

AI Surveillance and Bible Prophecy: Is the Global Control Grid Here?

Sister Carolyn Savelle, the widow of renowned evangelist Jerry Savelle, recently joined Bishop Alan DiDio on Encounter Today and shared a powerful prophetic word in light of the current unrest in Los Angeles.

Known for her unwavering faith, bold testimony and decades of ministry alongside her husband, Savelle is stepping into a new season, championing a message of joy, revival and generational hope.

As news of riots in L.A. continues to shake the nation, Savelle offered a strong prophetic declaration: "I'm believing God that the riots that we're seeing out in L.A. right now—that that's going to turn into a massive revival. Let's pray and believe God that that's going to turn on the devil and we're going to see something come out of that that they don't expect, and it's going to be so big. Oh I'm prophesying now... that the news media is going to have to report it because it's going to be so big that they can't squelch it and keep it shut up."

Her passion for the next generation was equally clear. With a grandmother's heart and prophetic urgency, she lamented the spiritual distraction of modern youth culture. "They need Jesus more than they need anything in this whole world," she said. "They don't need the social media that is just rampant... The distraction of this age is just like a bait out there that Satan is using to draw [them]."

Despite the darkness of the times, her hope remains firm. "They are not a lost generation. They are a generation that's going to usher in, help us usher in, the appearing of Jesus and the rapture of the church."

As Savelle steps into another chapter of her calling, she serves as a beacon for believers everywhere to stir up their faith, pray for revival and support the rising voices of a new move of God.

But perhaps her most vital message in this moment came not from a book, but straight from her heart: "We've got to get on our knees as grandmothers and great granny's like I am and start believing God for this revival... and it's going to be so big."

Fulfilling End Times Prophecy? Bible Experts Weigh In

While the deadly conflict with Iran continues, believers in Israel are finding peace and purpose in the midst of devastation, by pointing to the Prince of Peace.

Ellie Birnbaum, Israel director for Jews for Jesus, spoke to CBN News from inside a bomb shelter, where he and others have been taking refuge during relentless rocket barrages. "This is an epic biblical proportion battle we're in the midst of," he said. "A rocket fell just about 200 meters from my parents' house and destroyed a whole building. I think eight people were killed... and 200 were injured."

Birnbaum described the chaos as "very scary," with more than 100 ballistic missiles aimed at civilian areas. "We have the Iron Dome... they're able to stop 95% of them, but those 5% are so deadly and so scary," he added.

Yet even amid destruction, Birnbaum shared that the Spirit of God is moving.

"In times of storm... Jesus gave us an example of what happens in the storm when he took his disciples through a storm to expose his glory and to grow faith in them," Birnbaum said. "He actually tells to them, 'Why are you afraid? Where is your faith?'"

Rather than focusing on fear or geopolitics, Birnbaum urged viewers to recognize where true hope comes from. "God wants to expose, as we go through these crises, where our faith is and who can give us peace. And the only one who can give us peace is Jesus, is Yeshua, who is the Messiah of Israel."

CBN's host turned to Scripture to underscore the prophetic significance of the moment. Reading from Ezekiel 37:14, he declared, "I will put my Spirit in you and you will live, and I will settle you in your own land. Then you will know that I the Lord have spoken, and I have done it."

The verses surrounding that prophecy were also read aloud as a declaration over Israel: "These bones... are the people of Israel. They say, 'Our bones are dried up and our hope is gone.' Therefore prophesy and say to them: 'This is what the Sovereign Lord says: My people, I'm going to open your graves and bring you up from them.'"

As war escalates and fear spreads, Birnbaum's message remained anchored in eternal hope. "There's real people who are affected by it," he said. "And those real people need hope... and I believe and I'm confident that that only hope is found in the Messiah Yeshua."

Jews for Jesus has mobilized teams to help first responders while also bringing the Gospel to those suffering in this moment of darkness. "We're trying to bring some light, some hope in that practically," Birnbaum said. "But also sharing the deeper hope that we have as we do it."

He closed with a plea to fellow believers: "Please pray. Keep praying for us as we do our uttermost best to be the hands and feet of Yeshua on the ground here in Israel as we await for His return.”

To pray along with them, believers are invited to pray for the peace of Jerusalem, for the innocent victims in Gaza and Iran and for a great spiritual awakening across the Middle East, that the name of Jesus would be declared far and wide.

Raised from the Dead: Real-Life Resurrection Testimony Goes Viral

Kap Chatfield is urging believers to stop guessing and start reading when it comes to the Mark of the Beast. In a recent video, he pointed directly to Scripture to help clear up the confusion that surrounds one of the most talked-about, and misunderstood, topics in Bible prophecy.

