

John Piper Posts Surprise Update On the Future of His Ministry

In a recent YouTube exclusive, Joel Rosenberg shared how Palestinians in Gaza are beginning to openly turn against Hamas, even risking their lives to speak out.

“Israel is pressing the offensive, fighting Hamas deeper and deeper inside Gaza,” Rosenberg said. He explained that two major reasons are sparking this movement: Israel’s refusal to surrender and the hope sparked by U.S. President Donald Trump’s comments about making Gaza better.

“Israel has not surrendered. It hasn’t abandoned the field of battle,” Rosenberg said. “This type of pressure... is causing rank-and-file Palestinians in Gaza to realize their enemy ultimately isn’t Israel.”

Rosenberg pointed to the words of two Palestinians now living in the United States, Ahmed Fouad Al-Khatib and Khalil Sayegh, who are using their freedom to amplify voices from Gaza.

“Save Gaza from Hamas!” Rosenberg quoted from Al-Khatib’s posts. He also shared Khalil Sayegh’s bold statement: “Hamas must be dismantled. Hamas is a disease.” Rosenberg stressed the bravery of those speaking out, saying, “There’s a growing movement of tens of thousands of Palestinians who are cursing Hamas and calling for an end to Hamas to get to a better future.”

“This is a very important development,” Rosenberg said, urging viewers to pray for those leading the movement. He encouraged support for Ahmed, Khalil, and others risking everything to oppose Hamas. Gordon Robertson and Sid Roth Talk the Coming Greater Glory of God

Alberino, who has spent years researching paranormal phenomena and lived for a decade in Peru studying ancient mysteries firsthand, warns that traditional Christian explanations are about to fall short. With high-ranking whistleblowers confirming the reality of recovered non-human craft and even biological bodies, Christians must be ready to expand their understanding of spiritual warfare.

“You’re dealing with hardware and bodies,” Alberino says, emphasizing that these events aren’t just mythological or spiritual—they’re physical, tangible and very real.

This is not about abandoning a biblical worldview. In fact, Alberino anchors everything in Scripture, explaining how ancient Hebrew cosmology gives critical insight into today’s mysteries—especially when it comes to the Nephilim and the origin of demons.

But he stresses that slapping easy labels on complex phenomena will leave many believers unprepared for what’s coming next. It’s time to dig deeper, think bigger, and stay grounded in Christ while facing a future that’s getting stranger by the day.

If you want to be ready—and not caught reeling—check out the full conversation with Timothy Alberino. It’s a must-watch for every believer who wants to understand how supernatural warfare is stepping into the natural world like never before.

He Cried Out to Allah, But

Jesus Answered

Perhaps no religious artifact stirs as much fascination—or controversy—as the Shroud of Turin.

For years, skeptics and believers have debated whether this ancient cloth could truly be the burial shroud of Jesus Christ. But according to Dr. Jeremiah Johnston, the evidence is now “beyond all doubt.”

In a recent interview with Raj of CBN News, Dr. Johnston, an expert on the Shroud of Turin, shared groundbreaking details. “I believe that based on the evidence, 102 scientific disciplines have spent over 600,000 hours of scientific study on the Shroud of Turin. And the great majority of them have concluded the shroud is indeed 2,000 years old,” Johnston said.

He emphasized that this conclusion isn’t based on feeling or speculation but on verifiable science. “Based on my biblical scholarship, I can assure you that no one was crucified the way Jesus of Nazareth was crucified on Apr. 3, A.D. 33. We know the exact date,” he added.

One of the most fascinating aspects of the shroud is the image itself—a front and back imprint of a 5’11” Jewish man bearing the unmistakable wounds of Roman crucifixion. “Unlike other burial shrouds, and we have many of them that we have discovered from the land of Israel...the unique thing about the Shroud of Turin, which is fascinating, is there is an image that is superficially embedded in the 14-foot-long burial cloth,” Johnston said. “There’s no pigment. There’s no dye.”

Scientists have been baffled by the nature of the image. Johnston noted, "Paul De Liso spent five years of his scientific life studying how much light energy would be required to leave a flash, if you will, a first-century selfie, if you will, of Jesus of Nazareth in the Shroud of Turin." The results? "It took 34,000 trillion watts of energy...and this 34,000 trillion watts of energy traveled in 1/4th of a billionth of a second to leave the image on the shroud."

