Last night, I was up all night praying for my sister, Dolly. Many of you know she hasn't been feeling her best lately. I truly believe in the power of prayer, and I have been lead to ask all of the world that loves her to be prayer warriors and pray with me. She's strong, she's loved, and with all the prayers being lifted for her, I know in my heart she's going to be just fine. Godspeed, my sissy Dolly. We all love you!

I am not going to be able to rehearse and put together the show that I want you to see, and the show that you deserve to see. You pay good money to see me perform, and I want to be at my best for you. While I'll still be able to work on all of my projects from here in Nashville, I just need a little time to get show ready, as they say.

Earlier this year, Parton's husband, Carl Dean, passed away, who she considered a "God-send" in her life. The couple was together for 60 years.

"I think my husband and my relationship was just really a knew

I was going to need somebody like him if I was going to be doing all this crazy stuff,” Parton previously stated.

Parton’s faith has been a huge driving factor of her career. Back in 2023, Parton announced the release of her song, “Don’t Make Me Come Down There,” and how it was given to her through a prophetic dream by the Lord. The star stated that the dream was of God standing on top of a mountain.

“He was standing on a mountain top, looking down on us and in my dream I heard Him say, ‘Don’t make Me have to come down there. My children, you had best beware. If you don’t pay attention, consequences will be dire. Don’t make Me have to come down there.’”

For Parton, her “faith impacts everything that I do because I do believe that, through God, all things are possible...” she said in 2023. “I always ask God to bless everything that I do and the people that I work with and to bring all the right things and right people into my life and to take the wrong ones out.”

This hope in Christ also comes from Parton’s upbringing, rooting her in Christianity and its message of hope.

“I have a lot of faith, and that’s what gets me through my life; it always has,” she said. “I grew up here in these mountains in a very spiritual family. My grandpa was a preacher. I believe that through God, all things are possible, and that included my creativity and my dreams. It’s just really a fun night to be here seeing another dream come true, and I just thank God for all of it.”

Now, as Parton deals with these health issues, lift her up in prayer believing for God to do a miracle for her and her family.

Jordan Peterson's Family Under Spiritual Attack: 'It's a Lot to Handle'

Jordan Peterson's daughter, Mikhaila Fuller, gave a heart-stopping update on how their family has been under overt spiritual attacks since her dad's health dramatically declined.

In a video shared to X, Fuller stated, "This summer's been exceedingly difficult. Dad was in ICU suffering with pneumonia and sepsis after dealing with a host of neurological we believe stem from CIRS, which is Chronic Inflammatory Response Syndrome from decades of mold exposure."

Fuller then said that there has not been a better explanation given to her about her father's condition other than it must be “spiritual attacks.”

Fuller says that her family was not able to communicate much with her father through most of the month of September. She says Peterson has now been moved out of ICU into a “less urgent” floor.

“Praise God for that,” Fuller says. “My family’s asking for prayers. Like I said, this summer’s been exceedingly difficult and terrifying.”

Along with her dad’s critical illness, Fuller also explained how her own newborn daughter almost died this summer as well.

“I believe there’s a spiritual element at play here. I think a lot of people have felt in the last few weeks and months. It’s been hitting my dad and my family hard this summer. In August, the day dad was brought to a hospital by ambulance, my newborn, Audrey was also brought to the hospital by ambulance within hours of each other. It was unbelievable. This was the second time this summer we brought Audrey to the hospital after she almost died from near-heart failure at six weeks old...”

Hey, as you know @jordanbpeterson has been really sick. A lot of people have been asking for updates so here’s one. He’s recovering slowly day by day but I won’t lie, it’s slow and scary. He won’t be back for another few months at least, probably longer. We’re not entirely sure...

Fuller says that through all of it, her family has been leaning on the Lord. She further recognized that God does and can use absolutely anything for good. Fuller says that she believes the best way to fight back against this attack is to continue forward with her father's mission and works.

In an Instagram post, Moore wrote, “These last two years I’ve been locked in on what really my life and in my career. It’s been scary at times, but it’s also been full of fresh vision and real excitement about the future. With that, I’ve made the bittersweet decision to end my relationship with Maverick City Music.”

Moore also discussed how it was his dream to bring people closer to God through music when Maverick City was launched.

When we started Mav, I was grateful to have community and belonging while fulfilling my dream of making music that would help people experience God. And we did ways I couldn’t have imagined.

Moore then thanked the fans and everyone who collaborated with Maverick City over the past few years. He then addressed that there is “certain business matters” that are being handled by his legal team.

This transition isn’t easy. Maverick is something I poured my heart into, so it’s almost like saying goodbye to your own kid, ha. I know there may be press and conversation around certain business matters that my legal team is handling. But my heart, my energy, and my focus are on what’s ahead.

The dream hasn’t changed. I’m stepping into this next phase ready to share my story and make music that helps people feel a little more human, a little more understood, and a little less alone.

One of the most unusual practices she recalled was “angel possession.” “If you took a picture of it, you would go, ‘This is a regular church.’ And then all of a sudden, one of the church mothers over on the side would just throw her head back in like a fainting kind of way. And then somebody would take her shoes off, stand her up and she would announce that an angel was inside of her.” She later realized, “...looking back those were not angels. Those were demons. And this was a way to control the church. This was a way to manipulate people. And this was very cultlike.”

As a teenager, Weaver’s curiosity drew her deeper into occult practices. “I saw it as a means of ‘let me be let me’... this is something that can bring me happiness, can bring me peace, can bring me control [and] power.” She began studying witchcraft, exploring crystals, sage, pendulums and books about nature-based practices. ““I believe it was demonic curiosity. I believe I was actually lured into it constantly. And “...there was a strong pull from the demonic side to get me away from the things of God because the what kind of calling and what kind of impact you’re going to have in in the church world.”

Weaver also warned of modern-day witchcraft infiltrating media, entertainment and social platforms. "I have a whole section of that in my book about how witchcraft is literally infiltrated Hollywood and movies..."

Weaver's testimony points to the power of God. "Nine years of addiction, heroin, meth, practicing witchcraft into alternative lifestyle, a life of perversion, hatred, every kind of demonic door homelessness, being literally on the streets in and out of jail, just feeling like there's no more reason to live. I remember at my lowest point, I cried out to God and I said, 'God, help me.' I screamed it as loud as I possibly could. And God stepped in and he helped me."

Weaver encourages all to turn to Jesus Christ. "Whosoever calls on the name of the Lord Jesus shall be saved... Repent of your sins. Our God, I lay this down. I lay that down. I turn from it. I'm not just sorry for it. Repenting is saying, I'm turning from it. I'm not going back to it. Lay it down right now in the name of Jesus Christ." She concludes, "No matter what you do, lean into God every single day. Cultivate a relationship with Him. He literally is waiting with arms wide open for us to know him better. And when you know him, you will not fall prey to the deception of witchcraft in our day-to-day."
