

Prophecies Confirm Historic Vision to Take Place in November

"Knowing that Billy Graham's real influence on America began in a tent in California ... and has continued to fuel a worldwide soul-winning organization encourages us to believe it can happen again in America," Leslie McNulty says.

"We appreciate the knowledge of those prophecies as confirming what we have put our hands to," Kevin McNulty says.

The couple are co-founders and lead evangelists at Christian Adventures International (CAI).

The Vision: Ministry in Tents All Over America

CAI leaders have set the goal high for America: 50 tents, 50 teams, 50 states. Undaunted by the mammoth tasks ahead, the McNultys report that, to date, recruitment nationwide for volunteers has been spectacular.

"We are recruiting representatives from all 50 states," Leslie says. "We have several states that have verbally committed, in Florida, Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, North Carolina, Georgia, Texas, Oklahoma, Washington, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New Mexico, Kentucky, Montana, Nebraska, South Dakota and Arizona."

Initially, recruitment efforts draw volunteers from American congregations for ministers and evangelists to start the tent ministries in their states, Kevin says.

"There are a number of skill sets necessary for success that can be developed,” he says. “In your team, there must be strong hands. For obtaining necessary permits to erect a tent this size, there must be a mature leader who can understand local laws, and, of course, a preacher.”

The recruitment invitations are being extended to gospel workers comprised of believers, Bible school students, Sunday school and home group leaders. These leaders will form the teams in each of the 50 states. Ushers, volunteers, logistics managers and practical ministry helpers are needed, the McNultys say.

“Administrative team leaders and state coordinators are being recruited in order to facilitate the ministry outreach and team development for each area,” Leslie says. “These leaders should have strong administrative leadership skills. Recommendations from ministry and business leaders along with documented experience will be necessary.”

The “50 tents in 50 states” strategy does not mean just one tent in one state after the campaign catches fire, they say.

“Some of the states like Michigan and Illinois are ready to act now,” Kevin says. “A state like Florida where warmer weather is more frequent can provide an environment where tent ministry can operate year-round. We anticipate training tents going up all year in Florida.”

November Event in Florida Will Be the Test for Expansion

CAI leaders acknowledge that the November event in Daytona Beach will be a test for deciding when and where to launch in more states.

“We are willing to call this a ‘soft’ launch,” Leslie says. “In other words, if 10 to 15 states are participating in Florida in November, we believe that is a strong indication we should move forward. We will look to stage another training in 2019, possibly in another region of the USA, where we will set up a large tent.”

That does not mean the campaign won't do another event in Daytona Beach, she says. They also anticipate that at minimum, volunteers from 25 of the 50 states will attend the November launch. CAI team members from Russian and the Baltics will also be there. Tent ministers will come from across Russia, from Moscow to the Evenki tribe area of Buryatia in the Far East to the Southern area known as “the land between the seas” (Black Sea and Caspian Sea), Leslie McNulty says.

The Russians will come in once the Russian authorities and US State Department grant the necessary visas. Despite the recent expulsion of diplomats from Russia and America from the respective homelands over political squabbles, the McNultys have several team members scheduled for interviews for visa applications. “We are praying for successful visas,” Leslie says.

Also, the McNultys' decades of experience living and working in the former Soviet Union have taught them wise ways to avoid problems from existing political frictions between the West and former Soviet Union territorial governments.

“We have spent 25 years working in an environment where the US and Russian governments have been negotiating political influence on the world scene,” Leslie says.

“We always remind ourselves that our goal is to lift up Christ,” she continues. “We esteem each other. Many years ago when we first entered Russia, the Russian people would say, ‘We never hated you Americans. We didn't know you. This was just a political game our countries played.’”

The CAI teams simply stay out of the politics and work in the spiritual realm of seeking God's anointing to teach and preach the gospel and train others to do so within the laws of each location where they are working. A good example of CAI's success to avoid political problems with this strategy is how their teams have been able to work in both the Ukraine and Russian regions nearby, where border conflicts have occasionally been heated.

“When Russia and the Ukraine entered into a conflict over the Crimea and Donbass region, it became very clear that in order to work on both sides of the border, we must stay above the political discussion,” Leslie McNulty says. “We have done our best to share this with our team leaders, and to encourage them to communicate God’s Love.”

In America, where political division from the left and right have reached historic levels of angst and sometimes violent reactions, the same strategy will apply to tent teams in their geographical locations, the McNultys say.