Even with today's best technology, scientists cannot explain or replicate the phenomenon. "They have confirmed there's no pigment. There's no dye. But they have also said we have no idea how this happened," Johnston explained. "The best rocket scientists of our day...cannot explain how the image is embedded in the linen cloth."

But what if it truly is the burial cloth of Jesus?

According to Johnston, the implications are profound. "We wouldn't have a New Testament if there wasn't evidence for the resurrection of Jesus," he said. Citing the apostle Thomas' need for proof in John 20, Johnston reminded believers that even the early followers of Christ needed evidence.

"He sharpens us when we doubt," Johnston said. "Let's not be overly pious...The original authors of the New Testament did. They needed evidence."

Johnston believes the Shroud of Turin captures the very moment of resurrection and ties it to technological phenomena. "I really believe as we get closer to the Second Coming of Jesus Christ, we are seeing this phenomena of a controlled revelation of Jesus Christ tied to technology," he said.

As Johnston put it simply and powerfully, “We’re not talking about myths or fairy tales or fables. We’re talking about real people, real places, real events.”

5 Demoniac Spirits Are Targeting Christians Before Jesus Returns

Brandon Biggs, a Christian content creator known for his bold prophetic insights, recently shared a vivid dream he received in 2014 involving a future pope standing alongside the Antichrist.

In his latest video, Biggs said, “I saw a pope standing next to the Antichrist. The Pope that I saw was a white man. He was not heavy set.” Biggs made it clear the man he saw in the dream was not Pope Francis, noting, “His face was very skinnier. He did not look heavy set like the pope that was always in the wheelchair.”

In the dream, Biggs saw three distinct figures: the Antichrist, a man in black who he believes could be Yuval Noah Harari, and a pope in white garments. “The Antichrist was dressed in white. The Pope was dressed in white. And the other man on this side was dressed in black and had a black hat on with black things going down his sides.” Biggs reiterated his conviction that “I still believe that MBS (Mohammed bin Salman) is the man that is the Antichrist,” adding, “If he winds up not being here, then you can say, Brandon, you totally missed it.”

Biggs also voiced concerns about recent technological developments that he believes align with the biblical mark of the beast.

“I told you all that the mark of the beast would be a Neuralink type of technology,” he said. “Three companies—Neuralink, Precision Neuroscience and Synchron—all are doing a Neuralink-type technology.” He warned that “this will be the beginning of the beast, mark of the beast system with the brain alterization,” pointing out Bill Gates and Jeff Bezos’ reported connections to these projects.

As with any prophetic message, Scripture commands believers to “test the spirits, whether they are of God” (1 John 4:1). Christians are called to weigh every word carefully against God’s Word—not accepting or rejecting spiritual claims without discernment.

Easter Weekend Shifts Reveal Prophetic Positioning for End Times

This past Easter weekend wasn't just marked by religious celebration—it was defined by a series of global power shifts that may signal prophetic movement straight out of the book of Revelation.

On Resurrection Sunday, President Donald Trump boldly acknowledged Jesus Christ as the risen Lord, declaring Him the Son of God who conquered death. That moment wasn't merely political—it carried deep spiritual weight.

Philippians 2:10–11 declares, “At the name of Jesus every knee should bow...and every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord.” The president did exactly that, sending a powerful signal that reverberated beyond the political realm.

In a recent episode of The John Bevere Podcast, author and teacher John Bevere shared how understanding the ancient Jewish wedding reveals powerful insights into the return of Jesus Christ.

“A wedding imagery is often used to describe the relationship of Jesus and the church,” Bevere said. He explained that many phrases spoken by Jesus and the apostles—like “no one knows the day or the hour”—come directly from ancient wedding customs that are largely lost on modern Western culture.

Bevere walked through how the bride and groom in ancient Israel would be separated after the engagement, with the groom preparing a place at his father's house. "Once they finished [the wine], they would not drink a glass together again, nor would they see each other again," Bevere said. "Only the father of the groom knows" when the groom would return, a direct parallel to Jesus' own words about His return.

This moment would come with loud shouts and trumpet blasts, echoing the rapture described in 1 Thessalonians: "The Lord Himself will descend from heaven with a shout."

The imagery doesn't just teach us about timing, it also calls the church to action.

"Our works don't save us, but our works do prepare us," Bevere said. He reminded listeners that Jesus is returning for a pure, prepared bride.
