

'Demon-Possessed' Prostitute Rejects Candace Owens' Prayer After Debate

In a recent video, Christian media personality Ruslan KD shined a spotlight on the egregious theories some are pushing within the Christian community about Jesus.

These scholars actually question the Bible's authenticity while exploring alternative narratives that never found their place within the canonical texts, but instead originate in the book of Thomas.

Their theory: That Thomas was actually Jesus' twin brother, who just so happens to have never been talked about in the Bible.

Bible scholars across denominations widely acknowledge that Jesus had at least one brother, James, who initially did not follow Him during His earthly ministry. This is a crucial aspect of Jesus's life, as James later became a prominent figure in the early Christian movement after Jesus's Resurrection. His transformation from skeptic to devout believer serves as compelling evidence for Jesus' Messianic claims.

"An identical twin, identical not only in looks but in supernatural power," Ruslan incredulously details the newest theory to discredit the Word of God and the miracle of the Resurrection.

"You see where this is going, right?" Ruslan asks. "Well then when Jesus died on the cross, He came back alive, it was really His twin."

Not only does this theory completely invalidate the sacrifice on the cross and Jesus' victory over sin and death, it also cancels Jesus' unique position as the perfect sacrifice since it introduces another perfect, divine being born of Mary. About which, of course, the angel Gabriel said nothing, nor did anyone else who wrote the Gospels of the New Testament.

Ruslan correctly eviscerates this insane theory that is being promulgated by people regarded as Bible scholars who are displaying astounding depths of ignorance of the Scriptures.

Grasping at straws which are not even there, the video Ruslan references tries to connect invisible dots by suggesting the relevance of the name "Thomas" is in its Aramaic meaning, "twin." When this name was transliterated into Greek, an "s" was added to create "Thomas." This Greek convention was intended to fit the name into the grammatical structure of the Greek language. However, it was misconstrued by some as evidence of an identical twin for Jesus.

"So now we've got these Gnostic Gospels, these heretical gospels, these gospels that are completely coloring outside the lines of what the consensus was on Orthodox Christianity at that time, and because these fan-fiction are there, now you're going to take this and somehow try to make a justification on some Da Vinci code vibes on why this is reasonable or historical in the slightest?" Ruslan continues.

Herein lies another excellent example, as though today's world and culture needs more, for Christians to be aware of the absolute necessity of biblical literacy. If a Christian knows the Word of God and the wisdom, truth and knowledge held within it, then they are equipped to call out these false teachings for what they are: lunacy.

Jesus stands apart from the rest of humanity as the One perfect being, and His perfection according to God's righteousness, morality and principles is what justified His perfect sacrifice on the cross for the remission of humanities sins. God accepted this perfect blood offering, allowing for His creation, man, to receive salvation through Jesus Christ.

Not some hypothetical twin who is being elevated to the same level as Jesus Christ.

These types of heretical teachings are finding far more reach in today's information age. The internet is capable of being the medium for the Bible to reach all corners of the earth, while at the same time pushing false doctrine and deceiving those without biblical literacy.

Just as it is written in 2 Peter 2, and a multitude of passages in the Bible, there were false teachers and prophets during the early Christian church and they are in today's world as well. As the world continues toward the end times prophesied in Revelation, these falsehoods will become more and more prevalent and it is the duty and responsibility to call out false doctrines that take away from the divinity and holiness of Jesus Christ.

Pro Football Legend Jim Kelly Boldly Expresses His Faith Through Baptism

View this post on Instagram

A post shared by Jill Kelly (@jillmkelly)

Jill, in the caption of her post, expressed her deep belief, saying, "Jim's t-shirt says, 'God's Real.' He is! I have witnessed God at work in this man's life for over 30 I can tell you that God isn't just REAL, He is faithful, trustworthy, kind, loving, compassionate, powerful, gracious, GOOD, merciful, so so much MORE. He is immeasurably MORE than we can imagine! He is EVERYTHING!"

Jim Kelly's fame primarily stems from his remarkable career as a quarterback, during which he led the Buffalo Bills to four consecutive Super Bowls from 1990 to 1993, though they narrowly missed clinching the title each time. In recognition of his illustrious football career, he was inducted into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in 2002.

However, Kelly's life journey has been marked by both triumphs and trials. In 1997, just a year after retiring from the NFL, he faced the heartbreaking diagnosis of his infant son, Hunter, with Krabbe disease, ultimately leading to Hunter's passing in 2005. In response, Kelly founded the Hunter's Hope Foundation and dedicated his Hall of Fame induction speech to his beloved son.

