

Warning: The Rise of Cyber Attacks, AI, and the Antichrist System

In a recent interview with Charisma Media, evangelist Brian Barcelona highlighted the transformative impact of social media platforms like TikTok and YouTube on modern evangelism. Barcelona emphasized the need to capture attention with bold messages to effectively convey the gospel in a digital age.

“It was a way that we got the attention of people just sitting there video after video,” Barcelona said. “All of a sudden, you come across a video that just says, ‘Hey, we said stop scrolling.’ Why? Because we wanted the attention and that individual to hear the message that we were going to convey and communicate.”

Barcelona addressed the divided opinions within Christianity regarding digital media. Some view it as harmful, while others see its potential for good. “You have people that say it’s demonic and stay off of it, and then you have people that say God uses it,” he said. “If the devil could bring an addiction through a phone, why couldn’t God bring freedom through a video?”

Innovative evangelistic strategies have emerged, including Zoom baptisms and extensive video content production. Barcelona’s team, for example, produced nearly 4,500 videos a month and saw significant engagement. “We were seeing kids get baptized over Zoom,” he said. “I remember this one kid didn’t have a bathtub to baptize, he grabbed a bucket of water and dumped it on himself.”

Barcelona also emphasized the power of praise, introducing various Hebrew words for different types of praise. He highlighted “tahila,” which means spontaneous worship, and “todah,” which refers to praising God for anticipated blessings. “Todah gives you the ability to praise God even though you have not seen it yet,” he explained.

Accessibility and engagement are key in Barcelona’s approach to digital evangelism. He encourages believers to share personal, relatable messages and prayer videos on social media. “You have a message if you’re a believer,” he said. “Share these short messages on your heart. They don’t have to be these elaborate things.”

Barcelona believes that social media is the modern marketplace where believers can preach the gospel. “The phone has become a pulpit,” he stated. “This is a way that kids were connecting with God, and I don’t think it’s going to go away.”

Barcelona’s strategies highlight the evolving landscape of evangelism, leveraging digital platforms to reach millions and foster spiritual growth among younger generations.

Inside the Secret Service Failures and Trump's Miraculous Survival

The recent assassination attempt on former President Donald Trump during a campaign stop in Butler, Pennsylvania, has sparked intense criticism over Secret Service failures and highlighted the deep political and cultural divides in the country. The shooter, identified as 20-year-old Thomas Matthew Crooks, managed to fire at Trump from an unguarded rooftop, revealing critical lapses in security protocols.

Michael Snyder, an end times expert and political analyst, described the incident as a "catastrophic security failure." Snyder noted, "The roof with a direct line of sight to the platform where Trump was speaking was left unguarded." He also criticized the Secret Service's response time, comparing it unfavorably to their reaction during the 1981 assassination attempt on President Ronald Reagan. "When Reagan was shot, within less than a second, one of the agents had pushed him into the vehicle," Snyder said. "In this case, there seemed to be an eternity in the amount of time it took for them to get there."

Crooks, who had recently graduated from high school and worked in a nursing home, was described as a depressed, isolated individual with little social media presence. Snyder speculated about Crooks' motives, saying, "He may have been depressed, desperate, angry at the world. We don't know what he was thinking internally."

Crone outlined the problematic aspects of Freemasonry's beliefs, which he believes are fundamentally opposed to Christian doctrine. "They believe in a pluralistic deity and universalism, that all paths will eventually get you to what they call the Grand Lodge in the sky. It's a works-based false gospel," he explains. He also highlighted the severe oaths taken by Freemasons, questioning how Christians could reconcile these with their faith. "In the first three degrees, you have to take bloody oaths. How can I profess that as a Christian? I've got the light of Jesus Christ," Crone argues.

The pastor went on to describe the widespread influence of Freemasonry, claiming its presence in various sectors, including politics and the entertainment industry. "Hollywood's in it, the music industry is in it. We expose that, especially because we had two studies just on the symbolism in Freemasonry," Crone says. He points to the symbology of Washington, D.C. and other areas as evidence of the society's reach in American culture.

Crone's call to action for Christians is clear: expose the truth to dispel the darkness. "You want to get rid of the darkness, you bring on the light. You teach the truth, which is the light of Christ, and instantly the darkness flees," he urges. He emphasizes the need for vigilance and faithfulness, urging believers to finish strong and remain obedient.

JD Vance Discusses His Journey of Christian Faith

“We need to really follow the Constitution, we need to double down on the Constitution, we need to go forward with the Bill of Rights, we need to press into these areas and really enforce what’s on the books and see that happen,” Z shares.

With a united church acting like the light of Jesus to the world, as we are commanded to do, the country holds a bright future. But Z reminds us of the Great Commission and the need for the body of Christ to work together. He sees this as a time for Christians to unite and make a difference in the world.

