

Prophetic Warning for Walmart? Perry Stone Reveals Startling Dream

For the first time in U.S. history, Congress has introduced a resolution recognizing Israel's sovereignty over the Temple Mount—a site at the heart of biblical prophecy and the future construction of the third temple.

Congresswoman Claudia Tenney of New York spearheaded the measure, calling for equal access for Christians, Jews, and Muslims at this sacred location. In a recent episode of the Endtime show discussing this historic moment, Vince Stegall said, "We think everyone in the world should know that a third temple is coming...according to Scripture, that's just before the second coming of Jesus Christ."

The resolution emphasizes that the Temple Mount is the holiest site in Judaism, while also acknowledging its importance to all three Abrahamic faiths. It reaffirms Israel's control over Jerusalem, echoing President Trump's Peace for Prosperity plan and the Abraham Accords, which support freedom of worship for all faiths.

This legislative milestone comes as Jewish worshippers increasingly return to the Temple Mount—a practice largely restricted for nearly 2,000 years. Recent events have seen Jews openly praying, laying prostrate on the ground and even sounding the shofar, symbolizing a historic shift in access and practice at this sacred site. During the show Doug Norvell also pointed out, "Even when Israel took back the Temple Mount in 1967, they placed it under Muslim authority to keep from having war break out again...we've never seen this until now."

Prophetic experts highlight that the building of the third temple is not merely symbolic, but a literal milestone preceding the Second Coming of Jesus Christ. According to Scripture, this temple will be central to end-time events, with the Antichrist eventually appearing there to deceive the world. Revelation 11 specifically mentions a temple with an altar and worshippers, measured by an angel—a future, prophetic temple clearly distinct from past structures.

The resolution has received accolades from Jewish organizations and Christian supporters alike, reflecting a growing consensus on the biblical and historical significance of the Temple Mount. It also serves as a reminder that prophecy is unfolding in real time.

As this historic moment unfolds, it serves as a powerful reminder of the urgency of prophecy. For Christians, the building of the third temple is a clear signal that Scripture is moving toward fulfillment. While the world debates and speculates, believers are called to watch, pray and remain steadfast.

Mass Blackouts Raise Alarm: Are We Headed for Armageddon?

Lately there's been a rise of tech outages. Could these disruptions potentially be a sign of the things still to come?

According to the Daily Mail, thousands of people found themselves unable to use all kinds of online services with Microsoft and Azure crashing. This eerily comes less than two weeks after Amazon also experienced widespread blackouts that "brought 'half the internet' to a standstill," as the report noted. These ghastly outages are now raising a concern for what could happen in the future.

As the Mail discussed, both Amazon and Microsoft make up two of the globe's biggest carriers for "cloud computing." This means that most of the web requires these companies in order to power our sites, social media and apps. What's just as shocking is that Microsoft and Amazon alone "host over 60% of the world's cloud services," as the outlet stated. AI consultant Colette Mason from Clever Clogs AI said that, "We're seeing what 'putting all your eggs in one basket' looks like on a global scale."

When we think about the end times, could all of this have a meaning behind it that is prophetic of what we will see in a darkening world?

These unprecedented tech outages serve as a stark reminder that the systems we depend on so heavily are fragile, and that the world can change in an instant. As global infrastructure falters, it is easy to wonder if these disruptions are more than mere coincidence—could they be a foreshadowing of the turmoil described in Scripture for the last days? Just as the Bible warns of a world growing darker with a rising Beast System that will affect even our buying and selling of items, these massive blackouts highlight how reliant humanity has become on fleeting, earthly structures rather than the eternal.

Yet even as the world faces uncertainty and disruption, Christians can hold firm to a hope that transcends chaos. While technology may fail and global systems may crumble, we know the One who never fails is coming back soon. In the midst of instability, we can cling to Jesus with confidence, trusting that His return will bring the restoration and the peace only He can provide.

‘Do It for Charlie’: Erika Kirk Makes Stunning Return to the Turning Point USA Stage

In an emotional address that brought many to tears, applause and renewed conviction, Erika Kirk, widow of the late Charlie Kirk, stood before students at Ole Miss during the latest stop of the ‘This is the Turning Point’ tour, urging them to rise as a generation of courage, faith and conviction.

“Charlie loved to immerse himself in the culture of every campus he visited... he would take the time to make sure you knew he was investing into you, into your chapter, into your school,” Kirk said.

Through tears and strength, Kirk spoke of her late husband’s legacy—not only as a conservative leader but as a man of deep faith who believed that courage begins in the heart. She encouraged students to step out in faith for their beliefs and convictions. “The enemy doesn’t want you. He wants your territory. He wants your influence,” she said. “But the battle’s already won. God’s love conquers.”

Kirk called the moment both a “spiritual reclaiming of territory” and a “turning point” for her and for the students she addressed. Drawing from Charlie’s own words and habits, she shared how he lived his faith daily through intentional questions written on his desk: What is something I can do for someone today? What is something I can do to add value to the world today? How can I honor God today?

