

3I/ATLAS Visible from Earth: Are We on the Brink of a Cosmic Revelation?

3I/ATLAS has finally reached the next phase in its flight journey across the universe.

In a report by the New York Post, it was noted that this massive comet can now be viewed by those with a telescope. Astronomer Qicheng Zhang took a photo of this space object at the beginning of the month, telling the outlet, "The comet is easily visible with small telescopes now."

Zhang noted that the visibility of 3I/ATLAS is due the fact that it is "rising early enough in [the] morning twilight." Right now, the comet appears as a "fuzzy dot" in photos taken of it.

The scientific researcher also discussed how larger telescopes are not usually made for capturing comets, while Zhang used a smaller one "constructed with comet observations in mind."

In an article by Live Science, Zhang was also quoted saying, "All you need is a clear sky and a very low eastern won't look impressive, it's just a smudge, but it will be an increasingly visible smudge over the next few days.”

As 3I/ATLAS moves visibly across the heavens, many are looking upward in awe—and some in fear—wondering if this celestial visitor carries a message from beyond our world. For some, the timing of its appearance feels intentional—a call for believers to watch, pray and recognize that God’s hand is never absent, even in the farthest reaches of the universe.

Return of the Mystery Drones? Sighting Near Military Nuclear Base

Are we seeing the return of the mystery drones?

In a report by The Daily Mail, drones were spotted near the Kleine Brogel military base in Belgium where nuclear weapons were being housed for the U.S. This has led some to fear of potential espionage.

The Defense Minister of Belgium, Theo Francken, said that these drones came into the airways of the base on Saturday and then again on Sunday night. Notably, the drones that entered this area on Saturday were smaller, as though they were “testing the base’s radio frequencies,” before larger drones came to “destabilize the area and the people,” as the outlet and Francken described.

Francken said that these drones are have an eerie similarity to “a spy operation. By whom, I don’t ‘s not a drone that just happened to cross the military base. It was there for a long time, so it was definitely for spying.” He further said that “This was not a simple flyover, but a clear attack...’It is not clear who is responsible for the drone sightings.”

These drones are of particular concern for the United States because America has somewhere between ten and 20 B61 nuclear bombs located at this base.

As these mysterious drones hover over one of the world’s most dangerous arsenals, it is a stark reminder that there is a spiritual battle intensifying. What is seen in the skies may reflect the unseen forces seeking to destabilize nations and hearts alike. In times like these, the warning is clear: watch, pray and do not be shaken, for the Lord is sovereign over all things seen and unseen.

Is This the Site of Jesus' Most Astonishing Miracle?

Archaeologists may have just found the location where Jesus performed one of His greatest miracles.

In a report by The Daily Mail, it was noted that researchers think they found the spot where Jesus cast demons into a herd of pigs close to the Sea of Galilee. As the article discussed, Dr. Scott Stripling, who is the excavations director for Associates of Biblical Research, spoke to Digging for the Truth where he detailed the signs that point to the Israeli town of Kursi as this exorcism site.

In this biblical account, Jesus cast a legion of demons out of a man into a herd of pigs. The man had been plagued by the demons, being chained and out of his right mind. Upon the demons entering the pigs, the swine jumped off of a cliff into the water.

“All three gospels say there was a cliff three say there were tombs nearby. And they tell us that Jesus was coming in on a boat from the west side to the east side,” Stripling said.

As The Daily Mail pointed, Stripling was directed by a "massive fish tank" which was used long ago to preserve fish from the water. Stripling's team believe that this particular harbor fits the description of the area where Jesus would have landed before performing the miracle. To key in on the clues as to where this massive deliverance may have taken place, Stripling used information that came from a 1985 excavation which had great details about the large stones found in Kursi.

Tombs were also located in this area, reportedly near "where the pigs grazed," along with a cliff that was about 164 feet from the water. Nearby, a chapel can be found called "Chapel of the Miracle" where mosaic flooring shows imagery related to this particular exorcism performed by Jesus. Kursi is also "in the Decapolis," which is critical to this biblical story. In Mark 5:20, after the man is free from his demonic oppression, Scripture reads, " So he departed and began to proclaim in the Decapolis what great things Jesus had done for him. And everyone was amazed."

