

Unveiling Conspiracies: Prophetic Dreams Expose Corruption

In a remarkable turn of events, Pastor Hans Schmidt, the 26-year-old preacher from Victory Chapel First Phoenix Church, who was shot in the head while street preaching on Nov. 15, 2023, has defied the odds and emerged from critical condition. A former military combat medic, husband and father of two young children, Schmidt's journey to recovery captivated the nation as his church fervently sought prayers for what seemed an insurmountable challenge.

The incident occurred as Schmidt preached the Word of God on a street corner, leaving him in critical condition and in desperate need of a miracle. His wife, Zulya Schmidt, took to social media to share a recent photo of Hans awake in his hospital bed, surrounded by his family. In a heartfelt post, she expressed gratitude for the miraculous turnaround in her husband's health, emphasizing their faith in God's plan.

The days of UFOs and aliens being relegated to the confines of fringe eccentrics who claim to be abductees in rural corners of the world are long gone.

Now, there are congressional hearings, task forces and front page stories of whistleblowers who claim the U.S. government and the Vatican have evidence of these inter-dimensional beings.

It was recently leaked that in a secretive gathering hosted by Coinbase advisor John D'Agostino and prominent attorney John J. Altorelli at a Manhattan penthouse, former Air Force intelligence officer David Grusch unveiled startling details about a purported Tardis-like UFO in government possession. Those who did not believe in UFOs were astonished as the mysterious event delved into Grusch's claims regarding the size, capabilities and historical interactions with non-human intelligences (NHIs).

The closed-door meeting, attended by officials from the FBI, CIA, Department of Homeland Security, tech entrepreneurs and Wall Street figures, provided an exclusive insight into Grusch's allegations. Despite strict privacy measures—no photos were allowed, and the event was shrouded in secrecy—an anonymous attendee leaked information, revealing the extraordinary nature of the discussions.

Grusch, a decorated former Air Force intelligence officer, asserted that the UAP (Unidentified Aerial Phenomenon) in government possession was a staggering 40-foot craft whose interior is nearly the size of a football field. Attendees were told that the object could manipulate both space and time, possessing the capability to harness energy sufficient to power 70,000 homes annually.

This revelation follows Grusch's headline-making assertions since June 2023, where he disclosed the Vatican's awareness of NHIs and their alleged collaboration with the U.S. in retrieving a downed UFO from Italian dictator Benito Mussolini at the end of World War II.

In July, Grusch gave sworn testimony before Congress, sharing details about the U.S. government's possession of UFOs since the 1930s. During the recent New York meeting, Grusch reportedly claimed that the government had participated in crash retrievals before 1933.

Furthermore, attendees were informed that Grusch believes no more than 50 people possess the full scope of information regarding these phenomena. In the July congressional hearing, he suggested that the U.S. government has gone to extreme lengths, including murder, to maintain secrecy surrounding UFOs.

As the discussions on aliens are now breaking news headlines, many outlets leave out a very crucial part of the mystery: that these beings which humanity is dealing with are none other than demonic entities.

This is not a newfound revelation, as many Spirit-filled experts in the field, such as Nephilim and UFO expert L.A. Marzulli, have been warning of this for years, and that a coming "Great Deception" would deceive the masses in the end times.

"When we do go up (in the Rapture), they show up. ... We won't see the man of sin, but we might see ... let's be honest, we're living in Sodom and Gomorrah.," Marzulli says in a Charisma News interview. "There's no doubt about it. You can't fix this anymore. Now we're talking about artificial wombs and AI and the pronoun deal and all this other stuff. We are in uncharted waters. Those that are promulgating this New World Order, they are running full speed ahead."

The prophetic voice Joseph Z holds several theories on what the recent influx of alien news coverage could amount to, and they are firm in their biblical roots.

"It's the fallen angel narrative that broke out in Genesis 6, where the sons of God, these angels, these watchers, came down and cohabitated with women," says Z. "That is one of two things, either sexual relations and they created monster people like Goliath called the Nephilim, or they have altered women's DNA to create things and they mess with animals, all this stuff.

