

Trump Peace Portrait Revealed: Could It Hold Hidden Prophetic Significance?

Is there a deeper prophetic significance behind a resurfaced peace portrait of President Trump from 1983?

In recent days, a Manhattan Inc. magazine cover from 1983 has circulated social media because of its profound significance: a portrait of Donald Trump holding a dove symbolizing peace. During his second term, Trump has not only declared himself to be the president of peace, but he has attempted to bring nations together who have been at war with one another, most notably between Israel and Gaza. Could these very acts of prophetic significance have been foretold of decades ago?

In a 2016 article by Time Magazine, William Coupon, the photographer who took the photo said, "I shot Donald Trump twice. This is my favorite. Trump was offering his services as a 'peace negotiator' between the Israelis and the Palestinians."

Photograph by William Coupon, 1983.

This statement has plenty of prophetic implications. While Coupon was speaking of taking photography shots, the notion of "two shots" being taken at Trump has an even greater meaning to it today knowing that there were two assassination attempts on his life. Trump also is the one who actually served as the mediator between Israel and Gaza to end the war between the two.

In the article, Coupon also noted that "... ultimately, it was that something in his eyes" that made the photo stand out.

Another 2016 article by The Guardian, Coupon is quoted for having also taken Trump's photo for the Jewish Defense League in 1992 as he held a baby tree in it. The article notes that at that time Trump, "maintained his pro-Israel ties."

Could it be that what was once viewed as a simple magazine cover now carries prophetic weight in light of current events? The imagery of Trump holding a dove—an ancient symbol of peace and the Holy Spirit—seems to foreshadow his modern role as a peacemaker among nations long at war.

Decades later, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu gifted Trump a golden dove of peace, taking this prophecy even further.

Scripture tells us, "Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the sons of God," (Matt. 5:9). The symbol of the dove is found in the Bible starting all the way back at the beginning in Genesis, showing that the Holy Spirit was also there. Perhaps the Holy Spirit is trying to use Trump as one of these peacemakers.

Whether one sees Trump as a political figure or as an instrument in God's timeline, the symbolism of that dove in his hands invites reflection: peace is not just a policy, but a prophecy.

After the assassination of Charlie Kirk, a revival spread out with people going to church for the first time in years, some picking up Scripture for the first time in their life. Could this truly be the end times revival we've been waiting for?

Joel 2:28 tells us: "And it will be that, afterwards, I will pour out My Spirit on all flesh; then your sons and your daughters will prophesy, your old men will dream dreams, and your young men will see visions."

God promised that His name would be known to the very ends of the earth before His return. This surge in spiritual hunger shows that even in the darkest and most unexpected corners of modern life, God is at work. People are seeking truth, hope and purpose, and the signs of revival are unmistakable.

In a press release, Angel Studios announced the film's upcoming release in theaters on Dec. 19, 2025.

"David is an animated film and television series based on the biblical story of the shepherd boy chosen to defeat Goliath and inspire his nation," the release noted.

According to this release, the film is making historic milestones. "David is the largest audience-funded film in history," CEO and co-founder of Angel Studios noted. "At a time when the world is craving hope, David's unyielding courage and faith remind us all to stand tall, and I am profoundly grateful for the miracle of this moment."

The newly released trailer and song from the film, "Follow the Light" features voice Phil Wickham and Brandon Engman.

This film could not come at a more perfect moment as mainstream entertainment for families continues to become polluted with demonic, LGBTQ inspired agendas. In a culture that is growing cold to morality, faith-based entertainment is critical.

“Charles James Kirk was a visionary,” Trump noted, recounting how Kirk started Turning Point USA humbly with its great explosion of growth taking place after Kirk’s death. He then called Charlie a “true evangelist for freedom,” who had a heart for the “Almighty God.”

The president pointed out that Kirk held dearly onto his Judeo-Christian values and stood up for his faith. Now, Kirk rests in the: “glory of our Savior,” as Trump said before calling him a martyr for the principles of truth and freedom. On the opposite hand, the president said that the left is now steeped in “the devil’s ideology.”

President Trump noted that in honor of Charlie, it is now our turn to continue fighting for the freedom of our nation. On Charlie's behalf, his wife, Erika, received the medal before delivering her own remarks.

"Thank you for loving us and for praying for us," Erika Kirk stated. She then noted that the growing chapters of Turning Point USA are the heart that will continue to keep Charlie's memory alive.

Turning to the value of freedom that her husband loved, Erika Kirk said, "The blessings of liberty are not man's invention but God's endowment." As Erika described, Charlie believed that, "The freest people in the world are those whose hearts belong to Christ." This, according to Erika Kirk, is exactly who her husband is today. "Now he wears the crown of a righteous gained what earth could no longer contain."

As America reflects on the life and legacy of Charlie Kirk, his courage, conviction and unwavering faith continue to inspire a generation to stand for truth and freedom. Though his earthly mission has ended, his voice still echoes through the movement he built and the lives he touched

As Erika Kirk put it, "To live free is the greatest gift. But to die free is the greatest victory."
