

Trump Invokes Scripture in a Powerful Call to Protect Foster Children

President Donald Trump is calling on Americans to abide by the biblical command to care for the least of these.

In a statement, the president said, "The Bible tells us that of the measures of any society is how it cares for vulnerable children and orphans. So important. It is so big in the Bible."

With this, he promised that as America strives to rebuild and become an even better nation, part of this growth includes caring for those children who need it most.

"As we make America great again, we are going to protect American children in foster care, and we're going to ensure that they will never, ever be forgotten. These children will never be forgotten, and they're going to grow up to be unbelievable, strong, smart, wealthy, productive citizens."

President Trump's words draw America back to a timeless biblical mandate—one God has never revoked. Scripture is unmistakably clear: "A father to the fatherless, a defender of widows, is God in His holy dwelling" (Ps. 68:5). The Lord aligns Himself with the vulnerable, and He measures His people by how they respond to those who cannot defend themselves. Throughout the Old and New Testaments, God commands His people to "defend the fatherless" and to care for orphans with compassion, justice and sacrificial love.

May the church lead the way in restoring hope, reaffirming dignity and reminding every orphaned and vulnerable child in this nation that, through Christ, they are seen, valued and loved.

Chemtrails Exposed: Tucker Carlson Reveals What's Poisoning Our Skies

Is there something lethal circulating in our skies?

In a recent interview with Tucker Carlson, Dane Wigington of GeoEngineering Watch shared terrifying news about what is really happening to the air we breathe.

“The world’s second most recognized climate engineer, Dr. Ken Caldeira, stating what he did for the DOD was to design methods of spraying pathogens into clouds to infect the populations below,” Wigington stated.

Wigington then connects the concept of chemtrails to the broader spread of COVID-19 back in 2020.

“At one point, 85 countries were infected in three days. That’s indicative of an airborne dispersion,” he said. “We know from Italian researchers they found CV-19 attached to airborne particulates. We know from our precipitation testing we have polymer fibers and graphene in our rain.”

Pondering more on the concept of why our rain would be polluted with these elements, Wigington says, “Those two elements are used militarily as biological carrier platforms to carry a pathogen from the clouds to the ground to infect the population below. Why is that in our rain right now? Could they, at any point of their choosing, put something much more lethal into the precipitation and level the playing field? Certainly, they could.”

As these revelations continue to surface, the questions grow more pressing: What exactly is being released above our heads, and who is controlling it? If our skies have become a delivery system for undisclosed substances, the public deserves transparency, accountability and the truth.

AI, CERN and Quantum Tech: Is This the Prophetic Blueprint of the Coming Beast System?

In a world that seems increasingly dark and self-centered, the call for the church is urgent: We must be vessels of honor for the Lord to prepare the bride for the return of Jesus. As Kathryn Krick shared in a powerful interview with Ryan Miller, the key to this preparation is humility, surrender and a willingness to receive God's power.

Jesus often hid His mysteries from the proud and revealed them to the humble and childlike. "The Pharisees have ears but cannot hear. They have eyes but they do not see," Krick explained. "Pharisees have pride. Disciples are humble and childlike."

"There's a difference between skepticism and discernment," Miller emphasized. "The pathway to discernment is to become childlike, and the Lord will give you spiritual eyes to see the counterfeits."

Part of growing in this spiritual sensitivity includes understanding the three major areas God uses for His miraculous purposes.

1. God Uses the Weak and the Unqualified

Feeling unqualified, unspiritual or inadequate is not a limitation—it's God's perfect starting point. "God uses the weak and foolish things," Krick said. "If you feel unqualified, you are in the perfect place to be. You are the most qualified by God because God can only use vessels who see themselves rightly: nothing without [Him]."

Even gifts that seem natural or talents that appear impressive are meaningless without surrender and anointing.

2. Preparing the Bride: Surrender and Action

The greatest preparation for Jesus' return is not passive anticipation—it is active surrender and faithful service. As Krick and Miller point out, the church must be ready not only in heart but in action.

