the structure, rituals and vocabulary are all designed to mirror Christianity while drawing people away from it.

1. Witches Fast—But Not for God

Just as believers fast to align themselves with the Holy Spirit, Ramirez says witches fast to become more sensitive to demonic instruction.

"Witches fast to hear demons clearly," he reveals. "They fast to sharpen their spiritual senses and increase the power of their rituals.”

These fasts imitate biblical discipline but are powered by darkness, not surrender to the Lord.

2. They Lay Hands on People

Ramirez explains that witches also “lay hands” on individuals—but instead of imparting the Holy Spirit, they impart spiritual attack.

“When I would lay hands on someone, I was sending demons into their mind, their body, their home,” he says. “Just like in church, where the pastor imparts blessing—witches impart bondage.”

3. They Speak in Tongues

Perhaps most shocking of all, Ramirez notes that the demonic realm even counterfeits the gift of tongues.

“Demons have their own tongues,” he states. “It sounds spiritual. It feels supernatural. But it’s not from God. It’s a language that summons spirits.”

He warns believers not to assume that supernatural activity is automatically holy. “If there’s no presence of God—run.”

4. Witchcraft Manipulates Atmospheres

Ramirez also describes how witches intentionally shift atmospheres—something Christians often talk about without understanding the warfare behind it.

“We would walk into a place and change the atmosphere instantly,” he says. “People would feel anxiety, fear, sickness, confusion—and they had no idea it was spiritual.”

According to him, many Christians mistake these attacks as random emotions rather than signs of spiritual influence.

5. The Deception of Manifesting: “It’s Witchcraft With Christian Language”

While Ramirez also exposed the rituals of witches, he explained how one deception is now more dangerous than all the rest: manifesting.

“Manifesting is witchcraft wrapped in positive thinking,” he warns. “Witches call it ‘speaking your reality.’ Christians call it ‘manifesting your future.’ It’s the same thing.”

He explains that in the occult, practitioners use words, visualization and emotion to create desired outcomes—exactly what secular culture now promotes as harmless self-empowerment.

“You’re not manifesting anything,” he says. “You’re giving demons permission to manipulate circumstances to look like the outcome you asked for.”

He stresses the difference between biblical faith and demonic manifestation:

- Faith trusts God’s will.
- Manifesting forces your own will.
- Faith leads to surrender.
- Manifesting leads to spiritual control.

“What people don’t understand is that manifesting is a contract,” Ramirez says. “You declare something into the atmosphere without God, and the enemy answers it.”

He adds that even Christians fall into this trap when they begin using New Age language—affirmations, vision boards centered on self, “speaking reality,” or attempting to attract blessings through energy.

“Any time you try to create outcomes without the Holy Spirit, you’re stepping into witchcraft,” he cautions.

This warning is a call for believers to return to one simple truth: spiritual authority is absolute, and not everything that sounds spiritual is from the Spirit of God.

Randy Kay Addresses Prophetic Abuse in the Church

There’s something powerful that happens when a person speaks and says, “Thus says the Lord.” People suddenly grow quiet, ready to hear what this message from God may be.

However, as Randy Kay warns, “For the person speaking those words, it’s easy to begin believing you truly are different, more connected to God, more important to His purposes.” There is a real temptation: redirect the glory to God or absorb it yourself. Too often, prophetic voices succumb to the allure of applause, platform and recognition.

Kay reflects on a troubling reality in modern ministry: being like the world rather than being in it. “We’ve imported the world’s metrics of success, platform size, influence, wealth, media presence and sometimes forgotten that in God’s kingdom, the greatest among us is the servant of all.” Genuine friendships are too often replaced with strategic alliances, built for mutual benefit rather than Christlike love.

This transactional spirit is pervasive. Leaders build platforms to gain influence, connect for advantage and elevate those with power while overlooking the marginalized. Kay points out, “It’s the world’s way, dressed in spiritual language.”

Meanwhile, the vulnerable and powerless are often met with condemnation rather than intercession. The call of Jesus is radically countercultural: “Love your enemies. Pray for those who persecute you,” not declare judgment.

He points out that conviction is mistaken for combative aggression, and boldness becomes bravado. “We’re ready to go to battle over our reputation, but reluctant to turn the other cheek,” Kay observes. The early church in Acts thrived on radical love, humility and service, not public displays of superiority or platform politics.

