

Transforming Evangelism: The Role of Social Media

The incident is seen as a reflection of the intense political and cultural climate in the United States. Snyder attributed this to years of demonizing Trump. "If you call someone Hitler enough times, people are going to believe that. Some people will internalize that and act on it," he said. Snyder emphasized the need for unity and lowering political tensions, noting, "Both sides realize that things have gone too far, that we need to take the temperature down."

Identifying a solution to the chaos the nation currently faces, Snyder highlighted the importance of prayer and engagement in societal issues, particularly for Christians. "We need to be praying for the safety of all of our national leaders," he said. "The political chaos is just one element of the perfect storm we have now entered." He urged people to recognize the stakes, saying, "We are literally going to have no future if we stay on the path that we're on."

Trump's upcoming speeches are expected to stress unity over partisan attacks. Snyder remarked, "His speech at the convention is supposedly going to be a lot about unity, bringing the country together."

Snyder was proven correct when Trump took the stage for the final night of the 2024 Republican National Convention, as he spoke in a much more subdued tone. After discussing the assassination attempt that nearly took his life, he gave a message of unity and the strength of an America that came together to realize the amazing blessings that God had bestowed on the country in the past.

Pastor Billy Crone Reveals Secret Agendas of Freemasonry

In a revealing interview, Pastor Billy Crone shed light on the secretive world the Freemasons, highlighting its pervasive influence and hidden agendas. Crone's extensive research and firsthand accounts aim to expose the organization's practices and their implications for society and the church.

Crone discussed the significance of the footage obtained from a Masonic ritual, emphasizing the authenticity of the practices. "We were able to get actual footage with a guy who snuck in there with his phone and recorded the rituals," Crone says. "This is not a joke, it's not a game. This is really what's going on."

Throughout the interview, Crone detailed his comprehensive study on occult societies, including a 10-part series on Freemasonry. He expressed surprise at the depth of the society's influence, even among Christians. "A lot of people, even Christians, have heard of Freemasonry, but they think it's a 'good old boys' club. No, it's not. It's an occult secret society," he states.

Senator J.D. Vance, recently announced as candidate for vice president, passionately spoke about his Christian faith and its transformative power at the "God and Country" breakfast on Thursday, July 18. In a heartfelt speech, Vance detailed his spiritual journey and the significant role his faith plays in his personal and political life.

Raised by his grandmother, whom he affectionately calls "Maw-maw," Vance recounted his early exposure to Christianity. "Despite the fact that she loved the f-word, she was a woman of very deep Christian faith," Vance says, reflecting on how his grandmother's unorthodox yet devout faith laid the foundation for his beliefs.

"She was in some ways what you might call 'unchurched,'" Vance continues. "We went to church maybe once or twice a month, sometimes less, sometimes more, but she read the Bible every single day. She prayed every single day. She loved to watch Billy Graham whenever he was on the TV, and that was really my introduction to the Christian faith."

However, Vance admitted that his early faith was shallow. "By the time that I was in law school, I started to call myself an atheist," he confessed, attributing this shift to arrogance and a belief that his education made him smarter than his grandmother.

His return to faith was spurred by marriage and fatherhood. Vance shared how contemplating his responsibilities as a husband and father led him back to Christianity. "The more that I thought about those deeper questions, the more that I thought there was wisdom in the Christian faith that I had completely discarded and completely ignored,” he explains.

Vance also highlighted the impact of faith on his family dynamics, particularly noting his wife’s observations. “There’s something about becoming Christian that is really good for you,” his wife remarked, pointing out that his faith made him more patient with their son and more forgiving.

In his speech, Vance addressed social conservatives’ concerns about their place in the Republican Party. “Social conservatives have a seat at this table, and they always will so long as I have any influence in this party,” he asserts. Vance praised Donald Trump’s contributions to social conservative causes, urging the audience to trust and support the administration. “President Trump delivered for social conservatives more than any president in my 39 years of life. He deserves a little bit of grace and a little bit of trust,” Vance emphasizes.

The speech painted a picture of a man deeply committed to his faith and family. America needs leadership that places a high level of importance on Christian’s values in both their personal life and political career. If Vance truly believes the words he shared at the “God and Country” breakfast, he may just be the right man for the job of vice president.

Crisis Looms Over America's 911 Emergency System

State after state is having outages and operations issues with the 911 emergency line. The most recent was Massachusetts on July 18.