- Surrender Everything: Examine your life and yield all areas to God. Actual readiness comes when you let go of control and trust Him fully.
- Complete the Assignment: Be a vessel that demonstrates godly transformation, healing and salvation. God calls His people to be busy while there is time.
- Reject Judgment: Stop being judgmental toward others or toward God's new work. Accept revival, new ministries and the anointing on others with humility.
- Be a Light That Attracts: Love, not condemnation, draws people to Christ. When operating in God's power, the lost are drawn to Him, healed and set free.

As Jesus told His disciples, the question is not when He will return but whether His followers are ready to move in power and complete the work He has given them.

3. Meekness as Strength

Meekness in the end times is often misunderstood. It is not weakness; it is strength under submission. Miller explains:

The meek will inherit the earth. It's not meek as a mouse, but meek as a mustang. It's meek as a warhorse that will inherit the earth. He's looking for those who have fully lost the operating system that they were currently said, "It's all Yours, Jesus."

Those who let go of strategy, self-reliance and pride become vessels of God's glory. Seasons of waiting, testing and refinement are preparing these believers for global impact.

The Power of God for Today

Finally, Krick issued a prophetic blessing over all who would receive it: healing, freedom and empowerment. "God is pouring out His Spirit for those who humble themselves. You will be changed forever as His power comes upon you. You will walk in authority, cast out demons, heal the sick and lead others to Christ. Revival will move through you in your family, community, city and nation."

The end times are not just about waiting for Jesus—they are about preparing the bride through obedience, yielding and active engagement in God's kingdom. The question is simple: Will you surrender, receive His power and shine as a light in the darkness?

Pastor Exposes the Satanic Roots of '6-7' and Its Hidden Spiritual Agenda

Pastor Nathan Bentley of LifePoint Church in Arizona is sounding the alarm over a viral trend sweeping the nation known as "6-7," revealing what he calls its satanic roots and spiritual influence—especially over youth.

"I woke up and saw a video about a trend I had given no thought to," Bentley explained. "I said, 'Yeah, I looked on the internet. There's nothing wrong with that.' But when I saw it this morning, I realized it wasn't just a harmless meme. There is a spiritual side to this, and we need to pay attention."

He recounted his own morning routine before the revelation, when he saw a video that gave more context on the song and the singer, Skrilla, who started the "6-7" trend. "At first, I thought it was just a funny thing kids do. But what I found was something much deeper."

Bentley explained how Skrilla has publicly admitted to membership in the Church of Satan. "He worships Oshun and Ogun and the gods," the pastor said. "He sacrifices goats, chickens and mice depending on the ritual, all in pursuit of favor and success in Hollywood. Since committing fully, he says his career has taken off."

The pastor described the content of Skrilla's music as particularly concerning. "The song is only about two minutes long. It's full of references to sex and drugs, but halfway through, he inserts the Baby Shark theme. Why would a hardcore persona, whose singing about things that are very mature, do that unless he wants to appeal to an audience?" he asked.

He also addressed skepticism from others who downplay the trend as harmless. "Some say, 'Pastor, you're over-obsessed. It's just where he's from, 6-7 is just his city.' Really? So, it has no connection to the god Ogun or the god Tamara who he says he worships?"

The pastor tied this trend to a broader cultural issue, calling out mainstream artists such as Beyoncé and Taylor Swift. "Beyoncé has said, 'When I take the stage, I take the form of Oshun, the goddess of fertility and sex,'" he explained. "Billie imagery is more demonic than anything you'll find in the Book of Satan. They've stopped even hiding it."

He challenged the Church to recognize the cultural deception while maintaining personal discernment: "I know that there is a spiritual realm and a spiritual world, then why would I even want to get close to the edge of it? Just stay away from it."

Referencing the prophet Jeremiah, Bentley emphasized the importance of discernment and vigilance. "Jeremiah was telling the people, 'This worship is wrong. Going to this temple is wrong. Going to these gatherings and providing a financial offering is not honoring Yahweh. You're being lied to.'

Trends like "6-7" may seem like innocent memes or viral songs, but they can subtly influence hearts and minds, especially those of children and young people. The call is clear: stay vigilant, protect your family and seek God's guidance, because the spiritual forces behind these cultural phenomena are real—and only by walking in awareness and faith can we safeguard our homes, our children and our own souls.
