According to Marzulli, these interdimensional entities often mistaken as extraterrestrials are actually part of a larger satanic deception, saying, "When we go up, they come down."

Marzulli dove deep into biblical prophecy, the UFO phenomenon and DNA evidence linked to Nephilim hybrids—sharing his groundbreaking findings from Peru that may point to a "different species." He also unpacked how demonic entities may already be laying the groundwork to explain away the rapture. "Channeled information says people will leave the planet in an afternoon because they don't belong here anymore," he noted, calling it a demonic counterfeit of what Scripture foretells.

He urged pastors and believers alike to wake up to the spiritual realities manifesting across the globe: "The church needs to understand that this is manifesting. This will change everything."

Spiritual Warfare Is Real: Here's How to Fight Back with Power

During Media Day 2025 presented by Charisma Media, Pastor Chris Garcia delivered a passionate reminder that spiritual warfare is real—but so is the believer's victory in Christ.

“Christ died for our sins... he translates us from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of light,” Garcia said.

In a recent prophetic message, Alwyn Uys shared a powerful and timely word for the month of June 2025, encouraging believers to step boldly into their God-given callings.

“This is a word that is for a time like this,” Uys said. “So many people have been prepared by the Lord for a time such as this.”

Uys described a vision he received during a community prayer session: a large eagle hovering over a nest filled with baby eagles. “They were feeding from this bigger eagle,” he recalled. “And I got these words that... the Holy Spirit was saying, 'I have fed you for a long time. I have taught you everything and you know how to fly. Now is the time to fly.'"

The message struck a deeply prophetic chord: the season of preparation is over, and the time to take action has arrived. "You already know how to fly. Even though it doesn't feel that way, even though you're still sitting in the nest and you're asking the Lord, 'When is it time to take the leap?'... now is the time to step out in faith and take flight."

Uys continued with a personal reflection, recalling a word given to him years ago during a prophetic meeting. "He made it so simple. He said, 'Stop asking permission to take flight. You already have everything.'"

To reinforce the calling, Uys pointed to 1 Kings 19:19 and the moment Elijah called Elisha by placing his cloak over him. "That was a huge turning point in his life, in his ministry, in his calling," Uys said. "It was the calling of God being affirmed—that now is the time to leave everything behind... and follow the calling of God."

He reminded his audience that this kind of faith can be daunting, but God is not sending anyone alone. "As you take the leap of faith... His presence will be with you," he said. "And I just get this strong sense that so many people around you will be able to see that God is with that one. God is with her. God is with him."

For anyone feeling unsure, Uys offered one final affirmation from the heart of the Father: "He is so proud of you for how far you've come, for how you've trusted Him, how you've so obediently listened to His voice... All in the name of obedience unto the Holy Spirit.”

As June unfolds, the time to rise is now.

“Take flight,” he said. “You already have everything.”

Prophetic Voices Warn of Global Spiritual Decline

John Bevere believes that every follower of Christ is born with a divine calling—and with it, a gift from God.

“Every single child of God has a calling on their life,” Bevere said in a recent episode of his podcast “The John Bevere Podcast” alongside his son Ardan. “Now with these callings, OK, so let’s say I’m called to the marketplace or let’s say I’m called to education. God gives supernatural gifts to accomplish them.”

But for many, those gifts may feel buried or even non-existent. Bevere is quick to remind people that God’s assignments don’t always align with human strengths. “Our calling is beyond our natural ability,” he said. “Because if God made our calling so that we could accomplish it in our own ability, we’d have to share the glory with Him. And God says, ‘I’m not sharing my glory with anybody.’”

In fact, Bevere shared that writing was once his weakest subject. "It used to take me four hours to write a one-page paper," he said. "English, creative writing, foreign language was my absolute worst subject in high school." But God had other plans. "Two women came to me from two different states in the United States within two weeks of each other... They both said the exact same thing. They said, 'John, if you don't write what God's given you to write, He'll give the message to somebody else and one day you'll stand in judgment for it.'"

That moment marked a turning point in his life—and a lesson he now shares with others seeking their spiritual purpose. "We have access to the grace of God through faith," Bevere said, quoting Romans 5:2. "It's God's free unearned empowerment that gives us the ability to go beyond our natural ability."

For those unsure of where to begin, Bevere encourages seeking God diligently. "The thing we've got to do is seek Him," he said. "God gives supernatural gifts to accomplish what we've been created to do."

And if you haven't discovered yours yet, don't be discouraged. "Sometimes our giftings, we're born with them. Sometimes they come on us when God speaks to us."

The key, Bevere stressed, is simply being willing. "Are you going to self-promote with your gift? Or are you going to walk the path that God puts before you?"

Why Are Christians Turning Against Israel?

Hollywood actor Neal McDonough is known for his villains, but his latest project rides in with something very different: purpose.

Sitting down with Billy Hallowell of CBN News, McDonough opened up about his new film, The Last Rodeo, his faith and the battles he's fought to stay true to his convictions.

"This was... a gift from above," McDonough said of the film, which he not only stars in, but also helped write. "Write a film, Rocky on a bull, that you have to go back and save your grandson. You have to go back and ride again to save your grandson because he's dying of the same brain tumor that your wife died of." He added, "Within 24 hours, I came up with a kind of an outline... within a week, we had the first draft done. And a week later, we had it sold."

For McDonough, the rapid timeline wasn't just luck. "This is divine intervention... that doesn't happen. That never happens. You know that's a miracle."

Standing Firm in Hollywood

McDonough has long made headlines for his refusal to do sex scenes or on-screen kisses, a stance that cost him dearly. "Because I wouldn't kiss a woman in that show years ago... I got blackballed and then they took—you know, I lost my house and I lost everything." He continued, "That kind of crucifixion was maybe the greatest gift that I've ever gotten in my life as a man."

Following that season of brokenness, McDonough said he spiraled into alcoholism. "I had a massive drinking problem. I just drank myself silly for two years because I couldn't get a job. I was bankrupt. I lost everything."

But faith brought him back. "It all started to come back. And it has come back tenfold."

A Message Bigger Than the Movie

The Last Rodeo is more than a cowboy movie. It's a family story at heart, crafted with a message of redemption, love and perseverance. "There aren't a lot of films out there anymore where you can bring the whole family to it, not have to cover eyes or ears... The whole family gets to go see a film, be entertained, and at the end of [it] make you realize, okay, what am I prepared to do to help my family?"

Asked what he hopes viewers walk away with, McDonough said, "Life can be amazing if we have a little faith... Anyone can get through any problem if they have faith."

And for McDonough, that's not just faith in God, but in the small, everyday decisions to do good. "If I'm living by examples, if I'm doing the right thing, people notice."

Now producing his eleventh project in four years with his wife and partner Ruve, McDonough has found success not by compromising, but by standing strong. "I love telling great stories and now I get to tell great stories that entertain people that give glory to God. Wow. Wow. I mean, what more could you ask for?"
