

Alan DiDio: 3 Errors Kim Clement Repented of Before His Death

In a recent video teaching on YouTube, Pastor Vlad Savchuk of HungryGen ministries addresses an entity that has a growing influence in American society: the spiritual entity known as Lilith.

This demon has been known to humanity for thousands of years, going as far back as ancient Mesopotamia some 5,000 years ago, but in more recent times there has been an explosion of imagery dedicated in her honor.

From Amazon's animated show Hazbin Hotel which paints Lilith as a sympathetic figure who was abused by Adam, to the video game developer Activision-Blizzard who based their game Diablo IV on the demon Lilith who was brought back into their world through blood magic, Lilith is a figure many youth are being inundated with today from multiple avenues of media.

Savchuk gives a deep-dive history of how various civilizations have encountered this night creature throughout the millennia. She is often associated with the night, and targets women, often in their sleep.

Going back through history, Savchuk shows that Lilith has been worshipped or feared in Mesopotamian mythology, the Babylonian Talmud, German and English literature, wicca and witchcraft.

But what does the Bible, the inerrant Word of God, have to say about this demonic entity?

"The biblical analysis of the Lilith story Isaiah 34:14 mentions the demon Lilith as part of the scene of judgment upon Edom," Savchuk explains.

"...the Bible is very clear Lilith is not Adam's first wife, Eve is Adam's first wife. So this fable and these myths that are circulating, even in Jewish literature, are not true. In fact, Paul instructs Titus to rebuke the Cretans regarding Jewish fables," Savchuk says.

For some, using spiritual discernment is an often overlooked command in the Bible.

Paul commands us not to conform to the world, but to use discernment about what is the will of God, and what is not (Rom. 12:2).

It is not good for people of all ages to consume media which is steeped in demonic overtones, because the devil and his minions will use this to get a foot in the door of our spiritual lives.

Lilith in particular, Savchuk says, targets women to steer them away from a godly lifestyle.

"I do believe that Lilith, in our culture, has become the icon of radical feminism, that tries to remove God's structure of authority in the family," Savchuk explains.

Looking at culture through a biblical lens, events such as the music festival "Lilith Fair" begin to make a lot more sense when one understands the spiritual connotations behind it.

"The Bible is clear [in] Ephesians 5:22-24 [and] 1 Timothy 3:2-16, that God establishes order in the house and in the church with men being the head in their houses, and God puts responsibility on males in the area of government in the church. Lilith being the icon on in this face of radical feminism seeks to destroy traditional gender roles today," Savchuk reveals.

There are signs, Savchuk says, that, if you experience them, you need to engage in spiritual warfare against the demon and call upon the name of Jesus.

"If you're being harassed [spiritually] at night, there is hope for you. Repent of any witchcraft, spells, love potions or sexual dreams. Devote your life to Jesus; declare your body that it belongs to Jesus; renounce any and every incubus and succubus; have somebody pray for you; pray for deliverance; and remember that God owns the night, not the devil. Freedom is yours in Jesus' name.

Perry Stone: Demonic Weather Growing More Dangerous and Frequent

In a heart-wrenching incident near Arusha, Tanzania, on Feb. 24, 11 missionaries from Youth With A Mission lost their lives in a traffic accident. The devastating multi-vehicle incident also claimed several other lives.

"It is morning time in Tanzania, and we are deeply saddened to confirm the passing of another three of our dear missionaries as a result of the tragic traffic accident. Eleven of our friends are now with Jesus. Two are still in critical condition in the hospital," YWAM said in a Sunday morning statement.

"As a movement, we gather around all those impacted by this tragedy, their families and their communities. We are working to meet all the pressing practical, financial and emotional needs that arise," the statement continues.

The organization initially confirmed the loss of eight members in a statement on its website on Saturday. "It is with great sadness that we are confirming that eight of our dearly loved friends and honored missionaries have passed away as a result of the tragic traffic accident," the ministry reported. "Additionally, several others, including the bus driver, have also passed away."

As reported by The Christian Post, "The accident, attributed to a suspected brake failure of a truck in the Ngaramtoni suburb of Arusha, involved four vehicles and resulted in at least 15 fatalities, including three foreigners, and injured 12 others. Among the vehicles involved was one carrying students and teachers from New Vision School of Arusha and a public bus."

