

God Sends These 3 Things to Shake Our Attention

No, this is not Germany in the 1930s or '40s.

This is the modern days we live in where mobs of Islamic men are actively hunting for Jews and Israelis flying into Dagestan.

As reported by the X (formerly Twitter) account OSINTdefender, an open-source intelligence-sharing account, Islamic men shut down an international airport looking for Jews arriving from Tel Aviv:

“Muslims within the Republic of Dagestan in Southwestern Russia are currently storming the International Airport in the Region in order to reportedly ‘Kill Israelis and Jews’ after Rumors began that an Israeli Aircraft was preparing to land at the Airport; this has been going [on] for the last several hours, with Pro-Hamas Support[ers] having Stormed a number of hotels and other Public Locations across the Region on the Hunt for Israelis.”

Multiple other outlets confirmed what was taking place with live video and photos being shared across the world the moment the mob took over the airport.

Dagestan is a part of the Russian republic, and Russian police lost control over the situation almost immediately.

The rioters searched the airport for hours looking for Jews, terrorizing many people they suspected of being Israeli or Jewish.

One man was surrounded by the mob when they suspected him of being Jewish, and he pleaded with them, saying he was Uzbek.

BREAKING:

The lynch mob which stormed the airport in Dagestan, Russia to search for Jews as a plane was landing from Tel Aviv has found its first "suspected Jew"

He tells them he is Uzbek, but they don't believe him

"Take his passport, search his phone"

The mob is heard on video telling one another to search the man's phone and passport to see whether he was Jewish or not.

Perhaps the most terrifying video the public saw was that of a bus full of children being approached by the riotous mob to see if any of the children were Jewish or Israeli.

BREAKING:

They suspect that the children are Israeli and demand to check everyone's passports

This is the same evil that brought about Kristallnacht and the same hatred that led to the Holocaust.

Except now, it is in nearly every major city across the globe, and millions have marched in protest of the existence of the nation of Israel.

Make no mistake, this hatred for God's chosen people is satanic in origin, and a continuation of the first prophecy in the Bible in Genesis 3:15:

"I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your offspring and her offspring; he will bruise your head, and you will bruise his heel."

BREAKING:

Shots fired by the lynch mob at the airport in Dagestan.

People within the lynch mob that stormed the Russian airport to search for Jews arriving on a Tel Aviv plane have guns with them.

They are firing warning shots to push the security forces back.

– Visegrád 24 (@visegrad24) October 29, 2023

Just as there was enmity between the descendants of Isaac and Ishmael, and of Jacob (Israel) and Esau, there will be a continuing spiritual attack against the nation of Israel until the biblical prophecies of the end times come to pass.

Today, however, we are seeing the physical manifestations of Satan's hatred for God, His people and His design for creation.

What Hamas, their supporters and other terrorist organizations like them are demonstrating is pure evil. They demonstrate it daily with their bloodthirst and willingness to murder while trying to cover up their evil with deceptive propaganda.

This type of violence against the people of Israel is only going to get worse in the coming days, weeks and months.

Meanwhile, God is watching and is in control of every situation, even when the world looks like it is on the brink of collapse.

Pastor John Hagee Warns of Potential Terror Threat to the US

Grand Canyon University, the nation's largest Christian university, has recently found itself at the center of investigations by the Department of Education and other federal agencies. GCU President Brian Mueller believes these investigations are unwarranted, raising concerns that they might be related to the university's Christian beliefs.

While no direct evidence suggests religious motivations, the fact that two of the largest Christian universities, GCU and Liberty University, are under scrutiny prompts questions about the intentions behind these investigations.

Compound these investigations with the Biden administration's Department of Justice actively prosecuting pro-life groups and political rivals, and it does not take a stretch of the imagination to see how these allegations could be true.

GCU's troubles began when the Department of Education denied its request to transition to nonprofit status in 2018. This denial affects the university's ability to access grant-writing opportunities, federal research funding and financial aid programs.

GCU, originally a nonprofit institution until 2004, reestablished its nonprofit status in 2018 with approvals from various institutions, including the IRS, the Higher Learning Commission and the State of Arizona. The Department of Education, however, contested this change, leading to a lawsuit by GCU, arguing the decision was "arbitrary and capricious." The department emerged victorious, reinforcing its stance under the Higher Education Act.