The challenges did not stop there. In 2013, Kelly courageously disclosed his battle with squamous cell carcinoma. Over the next few years, he underwent numerous hospitalizations. However, his tenacity prevailed, and he was declared cancer-free for three years. Even when cancer returned in March 2018, Jim Kelly's spirit remained unbroken. Four months after undergoing surgery, he once again emerged victorious against cancer, proving his resilience and inspiring countless others.

Jim Kelly's recent baptism serves as a testament to his enduring faith and his determination to share the message of hope and salvation in Jesus Christ with the world. As he continues his life's journey, he remains an iconic figure, both on and off the football field, leaving an indelible mark through his unwavering devotion to his faith and his unyielding spirit in the face of adversity.

"I want you to fill the room to overflowing," Locke requested. "Now if you can't control your temper, stay home."

Well, the congregants listened to their pastor, and instead of any contention or division during the commission's meeting, worship broke out.

Just as it is spoken in Isaiah 61, when combating the spirit of heaviness, put on a garment of praise (v.3).

Praise invited the presence of God into the commission hearing, and He is the overcomer of all obstacles.

There will always be times of difficulty and heaviness in life, but when praise and worship are offered up to the throne of the Most High God, His power springs forth into the situation, creating miraculous results for which only He can get the glory.

As the legal battles remain for Locke and GVBC, one thing is for sure: Letting God take the lead on any problems encountered is the best way to approach the issue.

Great Deception Prophecies Becoming a Reality With NASA's Latest Announcement

A special event is happening on Oct. 14, 2023: An annular solar eclipse will be visible in North America. This eclipse is famous for creating a "ring of fire" in the sky. It will travel across eight U.S. states from Oregon to Texas. If you can't watch it in person, you can still see it online at no cost.

During this type of eclipse, the moon looks a bit smaller than the sun. It doesn't cover the whole sun like a total eclipse but instead leaves a ring of sunlight around it.

Everyone in the Americas will see a part of the eclipse, but to see the ring of fire, you'll need to be in a specific path that goes from the northwest U.S. through Central America to Brazil. This path includes eight U.S. states: Oregon, California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas. Even if you're not in this path, you can still see a partial eclipse online.

This eclipse on Oct. 14 is the last ring of fire in the U.S. until 2039, according to "The Farmer's Almanac." The next one after that, in 2039, will only be visible in Alaska and northwest Canada.

Events like this ring of fire eclipse appear to be occurring with increasing frequency.

As Charisma News reported, a total lunar eclipse occurred on Tuesday, Nov. 8, 2022. This was the first time in the history of the United States that a blood moon occurred on Election Day.

In the book of Joel, Chapter 2, the prophet writes in several verses about the moon turning to blood, the sun and moon darkening and that the Lord will show wonders within the heavens.

This prophecy is echoed hundreds of years later in the New Testament. In the book of Matthew, Jesus Himself says, "Immediately after the tribulation of those days, 'the sun will be darkened, the moon will not give its light; the stars will fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens will be shaken'" (24:29).

Compound these events in the heavenlies with the growing anticipation of the red heifer's being born in Israel, and we see millions of Christians and Jews around the world waiting in growing excitement for the next chapter of the biblical end times and the eventual rebuilding of the third temple.

As many enjoy the upcoming solar eclipse, remember the Bible's teachings about signs in the heavens. These events remind us of God's power and His promise to return someday. So let the eclipse be a beautiful reminder of God's glory and the hope that comes with it.

Christian UFC Fighter Holds Bible High While Calling Out Satan in the Octagon

In the world of Christianity, it's common to encounter disagreements and divisions. While the Bible emphasizes the importance of unity among believers, it's also true that people sometimes interpret things differently and have varying approaches to their faith.

How Christians handle these moments of division within the church says a lot about their commitment to the core values of love and unity.

In a world where conflicts often make headlines, it's essential for Christians to remember a simple but powerful message from Scripture: If it's possible, do your best to live in peace with everyone (see Rom. 12:18).

Recently, we've seen a division emerge between two large Christian ministries, but this age-old wisdom reminds us of the crucial role unity plays when differences arise. It's a reminder that we should prioritize peace and harmony, even when disagreements arise.