“God needs His body. First John 4:17, ‘as He is, so are we in this world,’” Z says. “He needs the Great Commission. He needs His body to cooperate with what His will is on earth, or it’s going to speed up the time of judgment. It’s going to speed up the time of difficulty.”

In short, what Christians need to do is act. To put their faith into action and not sit idly by while the world is under the onslaught of the devil. We need to pray, we need to fast, we need to intercede, we need to answer the call of the Great Commission.

“If we stand now and don’t react as the world would react, but we stand in righteousness, we intercede. We show up where we need to show up for the polls, all of it. I’m telling you, I believe that we’re going to begin to see a victory here. I really do,” Z says.

Hurricane Beryl Destroys Demonic Abortion Statue

As Beryl stormed across Texas leaving millions without power, one particular point of destruction has some saying it was an act of God.

Taking up residence at the University of Houston following its reveal in New York City, the satanic, pro-abortion statue “Witness” was found beheaded in the aftermath of Beryl.

Peaceful protests by pro-life groups as well as prayer walks have targeted the statue and its tentacle-like visage, but never with any manner of violence or damage, a stark difference to the pro-Hamas riots disrupting American university campuses over the past several months.

The creator of this statue, Pakistani-American Shahzia Sikander, has made the claim that it wasn’t the storm which beheaded “Witness,” but an act of vandalism by those pesky pro-life protesters.

“This was a violent, hateful act,” Sikander said in a statement to CNN. “And I hold the University of Houston accountable for their inadequate response and failure to protect the art. I urge them to release the footage of the perpetrator. The despicable narrative should not be cloaked by the hurricane. The act of violence is part of the history of the work and a testament to its power. I have asked the university to remove the tarp and show the violated work. They need to respect the wishes of the artist.”

The University of Houston has yet to release any video that would support Sikander’s unfounded claims of vandalism.

And it remains absurd for anyone to assume a person or group went out into a dangerous storm instead of seeking shelter for the sole reason of vandalizing a statue.

Sikander’s theory doesn’t quite add up, and it is reasonable to assume if this was an act of vandalism which the UH had footage of, it would have been released by now. The university has said that “the damage is believed to be intentional,” and “the University of Houston Police Department is currently investigating the matter.”

But God certainly works in mysterious ways, as this is not the first time that a statue has met a grim fate at the hands of the Lord Almighty or even been beheaded.

In the book of 1 Samuel chapter five, the pagan god Dagon of the Philistines fell before the Ark of the Covenant.

“When they arose early on the next morning, again Dagon was fallen upon his face to the ground before the ark of the Lord, and the head of Dagon and both the palms of his hands were cut off upon the threshold. Only the torso of Dagon was left to him,” (1 Sam. 5:4).

Our God is a jealous God (Exod. 34:14) and He will tear down that which He so chooses.

Left-Wing Politicians Set Sights on Family Research Council

The sure sign of a Christian organization that is making progress and succeeding in fighting the evil that has permeated American society is that it will be targeted for its work.

Such is the case for the Family Research Council, which according to the FRC website, “is a nonprofit research and educational organization dedicated to articulating and advancing a family-centered philosophy of public life. In addition to providing policy research and analysis for the legislative, executive and judicial branches of the federal government, FRC seeks to inform the news media, the academic community, business leaders and the general public about family issues that affect the nation from a biblical worldview.”

Well, the Left certainly can't have powerful organizations stand up to their agenda of fundamentally altering the United States now, can they?

So, 11 Democratic members of Congress signed a letter to U.S.

Treasury Department Secretary Janet Yellen and IRS Commissioner Danny Werfel to challenge the FRC, and organizations like the FRC, and their tax-exempt status:

“We write to express our continued concerns about the tax-exempt status of certain organizations, including the Family Research Council, which are self-identifying as ‘churches’ or ‘associations of churches’ to receive more favorable tax treatment than other tax-exempt organizations.”

Weaponizing the IRS to target Christian or conservative groups is not a new trick for the authoritarian Left, and is not something they show any signs of ending.

Remember back in 2015 under the Obama registration, director of the IRS' Exempt Organizations Unit Lois Lerner was embroiled in controversy over the targeting of conservative groups and the clown show of deleted emails and crashed hard drives which led to evidence being destroyed.

And this is not the first time that congressional Democrats have targeted the FRC for investigation, either. In 2022, a similar letter was sent to Yellen and then-IRS Commissioner Charles P. Rettig demanding the same type of investigation.

In a statement to The Christian Post, FRC president Tony Perkins defended the organization and the ministerial work that it performs on a regular basis.

“In 2005, FRC shifted its 501(c)(3) status from an education non-profit to a religious non-profit. This change was made to reflect our mission,” Perkins stated.

“Additionally, this change was required so that we could be an organization that has a statement of faith, and has the ability to hire people and pursue our mission in accordance with our faith and not be imposed upon by regulations from the local government.

“The Democratic Party’s attempts to silence religious organizations, with whom they disagree, will not stop with FRC.”
