

Nephilim Expert LA Marzulli Warns Against Alien Hoaxes

Without the presence of God, the world is destined to become a much darker place. The Bible declares that Jesus is a bright light in our lives (John 8:12).

The Creator of all things has been kicked out by His sons and daughters from areas of society such as education, government and even their daily lives.

When the light of God is not present, it is as if there is only darkness. In the book of John, it says, "In Him was life, and the life was the light of mankind. The light shines in darkness, but the darkness has not overcome it," (John 1:4-5).

In the absence of Jesus, the darkness will spread and Christians are seeing the result of this abandonment of the light in the United States of America.

While on the surface the world seems to be returning to normalcy after the pandemic, a joint report by international religious freedom advocacy groups delivers a stark warning to the Christian community. The report, presented by Open Doors US and World Relief, reveals the plight of persecuted Christians seeking refuge in the United States remains troublingly difficult. This is a matter of great concern, given that one in every seven Christians worldwide faces high levels of persecution and discrimination.

The "Closed Doors" report, presented on Capitol Hill, paints a disheartening picture. It highlights that America, once seen as a safe haven for those fleeing persecution, may no longer offer that sanctuary as it once did. The data speak volumes: Christian refugees admitted into the United States from countries listed on Open Doors' annual World Watch List are currently at their lowest levels in a decade.

The report's findings reveal that even as life in the United States returns to post-pandemic normal, the pace of refugee admissions has lagged behind. By the end of fiscal year 2022, the number of Christian refugees resettled from the 50 countries where Christians face severe persecution plummeted by about 70% compared to fiscal year 2016. In 2022, only 9,538 Christian refugees from the most persecuted countries found refuge in the U.S. This is less than one-third of the 32,248 Christian refugees admitted in 2016.

It's not just about the numbers; it's about the lives affected. The report points out that Christian refugees from specific countries, where persecution is especially severe, face an even more challenging journey to find safety. Iran and Iraq, among others, witnessed alarming drops in the number of Christian refugees admitted between 2016 and 2022.

The situation is dire for many who seek asylum, particularly at the border. The report highlights policies and proposals that could further restrict access to asylum for persecuted Christians. These measures include rules implemented by the U.S. Department of Homeland Security, creating what some describe as an 'asylum lottery.'

World Relief President and CEO Myal Greene emphasizes the importance of supporting a pathway for asylum, especially for those escaping persecution for religious reasons. He calls on the Biden administration to raise the refugee resettlement ceiling, seeking to restore the Lautenberg Amendment, which historically provided a pathway for religious minorities and those from former Soviet republics to find refuge in the United States.

Amid these challenges, there is hope in bipartisan efforts like the Dignity Act, which aims to enhance border security and expand the capacity to process asylum claims. Such measures, if enacted, could provide a lifeline for persecuted Christians and others seeking safety in the United States.

In these times, when hostility toward Christians and restrictions on their ability to find refuge seem to be on the rise, it's essential to remember the Bible's teachings. Scripture warns us that in the end times, the world will grow darker spiritually, and hostility toward Christians will increase. These challenges remind us to hold fast to our faith and continue advocating for justice and compassion for those in need.

Brazil Soccer Legend Ronaldo Celebrating Baptism as 'a child of God'

Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, Gilad Erdan, found himself in the spotlight as he was detained by U.N. personnel for staging a dramatic protest during Iranian President Ebrahim Raisi's address to the U.N. General Assembly.

In a bold display of dissent, Erdan stood up as Raisi began his speech and held up a picture of Mahsa Amini, a young Iranian woman who tragically lost her life while in the custody of Iranian regime forces last year. The placard he displayed bore the message, "Iranian women deserve freedom now!" Erdan then exited the hall, making a poignant statement against the presence of a leader he views as a "vile mass murderer" on the global stage.

However, Erdan's act of protest was met with swift and, in his words, "unacceptable" brutality by U.N. personnel who detained him, sparking outrage among supporters and diplomats alike. Speaking to Fox News Digital, Erdan expressed his dismay at the U.N.'s handling of the situation, stating, "The U.N.'s lost moral compass was on full display today."

New moral stain for the UN !!

When President Raisi of Iran, the "Butcher of Tehran," began his speech, I waved a picture of Mahsa Amini, the innocent Iranian woman who was brutally murdered by the regime one year ago for not wearing a hijab "properly."

Meanwhile, outside the UN...

– Ambassador Gilad Erdan 🇮🇱🇮🇱 (@giladerdan1) September 19, 2023

Erdan, known for his strong advocacy of Israel's interests, asserted that he was detained merely for "standing with the Iranian people" and condemning a leader accused of human rights abuses. He pointed out that other ambassadors have previously held signs for ideological reasons during U.N. sessions, including recent ones on the war in Ukraine, without facing any repercussions.

Mahsa Amini's tragic fate underscores the dire situation faced by some within Iran. Amini was arrested for not adhering to the mandatory head-covering law and subsequently died while in custody. Erdan's act aimed to bring attention to the plight of Iranian citizens and to condemn Raisi's presence at the U.N.

In a statement issued after the incident, Erdan expressed his disappointment in the international community for affording Raisi a platform. He implored the world to “stop the madness and prevent murderers and anti-Semites from coming and speaking here at the UN.”

Erdan's protest also shed light on what he perceives as the U.N.'s “hypocrisy and moral distortion.” He argued that the organization was founded with the aim of preventing atrocities, a mission he believes was betrayed by the audience Raisi received.