The campaign to reach America with the gospel is spiritual, not political, and although CAI is based on a charismatic doctrine, they stress the tent ministries are always open to participants from every denomination: Protestant, Catholic or otherwise.

“Our meetings and our preaching are trans-denominational,” Leslie says. “All pastors and churches are welcome to be involved and we hope that this would be the case in every area.”

“We do not come preaching against anything or anyone! We come in the Spirit of Christ lifting all to hear a message of hope, love and healing through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ,” she says.

What Will Transpire at the November Launch in Daytona?

The heartbeat of the entire campaign will culminate with the CAI vision for evangelizing the USA literally from the ground up, as an experienced tent team will raise the giant structure as it has a thousand times already all across Russia, Eurasia, French Africa and now in Europe. Americans will get their first look at Russian born-again Christians and their passion for Christian evangelism and ministry in the country that brought them the gospel.

At the November event, Russian music leader and virtuoso violinist Olga Kozorez will equip American musicians with an understanding of how to use music to preach the gospel. Egvenny Gurinovich will provide an emphasis on street evangelism.

International Director Akop Mkrtrumyan will provide insights into working with governments, pastoral councils and administrative teams. Kirill Kozores will provide insights into what is required technically to facilitate a tent ministry. And Johannes Kudrin will emphasize team ministry and community outreach.

- Voice of Life conference: This is conducted for church and ministry leaders, believers, Gospel workers, Sunday school leaders, Bible school students and youth will take place over 2-3 days. Our sessions focus on How Believers Continue the Ministry that Christ began with teachings on the Voices of the Harvest, the Voice of Redemption, the Voice of Miracles and LIVE Messages, discovering our legality, inspiration, validity and experience.
- A city-wide believers meeting: During this one-night event, we release the believers into the major role of inviting the population of the city and villages to these extraordinary meetings. These meetings are an integral part of preparation for the outreach. Leslie says, "We do not rely on the dollar value of advertising for the success of the event but on the personal invitations of believers."
- The iMove daily tent training: Gospel workers will participate in the tent event through prayer, training, tent-set up, street evangelism and daily application of principles in a team environment within the Big tent. The McNultys developed the iMove program specifically to provide motivation, opportunity, vision and empowerment to help fulfill the desire of the hearts of believers to help hurting humanity, share their faith, release their God-given destiny and develop the character in them that is required to be a solution to society's problems in this generation.

- Big Tent Festival: This is the time we take our Christian witness public. Our purpose is to give proof of the biblical truths that we have taught during the conference and training, and to publicly demonstrate that Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, today and forever. The Big Tent Festival is a full cultural program of music, drama and poetry.

Each night the people are offered the opportunity to receive Jesus Christ as their Savior and mass prayers for the sick are given. Kevin says, "Testimonies are a vital part of our meetings each evening. In conducting altar calls and public prayers, we seek a venue that allows us to communicate freely and affords us the opportunity to connect the new believers with the local church community."

Anointing Breaks Through Backed by 200 Years of Prophetic Words

Since 1998, Christian Adventures International (CAI) has been training Russians, African, Europeans and Eurasians to be tent ministers and preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ in their homelands. On the strength of their anointed success and backed by 200 years of prophetic words concerning America, CAI is now focusing their mission of evangelism on the United States.

While most of America today is beleaguered with cable news saturation painting the Russians as meddlers in US elections and hackers of political parties here, Americans will soon find out that many Russians are born-again believers who are well equipped to preach the gospel and minister as Jesus Himself taught.

Yes—the Russians are coming! But they're coming with the love of Jesus Christ and a passion for winning souls, healing the sick and reigniting the faith of spiritually faltering believers. The Russians will partner with their American friends to help them expand Christian outreach, build new churches and support Americans in their quest to guide the nation back to the Christian foundation on which it was built.

The U.S. campaign, entitled "Tent Nation," is scheduled to launch in Daytona Beach from Nov. 9-18 (see). CAI and its partners of local churches and volunteers from across the nation will make Florida the launch site of the national campaign to preach the gospel and minister in all 50 states.

Drs. Kevin and Leslie McNulty, co-founders and lead evangelists who together have been training leaders since 1988, began "The 100 Tent Project" in 1998 to train Russians and other citizens in the former Soviet Union to use large event-capacity tents to take the gospel across their homelands to unreached areas.

