

Perry Stone Unveils Chilling 1973 CIA Warning About America's Future

Pastor Benny Tate is breaking down preconceived ideas about what it takes to make a leader. For Tate, leadership is not reserved for CEOs, pastors or those with titles—it is the calling of every believer.

“Everybody is a leader,” Tate said. “Leadership is influence. Whether you’re a parent, a teacher, a coach, or a stay-at-home mom, you are influencing someone. You were created to lead.”

Tate emphasized that true leadership is not about success, status, or recognition, but about significance—the impact you have on others. “Success is about you,” he said. “Significance is about what happens through you. If you want to lead, you’re giving up the right for it to be about you.”

Using the biblical example of Nehemiah, Tate outlined five levels of leadership.

Inward leadership begins with self-discipline and personal growth. “The most difficult person you’ll ever lead is yourself,” he explained. “You have to grow before you can grow anyone else.”

Lateral leadership focuses on relational influence through service. “If serving is beneath you, leading will always be above you,” Tate said, highlighting that helping others achieve their dreams is a pathway to fulfilling your own.

Upward leadership calls for humility and loyalty when interacting with those in authority. Tate referenced Nehemiah asking the king for favor and resources to rebuild Jerusalem's walls, emphasizing that the right attitude opens doors for the right action.

Downward leadership is about discovering, developing and deploying others. "All I want to do is lead leaders," he said. "If all you do is lead followers, all you'll ever do is add. But if you learn to lead leaders, you multiply—and you make a lasting impact."

Finally, outward leadership inspires believers to lead beyond themselves through generosity, mentoring and leaving a legacy.

Ultimately, Tate encouraged believers to live victorious lives and step out in faith to all that God has called them to do. "If God be for us, who can be against us? Greater is He who is in us than he who is in the world. You are more than a conqueror. You are a victor. You are a child of the Most High God. Yes, you can."

Charlie Kirk Prophecy: This is What Will Change America

Did Charlie Kirk accurately prophesy what would change America?

In a video shared to X from a prior speech by Charlie Kirk, he noted that there was a spiritual battle heading straight for Western civilization. This battle, Kirk said, would alter the way of American life.

"The spiritual battle is coming to the West. And the enemies are wokeism or Marxism combining with Islam to go after what we call the American way of life," Kirk said.

This American dream, as Kirk put it, is rather simple. People want the opportunity to get married, have children and purchase a home.

However, Kirk warned that the LGBTQ and Islamic cultures were a threat to this simple way of life.

This is particularly noteworthy considering the elections that just took place, most notably in Virginia and New York City where Islamic leftists were just voted into power. Is it possible that Charlie Kirk saw this exact thing as a threat prior to his death?

As America faces a rapidly shifting cultural and political landscape, Charlie Kirk's warning takes on an almost prophetic weight. In a time when the future of the American way of life feels increasingly uncertain, Kirk's words serve as a clarion call to remain vigilant, rooted in faith and unwavering in the defense of enduring biblical principles.
