

Jack Hibbs Sounds the Alarm: How the Antichrist Will Captivate the World

A powerful prophetic word from Amanda Grace is warning others that a new season is unfolding—one that will reshape nations and political structures in unprecedented ways.

One of the ways Grace believes there will be a significant shift involves changes to the Church of England and the Catholic Church.

“One of the most shocking betrayals in the Catholic church shall emerge in this time,” Grace says. “The Church of England, says the Lord, Episcopal, says the have let the betrayer and destroyer in, and now it shall turn on you.”

Grace warns that the upcoming shifts will expose the fragility of systems built on appearances. “The order of My Word shall leave it amount to nothing...as you see how weak these parties and organizations and leaders truly were. No substance, all show. This shall take place over the next year.”

She also pointed out how England is positioned as a focal point of this divine strategy. “I am raising up a leader in England, a leader who knows me, a leader who is not afraid of Ishmael, a leader who will provoke an entire nation that has lost its way to think and to exit the old way of doing such and throw off such wine skin. This shall be more potent than Brexit.” According to the prophecy, this leader will challenge entrenched powers: “Mayors who serve Ishmael shall be overthrown...some territory shall be taken back, for the Spirit of the Lord shall be upon this leader. They shall not look the role. However, when they open their mouth, a provoking power that comes from Me...shall stir the people.”

Grace shared prophetic imagery of a wailing sound rising from England to point out the magnitude of what is coming. “Before the world, a cry shall come out of England—woe, woe—a wail is coming out of England that the whole world will hear,” Grace prophesied. This is more than political upheaval; it is a divine awakening that will spark a revolution and a purification of leadership, with ripple effects across nations. “It shall begin a revolution and an exit and a driving out and impeachment...” she continued.

The time is urgent. Grace’s prophetic word is a call to vigilance, prayer and participation in God’s strategic move. The old wine skins are being shattered; the new wine is ready to fill the faithful with power, influence and divine wisdom for a season of transformational change.

A Great Collapse for King

Charles? Prophetic Warning for 2026

Paul echoes this in Scripture: “Rejoice always, pray without ceasing, in everything give thanks—for this is God’s will for you” (1 Thess. 5:16-18). Cahn reinforces this, saying, “When you present your request to God, but with thanksgiving, the shalom, the peace of God which passes all understanding, is going to guard your heart and your mind in Messiah Jesus.” Gratitude isn’t optional; it’s protective. Romans 1 warns, “When they knew God, they didn’t glorify him... neither were they thankful, and their foolish hearts were darkened.”

The key to abundance is radical but straightforward: in every situation, lift your needs to God, but do it with thanks. Cahn reminds us, “If you give thanks from your heart, you won’t be frustrated. If you give thanks, you won’t be depressed. If you give thanks, you won’t be filled with anxiety and fear.”

Start small—thank God for waking up, for the clothes you wear, for your breath, your home, your family, and see how He multiplies your joy, peace and blessing. In the Kingdom of God, thanksgiving is not just a response. It’s the key that unlocks everything.

Erika Kirk Reveals the One Thing She Prayed for After Charlie's Death

In a candid interview with Megyn Kelly, Erika Kirk revealed the one thing she was praying for after the assassination of her husband, Charlie Kirk.

When Kelly asked Kirk how many kids she and Charlie were hoping for, she told her they wanted four.

“We wanted to have four. Yeah. And I was praying to God that I was pregnant when he got murdered,” Kirk said. “I was like, ‘Oh goodness, that would be the ultimate blessing out of this catastrophe.’”

Because of this desire to have had more children with Charlie, Kirk says she now encourages couples not to put off having kids.

“Now when I see young couples, I tell them, ‘Please, like, don’t put it off.’ Especially if you’re a young woman, don’t put it off. You can always have a career. You can always go back to work. You can never just go back to having children and they grow so fast and so was praying. Both of us were, we were really excited to just expand our family,” she said.

As The National News Desk also reported, Kirk told Kelly in a separate part of the interview that she does not hold onto anger and bitterness against Charlie's accused killer, Tyler Robinson.

"The enemy would love for me to be angry," she said. "He would love it because it would distract me from building what Charlie entrusted to me: raising our babies, Turning Point... If I had any amount of anger in my heart then the Lord would not be able to use me."

In the midst of unimaginable loss, Erika Kirk's testimony is a reminder that even in life's darkest valleys, God is still near and purpose still calls. In her courage, forgiveness, and unwavering trust in God's purposes, Erika reminds the body of Christ that, even when the enemy strikes, we are still called to do the works that God has entrusted to our hands.

Third Temple Rebuild and the Rise of the Nephilim: Are We Witnessing the Last Days?

As the world races forward, technological advances and global unrest are aligning in ways that echo the prophecies of Scripture.

Joe Kirby, founder of Off the Kirb Ministries, told Charisma Media in an interview that as he studied end times prophecy, "It was like getting saved again. The Bible just opened up—Zechariah, Daniel, Revelation—even the parables of Jesus became alive, showing the reality of the new kingdom."

Kirby points to the rise of new technologies as key indicators. Digital IDs, facial recognition, cashless societies and even Neuralink-style brain chips raise serious concerns about control and surveillance. "I'm not saying these are the mark of the beast, but it does concern me," he notes. "Once people have these technologies, it will be tough to buy, sell or participate fully in society if you don't have them."