For those navigating a life or faith transition, prophetic voice Alwyn Uys says this period is an opportunity for preparation and discernment.

Uys says that right now, the body of Christ must be discerning of the seasons and the times God has placed each person in: "There are seasons in life, in nature, and there are seasons with the Lord." Referencing Ecclesiastes 3:1-4, he noted, "There is a time for everything, and a season for every purpose under heaven... a time to plant and a time to pluck what is planted... a time to break and a time to build up."

Transition seasons, Uys explained, often bring challenges as people attempt to use methods from previous seasons that may no longer be effective. "If I was going to wear the same clothes in the summer season that I'm trying to wear now in the winter season, I'm just not going to make it," he said.

Uys emphasized the importance of following God's timing rather than clinging to the past. "Do not hang on to the old things of the past, but grab onto the hem of Jesus and say, 'Lord, lead me in this new season. Lead me and guide me where you want me in this time.' Be led by the Spirit of God and not just by religion, not just by systems, not just by patterns, but be led by the Spirit of God in this season."

Acknowledging that resistance is a regular part of change, he cited 1 John 4:4: "You are of God, little children, and have overcome them because He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world." He further said, "Every season has its challenges. Just because you are walking in the perfect will of God doesn't mean that you won't face resistance. The methods just look different."

Now is the time to embrace transition seasons with faith and intentionality, trusting that God is orchestrating every detail. This is a time to prepare, to discern and to walk closely with Him. Even in the midst of challenges and resistance, God's guidance remains steadfast, and He will shape each person for the purpose He has prepared for them, leading them in His perfect timing.

YouVersion Releases 2025's Verse of the Year: The Scripture Inspiring Millions

The verse of the year for 2025 is captivating hearts all over the world.

In a news statement, YouVersion released their “most-engaged with verse throughout 2025.” The top slot goes to Isaiah 41:10, which offers reassurance that God will be with us in both the good and the hard times.

Isaiah 41:10 reads:

Do not fear, for I am with you; do not be dismayed, for I am your God. I will strengthen you, I will help you, yes, I will uphold you with My righteous right hand.

In the statement, YouVersion founder and CEO Bobby Gruenewald said, “I think this verse keeps rising to the top because it addresses one of our deepest needs, the assurance that we’re not a world full of anxiety and uncertainty, people are drawn to God's promise to be with us, to strengthen us, and to help us. That message never gets old because the need for it is universal and timeless."

The organization also noted that 2025 was a "record-breaking year of Bible engagement," with the Sundays in November's Global Bible Month becoming the "highest days in YouVersion history for Bible engagement."

Gruenewald further said that "The momentum we're seeing gives us bold faith for 2026 and beyond."

This growth goes along with the increased number of people buying Bibles, attending church and taking their spiritual lives seriously. As we are getting closer to the end of time, more and more people are coming to the reality that there is a God, and His gospel is going out to the very ends of the earth so that every tribe, tongue and language can hear the message and the name of Jesus Christ as Lord.

3I/ATLAS Mystery: Ice Volcanoes Erupt As a Bizarre 'Heartbeat' Emerges

The 3I/ATLAS comet continues to puzzle scientists and onlookers alike with its uncanny features.

A Daily Mail report noted that the space object "developed a strange 'heartbeat'" which is reportedly making it much brighter.

Telescope research found that there were bits of dust and gases which were bursting out in streams approximately "every hours," which is quite similar to that of a heartbeat.

The outlet also noted that this rhythm of 3I/ATLAS is making it dim and glow brighter by "20 to 40 percent." However, this is not the only strange, unusual discovery regarding the interstellar object.

According to LiveScience, scientists also found "cryovolcanoes," or "ice volcanoes," are exploding on the comet.

As the science-based outlet noted, "...as the comet approached the sun, a series of cryovolcanoes erupted on its surface." It is believed that these ice jets could answer the question of what the comet is composed of. Research found that the composition of the comet is similar to that of dwarf planets near Neptune.

As science continues to prove how fascinating 3I/ATLAS is, believers are reminded that creation itself is preaching a message in these final days. The heavens are not silent—they are declaring the glory of God, pointing humanity back to the One who set every star in place. In a world shaking with signs and uncertainty, phenomena like 3I/ATLAS echo Jesus' words that there will be signs in the sun, moon and stars during the last days.

God is still speaking, still revealing and still calling His people to watch, discern and stay ready for what comes next.