State leaders had a fire lit beneath them when they realized there was a statewide outage of the entire system, while they and emergency services tried to figure out ways to get the message to the public as well as what to do in the meantime.

As reported by USA Today, "Police texted out administrative numbers that callers could use, Boston Mayor Michelle Wu gave outage updates at a press conference outlining plans for the Celtics' championship parade, and local officials urged people to summon help by pulling red fire alarm boxes."

It is estimated that over 7 million people were without use of the 911 service, and thankfully it was not during a time when an emergency on a massive scale was taking place.

In 2024 alone, no less than eight states, including Massachusetts, have experienced emergency system disruptions to include: Nebraska, Nevada, South Dakota, Texas, California, Georgia and Illinois.

Many experts are pointing to the aging grid supporting these systems and the lack of upgrades and modernization in these particular areas.

"Now there are haves and have-nots," said Jonathan Gilad, vice president of government affairs at the National Emergency Number Association. "Next-generation 911 shouldn't be for people who happen to have an emergency in a good location."

But states are not alone in this pressing issue of the failing 911 service, as Verizon was slapped with a $ million fine by the Federal Communications Commission. An outage affected six states all in the southern portion of the United States, showing that this issue is not specific to a set region, but affecting the whole country.

While politicians and bureaucrats debate the authority range of the FCC, the citizenry are the ones at risk.

There is plenty in this world to cause worry, fear and anxiety, but in all things we must remember that God is in control.

Peter tells us in 1 Peter 5:7: "Cast all your care upon Him, because He cares for you." So while we may be experiencing an emergency in real time, we can find peace knowing that God is with us in every scenario we may face.

Marvel Faces Backlash for Altering Jewish Superhero's Origin Story

Another day, another example of how Disney/Marvel caves to the insanity of the far-Left.

When the news broke that the character Ruth Bat-Seraph, aka Sebra, a Mossad agent, would make her Marvel debut in the upcoming Captain America: Brave New World movie, the anti-Israel crowd was not having it.

As reported by the Times of Israel, "Throughout her appearances in various comics, Sabra is seen to hold negative views toward Arabic characters, both terrorists and civilians. While various aspects of her characterization change throughout her appearances, her loyalty to the Israeli government and Mossad remains strong."

This of course irked the rabidly anti-Israel Left who issued calls for boycotts of Marvel unless they rid the film of the Israeli intelligence agent.

So Marvel caved to the relatively low-pressure and altered the character's past so that there is no mention of Israel and is instead a Black Widow agent like Scarlett Johansson's character.

It doesn't get much more ironic than erasing a Jewish character's Jewishness after Marvel was founded by two Jewish men, Martin Goodman and Stan Lee.

In the wake of this cultural slap in the face, pro-Israel activists have taken up metaphorical arms against Marvel, who have put themselves in an unwinnable position.

As reported by Fox News, “Pro-Israel activist Hen Mazzig blasted the changes on X, accusing Marvel of erasing ‘the only Israeli superhero.’ In an op-ed for The Jerusalem Post, he wrote, ‘The erasure of Sabra’s Jewish identity is also a slap in the face to the American Jews who literally invented the comic book superhero genre.’”

The world has seen a sharp rise in violent anti-Semitism in the wake of the horrific terrorist attacks on Israel on October 7, 2023. Now, Israelis are embattled in a two-front war which they never wanted but must win for the safety of their civilians, Jewish and Arab alike.

As this hateful rhetoric continues to spread, heed the words of God and pray for the peace of Jerusalem and His people. While some are deceived into believing the Abrahamic Covenant is no longer in effect, the Bible clearly says differently. Worldly events couldn’t be anymore clear regarding the targeting of the Jewish people, and the eventual Aaliyah of Jews back to Israel during the end times.

A Defining Event for Our Times: What Happens Now?

The United States is still reeling from the near assassination of Republican presidential candidate and former President Donald Trump.

Prophetic voices have been warning of such an event for years now, and when it finally came to pass, the question on many peoples minds was: what do we do now?

Joseph Z sat down with Charisma Media to discuss the options Christians have moving forward and what we must do to see a brighter future for our country and cast out fear from our midst.

Z emphasizes the need for “good” Christians who understand their role in the nation. He quotes Romans 13, which talks about obeying the governing authorities, and sees it as a call to enforce the laws and the Constitution of the United States.