“Fallen angels want to deceive, and I believe they have the ability to understand technology and multiple dimensions. That’s why you can see these alien craft appearing and disappearing. ... You’ve got these experts that do not know God and saying it’s massless, it’s obviously from another planet or universe. Really, it just goes into this deception.”

Z believes that these sort of encounters are only going to increase as we delve deeper into the end times, and that confusion, misinformation and deception will reign over those who are not filled with the protective power of Jesus Christ.

“They will completely bring out disclosure until they finally reveal the truth,” Z says. “And the truth they will bring out is the deception that says ‘we are your creators,’ we planted you here, we did all of it. It all goes back to Genesis 6. It is a lying scenario, by fallen angels rebelling against God and they are working for Lucifer.

“They want to begin to deceive the masses to lead people away from Jesus. But the answer is the same. Jesus Christ is Lord.”

Being assaulted in every corner of society, Christians must understand the need to be empowered with the fire of the Holy Spirit. He is our weapon, our sword, to combat the principalities, powers and rulers of darkness who seek to wage war against the Lamb.

Without it, the enemy will succeed in deceiving those who are not prepared for this spiritual psy-op and will succumb to the wiles of the devil, leading them away from the saving knowledge of Jesus Christ.

Stay protected by being in the Word of God constantly, in prayer with the Lord, fasting for miracles on the spiritual battlefield and ensuring that the events going on in the world today are looked at through a biblical lens.

The Promise of Redemption: Hope for the Unequally Yoked

The gruesome discovery of Sehee Cho's 70-pound decaying corpse in the trunk of a car has sent shockwaves through the Korean community in Gwinnett County, Georgia, raising concerns about the existence of dangerous religious cults preying on vulnerable individuals. Cho, a 33-year-old South Korean national, was allegedly lured to the Atlanta area by a group known as the "Soldiers of Christ," led by Joonho Lee and his brothers.

Prosecutors claim that Cho was brutally abused, held captive in a basement, and ultimately starved to death during the cult's initiation process.

Authorities have arrested seven individuals, including family members, in connection with Cho's death. The "Soldiers of Christ" has been officially designated a criminal street gang under Georgia law, highlighting the severity of the allegations against the cult.

Cult expert Dr. Steve Hassan, who escaped a Korean cult in the 1970s, identified disturbing cult-like traits in this case. Joonho Lee, the alleged cult leader, claimed to receive instructions directly from God, a common characteristic among cult leaders. According to Dr. Hassan, the methods employed, such as alleged beatings, ice baths and starvation, suggest cult activity rather than typical street gang behavior.

“I predict they were doing an exorcism,” Hassan commented. “Because the person had doubts and wanted to leave, they weren’t conforming. So the leader was like, ‘We’re going to beat the body to get the spirit out of the person, or we’re going to starve the person until the spirit leaves.’”

The tragic incident has raised concerns about the presence of similar cults operating in the shadows across the country. Dr. Hassan warns that thousands of such groups exist in the United States, often led by individuals who were either raised in a cult or left to form their own. These groups employ control tactics like starvation, sleep deprivation and information restriction to manipulate members and instill irrational fear.

The case underscores the need for vigilance within communities, especially among those who may be susceptible due to personal struggles. The “Soldiers of Christ” allegedly targeted Cho during a vulnerable period of depression, emphasizing the dangers of exploitation by cults.

Biblical Community vs. Cult Manipulation

In response to such tragedies, the Christian community is called to promote and teach the biblical principles of genuine Christian fellowship. The Bible emphasizes the importance of supportive, uplifting communities that follow the teachings of Christ. Rather than engaging in harmful practices, the focus should be on strengthening one another in faith, love and compassion.

Proverbs 27:17: “Iron sharpens iron, so a man sharpens the countenance of his friend.”

The tragic events surrounding Sehee Cho highlight the stark contrast between authentic Christian communities and those that deviate from biblical principles. True Christian fellowship promotes spiritual growth, mutual support and the nurturing of each member's faith and relationship with Jesus Christ.

Warning Signs and Scriptural Guidance

It is crucial for individuals to be aware of warning signs indicating potential cultic behavior within groups claiming to be Christian. The Bible provides guidance on discerning true discipleship and guarding against deception.