As the YWAM community deals with this shocking loss, we find solace in the words of the Bible regarding those who serve the Lord faithfully. Second Corinthians 5:8 reminds us, "Instead, I say that we are confident and willing to be absent from the body and to be present with the Lord."

The sacrifice and service of these missionaries is not in vain, and their legacy will continue to inspire others to pursue a life dedicated to the Lord.

Is There a Plan to Shame, Silence and Demoralize Christians in America?

In a shocking turn of events, AT&T users were grappling with widespread service outages on Feb. 22, with additional disruptions reported by pharmacies across the country in the aftermath of a suspected major cyber attack.

As the technological giant works tirelessly to restore services, questions arise about the potential involvement of solar flares, drawing parallels to a historic incident in 1972.

The solar flare incident in 1972 had a profound impact on AT&T's landlines, inducing voltage fluctuations along physical lines. However, the current scenario appears to be different, with Brooks Garner's analysis on Fox News suggesting a connection to a SIM card database registry issue.

"Now, it is possible the X-class flare had impacts on the voltage on some electronics, but since this is so specific to AT&T and not other carriers, it's likely not space weather related," explained Brooks Garner, emphasizing the unique nature of the current situation.

This same solar flare that occurred yesterday also contributed to widespread radio blackouts across the West Coast as well as parts of the Pacific.

NASA defines solar flares as intense bursts of radiation resulting from the release of magnetic energy associated with sunspots. These powerful phenomena are considered the largest explosive events in our solar system, manifesting as bright areas on the sun with varying durations, from minutes to hours.

While solar flares are known for their mesmerizing displays, casting neon hues across the earth's atmosphere in the form of the northern and southern lights, the current issue seems to be centered on AT&T's network. NASA, which monitors solar flares primarily through X-rays and optical light observations, has not reported any unusual solar activity that might explain the disruptions.

AT&T, in a statement to Fox News, acknowledged the service interruptions and reassured users that they are working urgently to restore services. In the meantime, the company encourages users to utilize Wi-Fi calling as a temporary solution.

"As an explosive event, [solar flares] can cause the X-ray level at Earth to go up dramatically, factors of at least a thousand or so as in this M-class event, or even more in X class flares. This can seriously affect the normally present level of ionization (breakdown of atoms) in the ionosphere at 50 to 60 (and more) miles above us and change what we are used to in how radio waves propagate, usually for the worse," professor of space science and physics at Canada's Athabasca University Martin Connors said in a statement to Newsweek.

The impact of the outages extends beyond inconvenience, with reports of iPhone users experiencing their devices stuck in SOS mode. Furthermore, emergency services across the United States have faced challenges due to confirmed network outages, leaving mobile phone users unable to make crucial 911 calls.

As the situation unfolds, users and experts alike await further insights into the root cause of these disruptions. Whether attributed to solar flares or a sophisticated cyber attack, the incident serves as a stark reminder of the vulnerability of our interconnected digital infrastructure and the ongoing need for robust cybersecurity measures.

Red Heifer Project Sparks Hope and Spiritual Awakening

Amy Grant is on a journey seeking the positive aspects of life in the aftermath of her 2022 biking accident, which resulted in a brain injury.

In a recent interview with E! News, Grant shared the shocking surprise she woke up with once her five-hour surgery was complete.

"They asked me, 'Hey, we're going into your throat, do you want a face-lift?' And I said, 'Dear God, no, I actually have to be on stage in X number of weeks.' It was a five-hour surgery, and they took it like that. I didn't ask for it, but I came out of surgery and my neck was a little tighter," Grant explains.

The accident took a giant toll on Grant, who shared that she felt like an "old beat-up car that went in and got a paint job and had the dents knocked out. And it was just, I mean, that's a gift."

Yet even in the face of a tragic event, good can come out of it.

As the doctors were performing surgery on Grant, they made a shocking discovery: a growing cyst that had taken up residence in her throat.

"I had this bike wreck and, unbeknownst to me, I actually had a cyst growing in my throat and because of the trauma of that bike wreck it went into hypergrowth. I had this five-hour surgery, and they took it out," reveals Grant.

The road to recovery was not without speed bumps along the way however, as Grant had to deal with short-term memory loss as well as reteaching herself how to sing following the ordeal.