Pastor Greg Locke of Global Vision Bible Church and Evangelist Daniel Adams, whose organizations were closely linked and in ministry with one another, have reached an impasse.

Speaking at his service last week, Locke implored Adams to disassociate with one E.J. Newton, and for Lovy Elias to cut off all contact with Passion Java.

Locke believes these men are not under the power of the Holy Spirit, and has publicly accused Java of being a witch doctor under the power of the Kundalini spirit. He has implored Adams to repent from the platform of his Mt. Juliet, Tennessee, church, but instead a wedge appears to have been driven between the two ministry leaders.

"I am for unity," Locke declares during his Sunday service. "I am against mixture [with demonic spirits], and mixture is not unity. There's a difference in biblical unity and anti-biblical mixture.

"Look, I want to be a bridge to bring unity to the body of Christ, but I will not be a syringe that injects poison by way of mixture into this church!" he adds.

For now, the two ministries have been unhitched from one another and continue forward on their respective paths.

While striving for unity within the body of Christ is crucial, the Bible also offers guidance on how to handle situations where individuals within the faith may choose to reject the ways of God. The delicate balance between unity and separation is a topic that requires a deep understanding of biblical principles.

The Scriptures acknowledge that, at times, believers may need to separate from those who persistently reject God's ways. In 2 Corinthians 6:14, the apostle Paul urges believers not to be "yoked together with unbelievers." Paul exhorts the importance of maintaining a clear distinction between the values and lifestyles of those who follow Christ and those who do not. While the Bible doesn't encourage judgment or condemnation, it underscores the need to safeguard one's faith and principles when faced with unyielding opposition to God's truths.

In such situations, separation is not an act of judgment but a step taken in love, with the hope of fostering an environment where both parties can realign with God's will. The Bible encourages believers, "And do not have fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness; instead, expose them" (Eph. 5:11). It's a call to distance oneself from ungodly practices while maintaining a posture of love and prayer, with the ultimate goal of leading those who have strayed back to the path of faith.

Finding this delicate balance between unity and separation is a challenge that requires wisdom, discernment and love, but it is grounded in the desire to see all individuals come to know and embrace the truth of the gospel.

It's Time the 'Silent' Church Wakes Up and Speaks Out

As the days grow spiritually darker across the world, as they must for the return of Jesus Christ to take place, false prophets and teachers are laying claim to deceived souls at a record pace.

With the power of social media at their fingertips, millions are being lulled into a false sense of spiritual community with a figure that is leading them down death's path.

Recently, Pastor Greg Locke of Global Vision Bible Church in Mount Juliet, Tennessee, shared a passionately personal story of having to unhitch himself, and the church, from a friend who has been deceived by one of these false prophets.

There is a shaking going on in the prophetic world, as Locke is following in the same steps taken recently by Evangelist Mario Murillo, who removed himself from attending Flashpoint and called out Kat Kerr and Robin Bullock by name as false prophets.

In today's culture, where acceptance and tolerance of sin has replaced adherence to the Word of God, the enemy would try and convince people that Java is just living out his truth, and Locke is simply a hater.

But that is not what the Bible says.

Locke points to 1 John 4:1 in his newest book, "Cast It Out," as guidance for himself and his congregation when determining if a spirit is of God or not:

"Beloved, do not believe every spirit, but test the spirits to see whether they are from God, because many false prophets have gone out into the world.”

“In this verse, the apostle John exhorts us to ‘test the spirits,’ Locke writes. “When the Bible tells us to measure whether or not a spirit is ‘from God,’ that means some spirits are of God and all other spirits are not of God. John is saying that the effort to avoid being seduced by the dark spirits in false prophets must involve testing the spirits, which points to the difficulty in discerning spirits that can appear as ‘angel[s] of light’ (2 Cor. 11:14). We will often need to weigh spirits to discern whether they are angels of God or demons of Satan.”

The act of unhitching from someone you care about is not easy for the flesh, but obedience to the Holy Spirit is a necessity, especially when one is the shepherd of a flock the way Locke is.

As the end times continue to progress, the rise of false prophets will continue to lead people away from the one true salvation, which is Jesus Christ.

They must also be called out for what they are according to the Word of God. If someone, or some group, points to anything other than God and His Scriptures, then Christians must stand up as His representatives on earth and correct the issue.

Christians often talk about exposing the darkness with the light, and when a prominent leader finally does, it remains to be seen if people will heed the warning or continue forward in willful ignorance that will take them off a spiritual cliff.