In the US, they will use the same tent-meeting strategy that has been extremely successful in Russia, Ukraine, Bulgaria, Poland, Armenia, Estonia, Latvia, Georgia, Kyrgyzstan, Kazakhstan, Bashkortostan and many other locations.

The McNultys call Daytona Beach home, but have spent much of their lives leading CAI campaigns overseas, including a key ministry base outside of Moscow. They are celebrating 30 years of marriage as well.

The 10-day event in November also will celebrate CAI's Moscow tent factory completion of its 100th tent. Sixty of those tents are 3,000 square feet in size and can seat 300 to 350 people. The 100th tent will be erected and dedicated in Daytona Beach, where it will be used for children's outreach. A larger circus-sized tent will be procured in the US to use for main events.

Local churches in Florida and from around the U.S. will be invited to send members for training by CAI ministers—many of them from Russia—to learn how to use the tent meetings across the state. The tent strategy for a decade has enabled home-grown evangelists to reach vast regions of towns and villages with events staged in the culturally familiar tents.

Today, CAI teams abroad have staged some 1,000 tent raisings and ministry campaigns in 22 nations. The McNultys' work also has helped to spawn a large alliance of Russian churches under the leadership of Bishop Sergei Rikhovsky.

Prophecy: Now It's America's Turn

CAI's leaders have of recent followed a calling to move into Western Europe, specifically—Belgium, France and Spain. Mass outreach campaigns conducted by the McNultys with Dr. T. L. Osborn across French Africa have mobilized African preachers to Europe. The combination of CAI's tent ministers along with the African leaders have positioned the ministry for strategic European impact.

Osborn, the late American evangelist, was a key mentor to the McNultys. Always hovering in the future for CAI was America: The prophecies have always revealed that a campaign for America lurked somewhere on the ministry's horizon.

CAI's leaders now believe that time has come! The November launch in Florida—with its sights on all 50 U.S. states—is a bold move largely bolstered by a recent prophecy by a key Estonian evangelist in their own camp; a prior word by Dr. Osborn; a word of calling for evangelism in the US from Ann Graham Lotz and Franklin Graham, Billy Graham's daughter and son, at Rev. Graham's homegoing celebration and a pair of hair-raising historic prophecies from the late 1800s and early 1900s concerning Russia and the US.

There were other words given to the McNultys—some in passing by Oral Roberts and Kenneth Copeland concerning tent campaigns (“The tent anointing is back, big time,” exclaimed Copeland)—and some directly to them individually.

“When T.L. Osborn spoke in Russia for the first time in 1995, as I was listening to him speak, I heard the sound of an army that arose in lockstep and moved into action,” Leslie McNulty said. “I also heard the Lord say, ‘Will you?’ I said yes...”

Then in January 2016 while attending a U.S. ministers conference, she had a similar encounter. The speaker was telling of his hippie lifestyle and conversion to Christ in the Californian Jesus Movement.

“As he shared his story, I heard that lockstep sound in the Spirit again, the sound of the harvest, the heart cry for workers and evangelism, and I heard these words: ‘Another Jesus Movement is coming to America, and it is not like anything America has ever experienced,’ ” Leslie McNulty said.

“But I also heard the Lord say ‘The church is not ready for the generation that is coming in. It is a generation without identity, and the church is not ready to receive them...’ I doubled over with my head in my lap, contemplating what this meant, crying, listening, knowing that America was approaching its finest hour of Gospel Harvest!”

Also in 2016, the McNultys received a significant sign from a key evangelist from their team, concerning America, confirming their decision to move forward here.

As they contemplated the launch date of the U.S. campaign, they received a phone call from Estonian evangelist and missionary leader Joahannes Kudrin. Kudrin, who has served with the CAI tent ministry since the beginning, is a Russian-speaking Estonian. In the phone call, Kudrin specifically asked about starting a tent ministry in the U.S. Kudrin’s exact words were this: “I want to know what you think about initiating a tent movement in the USA?” Leslie McNulty said.

The McNultys were amazed at the timing—a confirmation—as they and their board of directors had just decided to begin work in the USA. “Evangelist Kudrin’s phone call was like a phone call from heaven,” Leslie McNulty said. Also, two very startling prophecies of major significance came from a British missionary and later, a Russian Orthodox priest, the McNultys noted.