GCU's continued appeal is set for Dec. 5, further highlighting the university's determination to attain nonprofit status. In the meantime, the university has accused the Department of Education, the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Veterans Affairs of unfairly targeting them in response to their lawsuit.

One investigation scrutinizes GCU's advertising practices, specifically whether its claims about the demand for cybersecurity experts are deceptive. GCU maintains its assertions are factual.

The Arizona State Approving Agency, which reviews GCU, has been accused of being influenced by the Department of Veterans Affairs. The VA, however, cites a change in law signed by former President Trump, requiring cooperation between VA and state agencies for annual risk-based surveys on educational institutions receiving GI Bill benefits. This accounts for the unique review GCU is undergoing.

The Federal Trade Commission is investigating Grand Canyon Education, the entity providing marketing and recruiting support to GCU. GCU disputes allegations of making unsolicited calls to potential students, asserting that they only contact those who express interest.

The Biden administration's pledge to curb for-profit colleges misusing Title IV funds has also led to closer scrutiny of GCU. Despite its nonprofit status, GCU's default rates on student loans remain low, contradicting the administration's rationale for investigations.

A 2021 press release by GCU indicates a default rate of 5.6%, nearly half the national average at the time. However, the FTC has offered no comment on these figures.

In addition to other reviews, the Department of Education is examining GCU's doctoral program for misrepresenting the program's costs. The department has informed the university of a potential significant fine due to "substantial misrepresentations and other compliance issues."

The department insists that these actions are aimed at holding schools accountable for student welfare and the proper use of federal funds, maintaining that these actions are not influenced by the university's Christian identity or its history of litigation against the department.

Grand Canyon University's ongoing legal battles with federal agencies raise questions about whether its Christian identity plays a role in these investigations. While GCU seeks nonprofit status and argues for fair treatment, the federal government maintains that its actions are solely in the interest of protecting students and taxpayers.

Jentezen Franklin's End-Times Series Becomes 4-Night Revival With Evangelist Perry Stone

In a rapidly changing world, Prophet Tomi Arayomi, a prominent voice in the Christian community, sheds light on the intersection of faith and technology in a recent interview with Charisma News.

Arayomi is urging Christians to harness the power of AI, emphasizing that the era of artificial intelligence is here, and there's no turning back.

Arayomi is currently leading a course called "Target," designed to equip Christians with the skills to utilize AI or risk becoming obsolete in the job market. He stresses that the impact of AI on various professions is undeniable since AI is advancing at an unprecedented pace, learning and adapting independently.

“The Lord told me to call it ‘Target,’ [to] use the tool of AI or become a tool of AI. And the truth is what I tell those people, you should be afraid. And I don’t mean that in a spreading fear kind of way, I mean that your job is going to be replaced, there’s no doubt about it. If you are a web designer, graphic designer, Photoshop editor, if you’re an administrator, secretary or personal assistant, your job is going to be replaced,” Arayomi warns.

Arayomi highlights the pressing questions surrounding AI’s capabilities. Is it sentient, and can it be held accountable for crimes? He points to a recent case in which Alexa, a popular AI-powered device, was summoned as a witness in a legal trial in the United States. These developments signal the arrival of a new normal, and Arayomi believes it’s time to embrace it.

Drawing a parallel to history, Arayomi compares the influence of AI to the Roman roads in the spread of the gospel. The Roman roads acted as a primitive form of the worldwide web, facilitating the rapid dissemination of Christianity. While these roads were also used for less noble purposes, they served as a vital conduit for sharing the message of Jesus. Arayomi believes AI will play a similar role among the younger generations, particularly Gen Z.

Arayomi acknowledges potential dangers associated with AI in that it represents a singularity, an uncharted territory, and its evolution is proceeding at a pace that could surpass human intelligence. It raises questions about the potential consequences and ethical implications of AI development.

Arayomi emphasizes that AI is not something to fear but to use wisely. Just as the printing press, the telegraph, radio, television and the early internet aided previous generations in spreading the gospel, AI will be a tool for the church in the ongoing digital age. While it comes with risks, it also offers unprecedented opportunities to advance the message of faith. As Arayomi puts it, "We are here now. There is no going back. Might as well use it."

Pastor John Hagee: Seizing the Urgency of Studying End Times Prophecy

In a recent interview with Bishop Alan DiDio, Pastor Jimmy Evans delves into the profound concept of the Tribulation and the significance of comprehending the timing of the rapture in Christian eschatology.

