

Something Smells

Pride stinks because it is the sulfuric stench of Lucifer himself.

Open the Books

If God is conducting His own heavenly audit, let's welcome correction.

Desperate Times

Please pray. We can't settle for anything less than a heavenly visitation.

A Charismatic Enron?

Those leaders with a spirit of entitlement should be disqualified.

Dancing on Division

A Subtle Deception

Jesus is the only way. There is no Plan B for Jesus.

Facebook Nation

Youth today are not interested in anything fake or pretentious.

Open Your Borders

My immigrant friends, have made my life richer and more colorful.

The Father's Healing Love

About 15 years ago I was in a department store in northern Virginia with my oldest daughter, Margaret. She was a precocious, talkative 6-year-old with a flair for the dramatic. You just never knew what this child might say to perfect strangers.

We walked past the women's lingerie section and Margaret impulsively grabbed a pair of lacy, pink panties off a rack and twirled them in the air with her finger. Then she declared to every shopper within range: "I am going to wear these panties when I am 18!"

Horrified, I ducked my head and pulled Margaret toward the escalator, trying to avoid eye contact with the amused customers who overheard her awkward proclamation. They were probably thinking to themselves, That little girl is going to be quite a handful when she grows up.

Hurricane Warning

God is so serious about holiness that He will expose religious corruption.