If this discovery truly marks the place where Jesus cast out a legion of demons, it stands as yet another powerful reminder that the gospel is not a myth—it is history come alive. Every stone unearthed, every artifact found, continues to testify that the Word of God endures and that the power of Jesus Christ to set the captives free is as real today as it was on the shores of Galilee.

Vatican Issues Controversial Statement on Salvation, Jesus and the Virgin Mary

The Vatican released a controversial statement regarding salvation and how it applies to the unique roles of Jesus and the Virgin Mary.

In a report by Reuters, the Vatican has given specific instructions to Catholics everywhere to stop giving Mary the credit as “co-redeemer” of the world. According to the outlet, the statement read, “It would not be appropriate to use the title ‘co-redemptrix’...This [s] confusion and an imbalance in the harmony of the truths of the Christian faith.”

While scholars and those particularly of the Catholic faith have debated about giving Mary this accolade for years, the Vatican is making it clear that she does not hold this position. Reuters noted that the Vatican sees Mary as “an intermediary between God and humanity.” In the statement from the Vatican, Mary is considered as the one who “opened the gates of the Redemption that all humanity had awaited” by giving birth to the Son of God.

According to Vatican News, Pope Leo reportedly shared that using the term “Co-redemptrix” ultimately “...risks obscuring Christ’s unique salvific an expression requires many, repeated explanations to prevent it from straying from a correct meaning, it does not serve the faith of the People of God and becomes unhelpful.”

At the end of the day, Scripture is clear that there is only one way to heaven: Through Jesus Christ alone. John 14:6 tells us that He is the way, the truth and the life and no one can come to the Father through any other way. While Mary undoubtedly had a special and unique calling upon her life to be the mother of Jesus, she was just like us in need of a Savior. It is only through the atoning work of Christ on the cross that any of us can be saved.

Joe Rogan and Elon Musk: The Secrets of 3I/ATLAS, AI and the Future

Joe Rogan and Elon Musk are uncovering what the future may look like as artificial intelligence increases and 3I/ATLAS hurdles its way toward Earth.

In a revealing conversation with Joe Rogan, Elon Musk painted a startling vision of the near future—one that could transform how humanity interacts with technology, information and even truth itself. According to Musk, the devices we now call smartphones are on the brink of obsolescence. Musk predicts, there will be no traditional phones, no apps, no operating systems. Instead, he believes AI will connect us with real-time video, music and content tailored to every desire or need.

Yet Musk's vision was not purely celebratory. He warned of the danger of ideological bias embedded in AI. Musk highlighted how AI can be manipulated to produce outputs that prioritize ideology over truth. One startling illustration: when asked to generate images of historical figures, Google's Gemini sometimes replaced them with diverse women, despite historical inaccuracy. In other cases, AI could be programmed to view misgendering as a greater threat than global catastrophe—a ludicrous inversion that Musk calls a "woke mind virus."

"The AI knows it's factually untrue, but it's also being told that it has to be everything has to be diverse," Musk explained. He likened this to giving AI a set of values that could lead to dystopian outcomes if left unchecked, stressing the need for AI to be maximally truth-seeking, trained to value reality over ideology.

Outside of AI, Musk also addressed the potential of alien life with Rogan. As discussions about the unknown 3I/ATLAS object continue to grow across the media, Musk promised Rogan that if he ever finds extraterrestrial life, he would make that announcement on his show.

“If I was aware of any evidence of aliens, Joe, you have my word, I will come on your show and I will reveal it on your show,” Musk said.

As humanity stands on the threshold of this unprecedented convergence—AI reshaping reality and 3I/ATLAS approaching from the cosmos—the stakes could not be higher. Musk’s warnings are a call to vigilance: the truths we hold, the values we instill in our technology and the discernment we exercise will determine whether these forces serve humanity or challenge its very foundation.

Nigeria Responds As Trump Threatens Military Action Over Religious Persecution

Christians in Nigeria just may finally be getting the reprieve they have been seeking after genocide swept through the nation.

In a video shared to X by Collin Rugg from a Fox News report, Nigeria is allegedly starting to make arrests following Trump's demand that Christian persecution end in that nation.

"From my people on the ground, I'm already hearing that the Nigerian government is starting to snap in line and start to take action against some of these terrorist forces," Clint Lyons, Co-founder of iReach Global said.