Matthew 7:15: "Beware of false prophets who come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravenous wolves."

In times of vulnerability, seeking guidance from established Christian leaders, engaging in prayerful discernment and consulting biblical principles can help individuals avoid falling prey to manipulative groups.

The tragic death of Sehee Cho serves as a somber reminder for communities to remain vigilant against cultic influences, fostering genuine Christian fellowship grounded in love, compassion and adherence to biblical teachings.

Unlocking the Transformative Power of the Holy Spirit

In a groundbreaking discovery, researchers from four Israeli universities, including Tel Aviv University (TAU) and the Hebrew University of Jerusalem (HU), have employed a revolutionary technology to affirm an event documented in the book of 2 Kings.

This innovative method, based on measuring the magnetic field recorded in burnt bricks, offers new insights into the conquest of the Philistine city of Gath by Hazael, King of Aram.

Biblical Corroboration

The research, detailed in the journal PLOS ONE, validates the biblical account: "About this time, Hazael, King of Aram, went up and attacked Gath and captured it. Then he turned to attack Jerusalem," (2 Kings 12:18). By examining burnt materials in ancient Gath, the largest city of its time, the multidisciplinary team of scientists has shed light on the intensity of the fire and the extent of destruction during this historical event.

"Our findings are important for determining the intensity of the fire and the scope of destruction in Gath—the largest and most powerful city in the land at the time—and also for understanding construction practices in the region," the researchers wrote. "Applying thermal demagnetization to archaeological materials: A tool for detecting burnt clay and estimating its firing temperature."

Technological Breakthrough

The researchers' method, known as thermal demagnetization, surpasses previous techniques by determining whether items like mud bricks underwent firing even at relatively low temperatures, crucial for accurate archaeological interpretation. This technique traces its roots back to the biblical era, as mentioned in the book of Genesis during the story of the Tower of Babel (Gen. 11:3).

Magnetic Field Analysis

Dr. Yoav Vaknin, leading the study, explained the method's reliance on measuring the magnetic field recorded in burnt bricks. As bricks burn, ferromagnetic particles align with the Earth's magnetic field, creating a strong and uniformly oriented magnetic field in the cooled-down brick. The team gradually erased this field using thermal demagnetization, affirming the method's validity.

"In a sun-dried mud brick, the orientation of these magnets is almost random so that they cancel out one another. Therefore, the overall magnetic signal of the brick is weak and not uniform. Heating to 200°C or more, as happens in a fire, releases the magnetic signals of these magnetic particles and, statistically, they tend to align with the earth's magnetic field at that specific time and place. When the brick cools down, these magnetic signals remain locked in their new position, and the brick develops a strong and uniformly oriented magnetic field that can be measured with a magnetometer. This is a clear indication that the brick has, in fact, been fired," Vaknin explains.

Sensitivity and Accuracy

The sensitivity of this new technique allows the identification of burning at much lower temperatures than previous methods. "Most techniques used for identifying burnt bricks are based on actual changes in the minerals that usually occur at temperatures higher than 500°C, when some minerals are converted into others,” said Dr. Adi Eliyahu Behar. Their method begins detecting changes at temperatures as low as 100°C, providing conclusive findings from 200°C and upward.

Archaeological Dispute Resolution

Applying their method to an archaeological dispute at Tell es-Safi, identified as the Philistine city of Gath, the researchers confirmed that the bricks burned and cooled in-situ during a single conflagration event. This conclusion contradicted the hypothesis that the structure collapsed over time, supporting the biblical account of Gath’s destruction by Hazael.

“Had the bricks been fired in a kiln and then laid in the wall, their magnetic orientations would have been random. Moreover, had the structure collapsed over time, not in a single fire event, the collapsed debris would have displayed random magnetic orientations. We believe that the main reason for our colleagues’ mistaken interpretation was their inability to identify burning at temperatures below 500°C. Since heat rises, materials at the bottom of the building burned at relatively low temperatures, below 400°C, and consequently the former study did not identify them as burnt leading to the conclusion that the building had not been destroyed by fire,” says Vaknin.