Alongside these innovations, Kirby sees cultural signs fulfilling biblical warnings: selfishness, thanklessness and a growing apostasy. "People are deconstructing their faith, mocking Christ and chasing self-gratification," he says. "The Bible predicted this, and we're seeing it in real time."

Prophetic developments in Israel also capture Kirby's attention. He references Ezekiel 38, noting the alignment of modern nations with ancient prophecies. "Persia is Iran, Kush is Ethiopia and modern Russia fits the role of Magog," he explains. "When nations turn against Israel, it's a direct fulfillment of prophecy." He also highlights the significance of the red heifer, whose rarity is tied to the rebuilding of the Third Temple. "The temple can't be rebuilt without it," Kirby says, underscoring the potential for dramatic events in the Middle East that may fulfill end-times prophecy.

David Wilkerson, the legendary street minister who changed the lives of thousands in New York City, was more than just a voice for the lost—he was a prophetic watchman for a nation.

As Perry Stone pointed out in a new video, Wilkerson was known for his courageous work with gangs. His ministry began when he answered a divine call to the streets of New York, a city riddled with violence and despair. There, he encountered gang leader Nicky Cruz, whose conversion sparked an unprecedented revival among the youth and gang communities.

Yet Wilkerson's ministry was not only about saving souls; it was about sounding alarms. In 1985, he penned Set the Trumpet to Thy Mouth, a prophetic call for America to awaken before judgment. As Stone noted, Wilkerson prophesied that: "America is going to be destroyed by fire. Sudden destruction is coming, and few will escape. Unexpectedly, in one hour, a hydrogen holocaust will engulf America, and this nation will be no more."

He later warned of another attack, writing, "The great holocaust follows an economic collapse... the enemy will make its move when we are weak and helpless because America will not repent."

Perhaps his most chilling prophecy came on Sept. 7, 1992, during a sermon in which Wilkerson shared a vision that had haunted him for years: over 1,000 fires burning simultaneously in New York City. "I've had a recurring vision of over 1,000 fires burning at one time in New York City," he said. He spoke of an eruption of rage sparked by economic hardship: "New York is to blow. Federal and state welfare cutbacks will be the spark that ignites the fuse. A 100,000 angry men will be on the streets, enraged because they've been cut off from benefits. Fires will rage everywhere."

Wilkerson's warnings did not end there. In March 2009, he released a public statement foretelling an "earthshattering calamity." According to Stone, Wilkerson said, "It's going to be frightening, and we are all going to tremble, even the godliest among us. Major cities across America will experience riots and blazing fires... There will also be looting."

What makes Wilkerson's prophetic voice particularly compelling is its consistency and weight. Stone reported that this particular vision came through an angelic visitation, which he kept private to avoid ridicule. Stone emphasized, "He would never say he saw an angel as he knew people would probably mock it and not believe it... But the Lord had showed him that in the future this was coming."

Wilkerson's prophetic words serve as both a warning and an invitation: a warning of the consequences that await an unrepentant nation and an invitation to pray and prepare spiritually.

As New York and America face economic and societal pressures, the call is clear: the prophetic voice of God is not silent, and His servants continue to sound the alarm.

Slender Man Stabber Escapes: A Demonic Deception Returns to Haunt the Nation

The Slender Man stabber has escaped.

According to The Guardian, Morgan Geyser, 23, was discovered in Posen, Illinois, after she had escaped from a group home where she removed her monitoring bracelet. Previously, authorities issued an alert, noting that Geyser was last seen with another acquaintance on Saturday. Back in 2014, Geyser had confessed to “repeatedly stabbing a sixth-grade classmate” to honor the fictional Slender Man. The classmate, Payton Leutner, was stabbed by Geyser 19 times.

Geyser’s horrific crime went viral after she explicitly admitted that Leutner was attacked in hopes of becoming a “servant” for Slender Man. She believed that this was necessary to keep Slender Man from harming her own family. Another classmate, Anissa Weier, encouraged Geyser to perform the act.

Until now, Geyser was in a psychiatric center and then a group home in Madison, Wisconsin.

According to ABC News, Geyser would not give her identity to police, telling them to “Google her.”

“The female repeatedly refused to provide her real name and initially gave a false one,” police said, per ABC News. “...she finally stated that she didn’t want to tell officers who she was because she had ‘done something really bad...’” Geyser’s acquaintance has not been named, but is reportedly a 42-year-old male. The two were discovered asleep on the sidewalk.

Earlier this year, Fox 6 Milwaukee reported on Geyser's conditional release and move into the group home. She now also identifies as a transgender male and says she "no longer hears voices."

Geyser's crimes and her escape, however, point to something even more sinister that continues to grow in our nation. Children are being fed content that leads to demonic acts and oppression, sometimes in subtle ways, and at other times, in very blatant terms.

Geyser's escape is more than a headline—it is a sobering reminder that the demonic is no longer hiding in the shadows. Our culture is being saturated with darkness disguised as entertainment, creativity and "just stories." What once belonged to the fringes of the internet has now become normalized, even celebrated. As Christians, we cannot afford to shrug off these moments as isolated incidents. They are warnings—alarms sounding in the spirit—revealing how aggressively the enemy is targeting the next generation.

Now more than ever, we must guard the gates of our homes. We must pray with discernment, watch with vigilance and teach our children how to recognize truth from deception. The darkness may be rising, but so is the call to stand firm. When we stay anchored in God's Word, filled with His Spirit and attentive to what is shaping our children, no scheme of the enemy will prevail.