“To me, seeing that was him suited up with the armor of the Lord every day,” she said. “Those were the action points of how to have courage.”

Throughout the evening, Kirk reminded the crowd that their generation has been chosen for this moment in history. “You are the courageous generation,” she declared. “This generation will decide if America remembers who she is or if she’ll forget.”

She spoke with conviction about the call to live boldly and without fear: “You can’t change a nation if you’re enslaved to fear. You can’t call out corruption if you’re still chained to comfort. And you can’t stand for truth if you first do not kneel before the Lord.”

Her message went beyond politics—it was a spiritual charge for revival. “The fight for freedom starts within each and every one of you,” she said. “Because the enemy doesn’t need to change your theology. He just needs to change your vision.”

Kirk ended her remarks by calling the audience to live boldly for God and country, just as her husband had. “God has created you for greatness,” she said. “Stand up for the truth. Defend life. Love your family fearlessly. Love this country. Serve our God. Don't think it's someone else's role to do it. You do it. Do it for Charlie."

With those words, Erika Kirk turned loss into legacy—reminding a generation that courage, faith and obedience to God can still change the course of a nation.

World War III in 2026? What Kim Clement Saw Coming

As The Strait Times reported, South Korean President Lee wanted to give the honor to Donald Trump because he has acted as a "peacemaker" for the Korean peninsula. The "Grand Order of Mugunghwa" is named after the nation's flower, which is a pink hibiscus. It is also commonly referred to as the Rose of Sharon. The crown that Trump received, a replica of the Cheonmachong crown, supposedly represents the peace past, present and future on the Korean Peninsula, and how both South Korea and America will collaborate to ensure this happens.

Order Jonathan Cahn's Newest Book, "The Avatar" on !

During the ceremony where Trump received the crown, it was stated that the crown “symbolizes the divine connection between the authority of the heavens and sovereignty on earth...”

The South Korean president decided to wear a custom-made tie because it “reflects President Trump’s taste for gold, captures the golden future of the South Korea-US alliance and the status of South Korea.”

This latest peace award for Trump comes after many others, including those from Israel and Egypt. However, there may be something even more to this particular peace award. Could this one in particular be connected to the end times?

Revelation 6:2 tells us: “And I looked, and there before me was a white horse. He who sat on it had a bow. And a crown was given to him, and he went forth conquering that he might overcome.”

There’s no question that Trump has gone out conquering, attempting to bring world peace. Could this latest award conquest, in the very least, be a symbol of things yet to come?

Revelation 9:7 also reads: “The shape of the locusts was like horses prepared for battle. On their heads were something like crowns of gold, and their faces were like faces of men.”

While we cannot say with certainty what the future holds, moments like President Trump receiving the “Grand Order of Mugunghwa” and a golden crown in South Korea may serve as more than mere diplomatic honors. These modern crowns may hint at events yet to come, urging the Church to remain vigilant, prayerful and rooted in Christ. This moment in South Korea could very well be a prophetic signpost, a subtle alert that history—and perhaps prophecy—is moving in ways we must watch with eyes wide open and hearts attuned to God’s guidance.

Home Robots Are Here: Are We Living in the Days of Revelation?

While talk about robots taking over the world has long been a movie trope for decades, the reality of robots as part of our daily lives just got a whole lot closer.

This is where robotics company iX’s new Neo humanoid robot comes into play. As Engadget reports, these $20,000 humanoid robots are now available for pre-sale to do household chores.

As the article notes, “Users will be able to control NEO and have it accomplish tasks around the house with the click of a button or a verbal command. It will come with the ability to do basic tasks autonomously when it starts shipping next year, including opening doors, fetching items and turning the lights on or off.”

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

Creepy? I’d say so. Not only will Neo be able to perform these tasks, but those who want these home robots to do more extravagant tasks must be “comfortable with the idea of a human teleoperator controlling the robot remotely and seeing inside their homes,” as Engadget writes.

To order James Lasher’s new book, The Revelation of Jesus, visit .

Not only are the robots essentially being taught to do household chores on their own, but having the requirement of allowing a remote operator inside your home means literally letting strangers into all your business. Quite possibly, all of this sounds much like that of the beast system. How much autonomy will these robots have once they advance? What about those who are gaining access to the homes of civilians? Could this be capitalized and used against those who disagree with the elite?

As technology races forward, the warnings of Scripture echo louder than ever. Revelation speaks of a time when “no one could buy or sell unless he had the mark” and when a global system of control would rise through deception and power.

While AI and robotics promise convenience, they also open the door to surveillance, manipulation and dependency unlike anything humanity has ever known. The merging of artificial intelligence, data collection and human-like machines points toward a world where privacy, autonomy and even free will could be subtly eroded—preparing the stage for a system that knows, monitors and controls all.

This is a call to discernment: we must guard our hearts, our homes and our faith, trusting not in the works of man's hands but in the sovereignty of Jesus Christ, who alone will reign when every counterfeit system collapses.