"I still have issues with my short-term memory. My balance is still weird. I made a joke about it last night. You know, sometimes I walk around like I'm drunk, and I just have to laugh about all of it," shares Grant.

"I can't remember what I can't remember."

While Grant is still hesitant to get back on a bike in the wake of her accident, touring is still a passion of hers that she is not planning on giving up any time soon.

“My reasons for touring are—I don’t get on stage because I need to hear applause, I have always loved creating spaces, and I do think it feels like that continues to matter,” says Grant.

In the unpredictable journey of life, God’s unwavering presence serves as a source of strength and comfort, guiding us through the unexpected twists and turns. Even as we navigate a variety of recovery cycles, His divine love and support becomes a beacon of hope, illuminating the path toward healing and restoration.

Proverbs 3:5-6 reminds us, “Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and lean not on your own understanding; in all your ways acknowledge Him, and He will direct your paths.” Embracing this profound truth offers solace and assurance that, with God’s guidance, we can overcome life’s challenges and emerge resilient in the face of adversity.

Proposed Legislation Sparks New Concerns for Christian Freedom

In a move that has left many in the state of Texas shocked, the golden abortion-goddess statue titled, "Witness," is scheduled to be on display at the University of Houston on Feb. 28 through Oct. 31, 2024.

The 18-foot-statue hails from New York City, designed by Shahzia Sikander, and now endangers Texas with the establishment of a spiritual stronghold.

Designing the pagan statue as an ode to the late-Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, Sikander wrote in her artists statement that the work was to continue the fight in ensuring abortion does not leave America.

"The luminous figure is a nod to Ruth Bader Ginsburg, as seen in the detail adorning her collar. With Ginsburg's death and the reversal of Roe, there was a setback to women's constitutional progress," Sikander's statement reads.

"The figure's hair is braided into spiraling 'horns,' which mimic the movement of the arms and express the figure's sovereignty and autonomy," she added.

As news of the statue's move to Texas began spreading, many such as the pro-life group TFP Student Action have called for a peaceful protest against it.

"Action alert: Texas values are not New York City's woke 'values.'" Tell the University of Houston NOT to Display Satanic-Looking Abortion Statue on Campus” TFP wrote in a post on X.

While the fight for the unborn continues, what many are overlooking is the establishment of spiritual strongholds that will follow in the footsteps of the golden idol in Texas.

For too long, many in America have brushed aside the dangers of the spiritual-side of life. Even though it is written clearly for people by the apostle Paul in Ephesians 6:12 which says: “For our fight is not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, and against spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly places.”

This idol gives spiritual entities, demons and principalities an open invitation to operate wherever it is set up. Because they are being invited there by humanity.

Spiritual warfare is not some hokey nonsense that is a recently made up experience, the Bible written under the guidance of the Holy Spirit warns believers about it, and extols them to take part in it!

Jesus cast out demons, the apostles teach future disciples about the importance of spiritual warfare and it is such an important topic that the Bible is full of verses about it.

Yet fewer and fewer Christians in America are engaging in it. It is being relegated to the sidelines as nonsensical practice of the deranged, meanwhile American society continues to delve deeper into satanism.

The University of Houston will soon open the spiritual doors to allow the demonic forces behind the "Witness" idol to take residence on their campus, and it will assuredly affect the area around it.

Satan would like nothing more than for Christians to keep on with what they're doing in America: bickering between denominations, accepting societies morality instead of God's righteousness and abandoning practices such as fasting and warring in the spiritual realm.

Events such as erecting false, golden idols (in the same literal manner which Aaron allowed the Israelites to do with the golden calf) are becoming common occurrences in the once-Christian nation. The Iowa Capitol building recently had a demonic altar set-up as well as another similarly demonic statue set-up in Michigan.

While both statues have been taken down since their inceptions, the devil and his minions know that if they can keep getting away with establishing these strongholds over parts of the country, they will eventually conquer the entire thing.

Again, Paul exhorts Christians in 2 Corinthians 10:4-5 to take part in this spiritual warfare: "For the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalts itself against the knowledge of God, bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ."

For Christians who do not take part in prayers against the enemy and his plans for America (and the world), this is an act of direct disobedience to what the Word of God commands Christians to do.

When we fail to engage the enemy on the spiritual battlefield, he wins without having to fire a metaphorical shot. And he would love to continue winning battles that way, because he has a lot in store for America.{eoa}