Hudson Taylor, British missionary to China, had an amazing vision in 1889 of a great spiritual national awakening in Russia that will touch Europe before Christ’s Return. Taylor’s vision: “I saw in this vision a war that encompasses the world. I saw this war recess, and then start again (World Wars I & II). After this I saw much unrest and revolts that will affect many nations. I saw in some places Spiritual Awakenings.”

Hudson’s vision continued: “In Russia I saw there will come a general, all encompassing, national spiritual awakening, so great that there could never be another like it. From Russia, I saw the Awakening spread to many European countries. Then I saw an all-out awakening, followed by the Second Coming of Christ.”

Then in 1911, a Russian Orthodox Priest Aristocoli in the Kremlin told a Carmelite nun who became Mother Barbess of the Russian Church of St. Mary Magdelene on the Mount of Olives in Jerusalem, another startling prophecy.

Aristocoli said, in part: “An evil will shortly take Russia and wherever this evil comes, rivers of blood will flow. (The 1917 Russian Communist Revolution). This evil will take the whole world and wherever it goes, rivers of blood will flow because of it. It is not the Russian soul, but an imposition on the Russian soul. It is not an ideology, or a philosophy, but a spirit from hell.

“In the last days, Germany will be divided in two. France will just be nothing. Italy will be judged by natural disasters. Britain will lose her empire and all her colonies and will come to almost total ruin, but a female monarch will be on the throne and Britain will be saved by praying women.”

On America, Aristocoli said: “America will feed the world, but will finally collapse. Russia and China will destroy each other. Finally, Russia will be free, and from her, believers will go forth and turn many from the nations to God. The light over the whole world will be from Russia, who suffered more than anybody. Russia will be completely reborn!”

The McNultys have lived in Moscow and other parts of Russia, and clearly understand why the Russian people have a heart and desire for America to be reached with the Gospel.

“To truly understand, we must return to the year 1989 and the fall of the Berlin Wall,” Kevin McNulty said. “Then Americans sent thousands of missionaries to the ex-Soviet territories, planting churches, starting Bible schools, conducting mass outreaches and initiating TV programs,” he said. “The love that the Russian-speaking people felt from American missionaries was simply overwhelming. We were the answer to the prayers of their forefathers. We had come with the Good News!”

More recently at the Rev. Billy Graham’s homegoing celebration at his home in North Carolina, his daughter Anne Graham Lotz and son Franklin Graham both declared their father’s passing as a sign and call from the Lord for others to take up Dr. Graham’s mantle and begin carrying out the Great Commission in America—that America’s time had come.

The McNultys had visited Rev. Graham’s library before his passing, where they contemplated the worldwide ministry that Graham, too, had started with a tent ministry in the 1950s.

“The words from Anne Graham Lotz were like a shot across the bow—a sign from heaven to pay attention: This is the hour of America,” Leslie McNulty said.

David Wilkerson Blasts Faith Preachers in Sermon

This article was originally published in the October 1999 issue of Charisma.

In a sermon preached six months ago and circulated widely on cassette tapes, New York pastor David Wilkerson blasts prosperity doctrines, “holy laughter” and the flamboyance of evangelist Benny Hinn.

In Wilkerson’s April 11 sermon, titled “Reproach of the Solemn Assembly,” Wilkerson warned his 7,000-member Times Square Church to burn books written by any propagators of these doctrines. He also told his parishioners to stay away from evangelist Rodney Howard-Browne's Good News New York (GNNY) crusade that ran from July 7 to Aug. 14. The GNNY campaign reported more than 48,000 decisions for Christ, the majority of them first-time salvations.

Called to the Top of the World

Kay Gordon has braved subzero weather and harsh living conditions for 40 years to bring the gospel to the Inuit people of Canada's northern Arctic region.

Young Kay Gordon of Vancouver, British Columbia, couldn't escape the burden that God had placed on her heart. While praying one Saturday night in 1953, the 19-year-old received a vision of herself ministering to the Inuit people of the frozen Arctic—a land of snow and ice, subzero temperatures, polar bears and caribou, reindeer herders and the aurora borealis. This was a land where few missionaries had dared to tread.

The Inuit, known to Westerners as Eskimos, have inhabited the Canadian Arctic for 5,000 years. They are relatives of Arctic inhabitants in Russia and other lands above the Arctic Circle. Their spirituality was founded on spiritism and occultic shamanism, except for some inroads made by ritualistic Anglican missionaries and others in Canada's north.