“You’ve probably heard about this,” Chatfield said. “Even people who’ve never read the Bible know this phrase. Typically it’s been the subject of movies, conspiracies and late-night YouTube theories.”

Chatfield opened the Bible to Revelation 13:16-17 to read what it actually says: “He causes all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and slave... to receive a mark on their right hand or on their foreheads.”

He made it clear that this isn’t just about money or commerce. “This is not just an economic play. This is actually an allegiance play. This is a play about worship.”

According to Revelation 14:9-11, those who take the mark face eternal judgment. “He shall be tormented with fire and brimstone... and the smoke of their torment ascends forever and ever,” Chatfield read. “I don’t know how much Scripture you got to black out with a Sharpie... The Bible is clear. God has a place called hell.”

He also addressed the debate over what the mark might physically be. “Is the mark a tattoo? Is it a microchip? Is it a barcode? Here’s the truth: the Bible doesn’t actually say exactly what that technology is. But it does in fact describe the function.”

The purpose of the mark, he explained, is to show loyalty to the beast. It will be required for people to buy and sell. “It’s going to be placed on the body... the only way that people are going to be able to participate in the economy.”

Chatfield emphasized the importance of learning to trust God now. “If you don’t get comfortable trusting God with your finances now and you miss the rapture, you’re going to be in a world of trouble when the great tribulation happens.”

His message was crystal clear: don't rely on speculation. Go to the Word of God. "He doesn't want you to fall into this trap. He doesn't want you to be eternally separated from God."

For those trying to make sense of the times, the answer is not in theories, it's in Scripture.

Amid War, Are Israelis Turning to Jesus?

In a powerful address following Israel's airstrikes on Iran's nuclear and military facilities, Pastor John Hagee offered unwavering support for the Jewish state's actions, calling them not only necessary but righteous.

"In the late night hours on Thursday," Hagee said, "the skies over Iran and other Iranian nuclear and military sites were ablaze with the sound and fury of the Israeli Air Force." As of his address, he stated that "Israel has eliminated a substantial portion of Iran's military and nuclear leadership and has dealt extensive blows to the regime's nuclear and missile programs."

Hagee drew historic parallels, reminding viewers of Israel's previous preemptive strikes. "What Israel is doing, just as when Israel destroyed the Iraqi and Syrian nuclear reactors, was to protect not just the Jewish state but the entire free world."

According to Hagee, the Jewish nation was forced into this decision due to Iran's accelerated nuclear ambitions. "Israel took this step because they had no other choice. Iran had acquired enough uranium to make multiple nuclear weapons and was in the process of trying to do so."

He issued a bold charge to the United States and its citizens: "We must honor our faith principles and the legacy of standing up to evil and in support of freedom. We must not be influenced by the cowards, the isolationist or the bigots in our midst. We must stand with Israel today and every day."

Turning his attention to Iran's suffering population, Hagee offered a glimmer of hope. "Iran's future as an evil force in the Middle East is now in question. Only the people of Iran can take the country back, but Israel has opened the door for them and has given the world room to breathe."

He concluded his message with strong praise for President Donald Trump. "Please join me in thanking President Trump for standing with the Jewish state and urging him to continue his steadfast support for Jerusalem during this pivotal moment in history."

As tensions escalate and prophetic warnings seem ever closer to fulfillment, believers everywhere are urged to lift their voices in intercession. Pray for the safety and strength of the nation of Israel, and for the people of Iran, that they may find freedom, peace and deliverance from their tyrannical regime.

Joe Rogan Confirms Attending Christian Church: 'It's a Good Vibe'

Podcast titan Joe Rogan appears to be taking steps toward faith, sharing in a recent episode of The Joe Rogan Experience that he has been attending a Christian church and finds the atmosphere encouraging.

"It's actually very nice," Rogan said when asked about his experience. "They're all just trying to be better people. It's a good vibe."

This comes after several months of Rogan exploring Christianity more openly on his podcast. In January, he interviewed Christian apologist Wes Huff about miracles, the resurrection and the deity of Jesus. Huff later revealed that Rogan has continued the conversation off-air and has now become a regular churchgoer.

In the June 5, episode, Rogan confirmed his church attendance and elaborated briefly when asked what kind of church he was going to: "It's just a Christian church," he said, later clarified as a “non-denominational Christian” church.

Rogan, who also shared that he has abstained from alcohol for three months, linked the lifestyle change to improved well-being. “It’s a lot better,” he said. “You feel a lot better... You stop doing it and you’re like, ‘Oh, I feel so much better. Why was I doing that?’”

As one of the most influential voices in media today, Rogan’s growing openness to faith and reflection on personal change is being closely watched by believers and skeptics alike.