Ecological Implications and Historical Significance

Beyond its historical and archaeological significance, the researchers emphasized the ecological implications of ancient building methods. Brick-firing technology, requiring substantial combustive materials, might have led to deforestation and ecological shifts in the region. The findings suggest that such technology might not have been practiced in the Land of Israel during the times of the kings of Judah and Israel.

Inerrancy of the Bible

As we delve into these archeological revelations, it's essential to highlight the inerrancy of the Bible. The Scriptures, the inspired Word of God, continue to withstand the test of time and archaeological scrutiny. The accuracy of biblical accounts, as validated by technological advancements, reinforces our faith in the authenticity and reliability of God's Word.

The recent archeological breakthrough not only confirms the historical events documented in the Bible but also showcases the meticulous care with which God's Word has been preserved. As technology advances and researchers unearth more evidence, the inerrancy of the Bible remains unshaken. These discoveries serve as a testament to the enduring truth and reliability of the Scriptures, inviting us to explore the depths of our faith with renewed confidence.

Ex-Psychic's Message to Fox News: Stop Promoting the Occult

vision of societal breakdown unfolds as an oil tanker crashes into a tourist beach, planes fall from the sky and technology that underpins civilization fails. Though fictional, the movie touches on deep-seated fears that many of us share about the fragility of modern life.

The film, produced by Michelle and Barack Obama's company Higher Ground, is closely tied to the cyber-security issues the former president was briefed on during his time in office.

In our 21st-century lives, we are almost entirely dependent on complex technologies that many do not understand and can be easily exploited by our enemies.

The movie raises the question: could a societal breakdown like the one depicted really happen? The harsh truth is that modern life is perilously fragile.

The internet, once created to connect academic computers, has now become the central nervous system of our civilization, bringing untold benefits but also dangerous vulnerabilities.

Ransomware is a form of cyber-attack in which malicious actors encrypt essential data, demanding payment from the victims in exchange for restoring access to their information. Such attacks can be crude but effective, typically beginning when someone unwisely clicks a link in an email.

In a recent Charisma News interview, prophetic voice Joseph Z shared a vision the Lord gave him about this exact type of event happening in Las Vegas.

"I woke up in a visionary way and I woke up in Las Vegas," shares Z. "And the Lord said to me 'What is happening in Vegas will not stay in Vegas' and I wasn't even aware of this but that exact time there had been a cyber hacking going on in Las Vegas that was casino or hotel and they couldn't even get a handle on it.

“So they somehow settled the issue with the parties involved. They did not resolve the actual hacking and the cyber issue was breaking loose they kind of put a lid on it just by compromising.”

The full-scale societal collapse depicted in “Leave The World Behind” is somewhat overblown from a technological standpoint. However, the movie’s avoidance of specifics about the nature of the attack leaves viewers to wonder if the perpetrators are terrorists, a hostile state or even conspirators within America.

Attribution of cyber-attacks can be difficult, as what looks like petty cyber-crime can, in fact, be an industrial-scale enterprise run by a terrorist group, a criminal gang or the North Korean regime.

Joseph Z shared that while the Lord wants to bless His faithful, there is a spirit of Antichrist that wants to wage war upon them.

“I believe God is saying to those who are faithful, are going to begin to have more. There’s going to be more in ’24 and I believe that’s going to be under duress, under pressure, under difficulty. I think they’re trying to bring a lot of very difficult things to the world. The spirit of Antichrist wants to do that,” Z says.

As Christians, we must recognize the importance of being prepared for potential crises without giving in to fear. The Bible teaches us to trust in God’s protection and provision (Ps. 91:2, Matt. 6:25-34).

We can always take practical steps to prepare for emergencies without succumbing to fear, such as having battery-powered flashlights and radios, some food and drink, first-aid and essential medicines, warm clothing, a “cash stash” and similar necessities.

Following this direction of preparing for unseen events, billionaire Mark Zuckerberg is said to be constructing a vast $100 million Hawaii compound, which includes an underground bunker and independent food and energy supplies. This secretive project hints that the social media magnate might be attempting to hide his preparations for potential doomsday scenarios.

Ultimately, our faith in God should guide us through uncertain times, and our actions should reflect the love and compassion of Christ. As we face the potential for societal breakdown, let us remember that our hope lies in Him.