With an emphasis on bringing clarity to these end times questions facing many believers today, Evans provides a compelling perspective that instills a sense of hope within the Christian community.

The Tribulation: A Time of Unimaginable Chaos

Evans paints a vivid picture of the Tribulation, describing it as a period of unparalleled suffering and upheaval. Drawing from biblical passages, he stresses that the Tribulation will be nothing short of "hell on Earth." He cites Scriptural references from the book of Revelation to depict the gruesome judgments and calamities that will befall humanity during this period.

The Pre-Tribulation Rapture: A Message of Assurance

One of the central themes of Pastor Evan's position on the end times is the belief in the pre-tribulation rapture. This doctrine posits that Christians will be taken to heaven before the Tribulation commences, ensuring their escape from the impending horrors.

Evans describes the astounding blessings awaiting believers during the rapture. According to him, the event ushers in an era of supernatural transformation. Among the promised rewards, the most noteworthy is the gift of new bodies—bodies that will never age, get sick or experience decay. These imperishable, supernatural forms will grant believers limitless freedom and vitality, allowing them to run for miles or swim for eons without fatigue.

The "Father's House" in Heaven: A Real and Tangible Promise

Referencing John 14, Evans illustrates a tangible aspect of the pre-Tribulation rapture—the concept of the "Father's house." Unlike the allegorical interpretations of some theological concepts, this reference is anything but symbolic.

"In my father's house are many mansions," Jesus says, assuring believers that these are actual dwellings prepared for their eternal habitation. Evans emphasizes that these heavenly abodes are real and glorious, far exceeding anything we can fathom on Earth. Believers will reside in a place untouched by sorrow, sickness or decay, where angels serve them and they can look upon the face of God.

A Message of Hope and Expectation

Pastor Evans interview with Bishop DiDio offers a compelling perspective on the Tribulation and the pre-Tribulation rapture. By bringing clarity to these intricate eschatological subjects, he instills a profound sense of hope within the Christian community. The promise of the rapture, new bodies, redeemed identities and the “father’s house” in heaven serves as a source of immense encouragement for believers, strengthening their faith and anticipation of the divine blessings that await them.

As the world grapples with uncertainties, this message provides a resounding message of hope and expectation for Christians looking forward to the day when they will be redeemed and united with their Creator in their eternal home.

The Cessationist Documentary Is Wrong for All the Wrong Reasons

A lot has happened throughout the world in less than a week.

Israel and Hamas are now engaged in a formal war with no end in sight.

The nation of Israel and her leadership have repeated their intent is the utter destruction of Hamas, and nothing less.

Protests across the globe have erupted both for Israel and against Israel. For Hamas, and against Hamas.

Currently, the Israeli Defense Force has surrounded Gaza in southern Israel and plans on a ground assault in the near future.

There are also fears of a second front being opened up in northern Israel should the terror group Hezbollah decide to launch an offensive against Israel from Lebanon.

As dire of a situation as this is, it could pale in comparison to the events that may occur Friday, Oct. 13.

In a recorded statement, former leader of Hamas Khaled Meshaal issued a call-to-action for Muslims across the world, and for neighboring Islamic countries join in the war against Israel.

The recorded statement was sent to Reuters who published it:

"[We must] head to the squares and streets of the Arab and Islamic world on Friday," Meshaal, was the leader of the political wing of Hamas from 1996 to 2017, says in the statement.

"Tribes of Jordan, sons of Jordan, brothers and sisters of Jordan... This is a moment of truth and the borders are close to you, you all know your responsibility," he continues.

"To all scholars who teach jihad... to all who teach and learn, this is a moment for the application (of theories)," Meshaal adds.

The last line set the media world ablaze.

Many have accused Meshaal's message to be one of global jihad, not of peaceful protests.

Regardless of his intent, billions around the world have now heard his message that soared through media channels.

Already patrolling pro-Palestinian protests in major cities such as London, Paris and New York City, police forces around the world are on high alert for any potential violence that may occur from Meshaal's message.

As armored personnel carriers surround the Gaza Strip in preparation for a ground assault, awaiting the go ahead from Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and the War Cabinet, Israeli leaders are holding fast to their goals of eradicating the terrorist network who slaughtered over a thousand of their people. God's people.

In the meantime, millions of Christians and Jews worldwide are praying for the peace of Israel, holding fast to the Word of God and His instructions on praying for and blessing the nation He chose to be His own.
