

Teachers in Oklahoma Reject Teaching of Bible in Classrooms

When Oklahoma Superintendent Ryan Walters issued guidelines for the Bible to be integrated into classroom instruction, he knew he would have an uphill fight on his hands, and he does.

It is being reported that certain educators in the state are refusing the new implementation as the new school year is set to begin.

In an interview with The Hill, Bixby Public Schools superintendent Rob Miller shows no sign of obeying this new curriculum.

“I suspect that the first thing that will happen is he will target a specific school district or multiple school districts who he believes are not complying with his directive, those school districts will then have to make a choice as to whether to bend [to] his whim or to sue,” Miller says.

“And I can tell you that if Bixby was one of those schools that he selected to come after, we would file a lawsuit.”

Walters has said from the beginning that these are not specific lessons on or about the Bible, but presenting the historical significance of the Bible in U.S. history, since the nation was founded on the values taught within it.

A statement to this effect was released by Walters' office reading:

Oklahoma school districts are required by state law to teach the historical significance of the Bible. Superintendent Walters will hold teachers and administrators accountable. Rogue, left-wing activists who refuse can leave Oklahoma and go to California.

School districts across the country have become battlegrounds recently as more states are pushing to have the Bible re-implemented into the education system. Unsurprisingly, teachers unions are staunchly against this move.

Parents and Kids Misled by Deceptive Storybook Bible

The U.S. stock markets are experiencing significant declines, causing concern among investors nationwide. For some, this downturn appears sudden and unpredictable, but others believe it was foretold years ago. The late Christian prophet Kim Clement spoke of such an event as far back as 2005. As the nation grapples with the current financial crisis, Clement's words are gaining renewed attention, prompting many to consider the possible spiritual dimensions of these economic challenges.

Here are the words Clement spoke specifically about banking and the stock exchange during the months of August, September and October:

A miracle shall happen in the banking and the stock exchange. Look to the months of August, September and October. Watch the oil, for God says it's gone hi hi hi, lower lower lower, but God says He's playing a yo-yo game with you.

...God said it's gonna change. It'll change because Greenspan shall go, for God says there is something different that shall come in its place, and there will be an economic revival for this nation and you will not need the Middle East. You will not need the oil, you will not need them, for God says it shall be in the soil of this nation.

This nearly 20-year-old prophecy is grabbing eyes, ears and hearts again as the U.S. stock market cratered Monday morning as well as the turmoil engulfing the Middle East. The words Clement speaks out also sound strikingly similar to the energy policies that Republican presidential candidate and former President Donald Trump is campaigning on, and that is one of American energy independence.

In addition to this prophecy, Clement released another word on July 18, 2015, regarding a "financial break in the system":

Something has opened up, and please hear me when I say this. Many people don't see it or even receive it because they say, "Oh, I've heard that before." You'd better listen very carefully because when God declares because of the youth and the prophetic sound in the youth, and there is, believe it or not. The heavens are opening up – not the old system of Eli the high priest, but a new system that will be set up as the result of God releasing a Samuel to the earth. Your children are important to God. You are important to Him. He's looking to your future.

As with all prophetic words, and in obedience to the Word of God (1 John 4:1), test the words given, discern properly that which is from the Spirit of the Lord and that which is not, while continuing to live a life of victory empowered by the Holy Spirit.

Discovering Angelic Assistance with Sergio Nazir Chavez

The evangelist expressed his belief that the American public, particularly Christians, must recognize this incident as a call to action. He warned that the forces opposing Trump are not just political but deeply rooted in a broader spiritual struggle.

“He’s not running against Kamala Harris,” Murillo stated. “He’s running against a machine, a mechanism... into the media, into business, into billionaires, into education.” He described the opposition as a “consummate blank canvas” for the left’s agenda, which he believes threatens the country’s moral and spiritual foundation.

Murillo’s comments reflect his concern about the spiritual war being waged in the United States, with Trump playing a central role in this conflict. He drew parallels between the current political situation and historical instances of tyranny, explaining that the attempt on Trump’s life is indicative of a larger, more sinister agenda. “The most dangerous thing... is the apathetic way in which the American public is reacting,” Murillo cautioned, urging Christians to wake up and take a stand.

Calling for a unified response from the Christian community, Murillo urges believers to pray and support what he sees as God’s plan for America. He stressed the need for spiritual vigilance, warning, “Woe unto those who are silent in the process of God’s redemptive work for American freedom.”