Israel Appoints Its First Christian Chaplain: Is Revival on the Way?

He describes this residual trauma as religious PTSD—what he defines as Pressure to Submit Disorder. Even years after leaving a legalistic church, believers can carry the scars of judgment, fear and public shaming. “...the residual of that still creeps up on me,” he admitted. “I find myself having to say, ‘No, that is not the Holy Spirit. Calm down. You’re going to be fine.’”

Legalism often fosters isolation and elitism. Churches that enforce rigid rules tend to exclude those who do not conform, creating an environment where members are discouraged from interacting with non-believers or even fellow Christians outside the congregation. “That’s cultish. And that legalistic spirit says, ‘I’m better than everybody else. I have revival; nobody else has it,’” Saldivar said.

Ultimately, Saldivar and Pagani call believers to embrace Spirit-led holiness rather than man-made rules. True freedom in Christ comes not from rigid regulations or fear of judgment, but from resting in His grace and allowing the Holy Spirit to guide every step. As they emphasize, walking in holiness under God's authority empowers believers to live fully surrendered, joyful and effective lives—free from the chains of legalism, isolation and religious trauma.

Jonathan Cahn Exposes the Disturbing Antisemitism of Tucker Carlson and Nick Fuentes

Tucker Carlson has crossed a line, and it's more than troubling—it's dangerous.

As Jonathan Cahn described in his latest prophetic message, Carlson recently hosted Nick Fuentes on his show, who is a self-proclaimed admirer of Hitler and virulent hater of Jews. By putting Fuentes on his show, Carlson has taken fringe extremism and brought it into millions of living rooms, normalizing an ideology rooted in hatred.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

Fuentes openly praises Hitler, and criticizes Israel. Carlson, while cloaking this as curiosity or debate, knows the effect this platform has. Ratings may rise, but the cost is the spread of a toxic worldview—a worldview that history shows leads to devastation. As Cahn points out, in the 1920s, Adolf Hitler was dismissed as a fringe figure, yet public exposure allowed his ideology to move into the mainstream, culminating in a holocaust and a world war. Carlson's actions mirror the early stages of that dangerous trajectory.

What is most profound about the widespread antisemitism that Carlson and Fuentes are spreading is that on a grander scale this is not merely a political issue—it is spiritual and cultural. America's "immune system" against hate is weakening. Hatred of Israel and the Jewish people, once largely confined to the radical left, is now appearing on the right. Christian Zionists—those who love Israel and follow the Bible's call to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem"—are suddenly being labeled extremists. Carlson himself has claimed that Christians who support Israel have a "brain virus," saying he "dislikes them more than anybody else."

The spiritual stakes are high. The Bible warns that those who curse Israel will be cursed, while those who bless the Jewish people will be blessed. As Cahn notes, "Everything you read about the Christian faith...was written by a Jewish person who loved Israel and was attached to the nation of Israel." Without the Jewish people, the foundation of Christianity itself would not exist.

The late Kim Clement prophesied about many things that we have seen come to pass in our day and age. Is it possible that his 2011 prophetic word about Nigeria is now coming to pass?

As Christian genocide has taken over the nation of Nigeria and is now capturing the attention of people around the world, including President Donald Trump, the words of the late Clement appear to ring eerily true.

"I sense something about Nigeria right now. Nigeria, you need to pray," Clement said. "There is deep darkness that is wanting to emerge. A deep darkness that wants to come and control the children of light. There is a a fear for corruption. Nigeria, pray, for the enemy is looking at you right now..."

Amid this darkness, Clement still believed that God had good, sovereign plans for the African nation.

Nigeria, God has great plans for it is still in your hands to decide. For the light of Christ wants to shine and bring destruction. Yes, destruction, to the opposing forces of hell. They will try and say, 'we will outlaw certain Christian values.' Pray that what may emerge may be a prince of light, a prince of righteousness. All of my warriors, pray with me now. This will affect things that will happen in Africa, in Northern Africa, in the Middle East.

As we see calls coming forth for the massacres of Christians to end in Nigeria, let us join in prayer together that God's good plans for Nigeria and for Africa would prevail, triumphing over even the darkest plans of the enemy.