“While the butcher of Tehran is speaking at the U.N. and is being respected by the international community, hundreds of Iranians are protesting outside, shouting and calling on the international community to wake up and help them,” Erdan said in the statement.

“It is a disgrace that member states stay to listen to a mass murderer. I left the speech to make it clear that the State of Israel stands by the Iranian people. I call on the international community to stop the madness and prevent murderers and anti-Semites from coming and speaking here at the U.N.”

Before Raisi's visit to the U.S., the Israeli Consulate in New York initiated a protest campaign against him. They strategically placed life-size cutouts of Raisi around the city, reminding Americans that he is barred from visiting due to sanctions related to his alleged involvement in human rights abuses.

Pastor Troy Brewer Shares the New Year 5784 and Beyond: Embracing God's Divine Timing

As darkness moves to imprison people around the world in spiritual bondage, there are those who are driving back the demonic powers that seek to oppress humanity.

During a recent live Q&A, renowned media host and author Mondo De La Vega sat down with Apostle Alexander Pagani to unveil a driving force behind spiritual oppression for many around the world: generational curses.

Detailing why he felt the Lord instructed him to write his newest book, The Secrets to Generational Curses, Pagani extolled the importance of being set free spiritually from these destructive curses.

"I began to question why are the very same people that we [are] helping go through deliverance coming back to get deliverance? Then re-deliverance, and then I began to question two things: is this deliverance idolatry and deliverance addiction, or am I doing something wrong?

"The goal of deliverance is to go through a deliverance session, you get set free and then you never have to come back," Pagani explains.

"The Holy Spirit said [to me] it was not a demon issue, it is not a flesh issue, it is a generational curse issue. So, it started me on a path to really explore more the idea of: is there another level of freedom that is a part of the total package of freedom in Christ," he adds.

De La Vega and Pagani then tackled an important part of deliverance ministry and freedom from generational curses that many Christians are either unwilling to discuss or simply do not believe: the difference between Christians being demonized versus being possessed.

In previous Charisma Media interviews, Pagani has made his stance very clear on the matter: Christians cannot be possessed by demons, but they can suffer under demonic torment.

Yet it was from his own personal testimony and those of his church members that Pagani shared how they were suffering under the weight of demonic oppression, but were not possessed by these demons. Instead, they were tormented spiritually and being attacked on multiple fronts while seeking the Lord on the matter, when what they truly needed at the hands of God was deliverance.

And that is the same deliverance that Jesus administered during His time on earth, and the same deliverance that He entrusted His followers to continue to perform until His return.

"I said to the Lord, 'What do I need to do to help people get set free?' and He said, 'deliverance.' I remember telling God no [thinking] Christians cannot be demonized (oppressed). But I was desperate and this is how I entered into deliverance," says Pagani.

Taking questions from the audience, Pagani highlighted the need for righteousness to take place in one's life and breaking the chains from past generations that may be holding a person captive in the sins of their ancestors.

The first thing Pagani implores viewers to do is recognize the patterns in their lives to identify the potential of a generational curse being in play in their lives.

"Based on the outcome that you keep seeing, [things] repetitively keep happening, that's how you identify it. If you keep seeing the same thing happening over and over and over again, and you've troubleshooted what could potentially be the problem, if it leads to 'I think this could be a curse,' then you have identified by name or function what is the curse," says Pagani.

"If your family is in drug addiction, everyone is into gangs, is everyone into making money, is everyone lying? That is how you identify it, by what you consistently see happening over and over again."

Continual growth and maturation in one's faith are of paramount importance for Christians to stand firm against the spiritual attacks of the devil. Just as physical strength and resilience require ongoing exercise and nourishment, spiritual strength and maturity demand continuous engagement with God's Word, prayer and fellowship.

In a world where spiritual battles are a constant reality, a deepening faith equips believers with the wisdom, discernment and spiritual armor needed to resist the devil's curses, schemes and temptations.

As Christians mature in their faith, they become better equipped to recognize and confront spiritual attacks, remaining steadfast in their commitment to God's truth and righteousness. This ongoing growth not only safeguards individual believers from spiritual oppression such as generational curses, but also strengthens the body of Christ, creating a community of believers who can support and uplift one another in times of spiritual warfare.

Presidential Candidate Highlights Faith as Key to America's Future

In our current era, remarkable events are unfolding, alluding to the imminent fulfillment of biblical prophecies, including the rapture of the church (1 Thess. 4:16) and the return of Christ in judgment (Rev. 19:11).

Bible scholars widely acknowledge that a multitude of signs have come to pass, causing both concern and anticipation as we witness the rapid advance of evil against God's children, including Jews and Christians.

History bears witness to the rebirth of Israel as a nation on May 14, 1948, precisely as foretold in Isaiah 66:8. Jesus is anticipated to return as the conquering King, riding a white horse, prepared to wage war against those who have rejected His love and persecuted His followers (Ps. 9:8). This event, described as the "great and terrible day of the Lord," (Joel 2:31), will reveal a stern countenance, with "fire in His eyes," (Rev. 2:8).

The Holy Spirit emphasizes that the Lord's return will not be as a gentle lamb but as the mighty Lion of the tribe of Judah. It is paramount to stand with Him, not against Him, on that fateful day.

Scholars and contemporary prophets concur that prerequisites for Christ's return have been met in our generation. Time is running short for humanity to turn to the cross and repent. The question arises: how long can a just and loving God bear witness to the widespread killing of innocent unborn babies and the heinous abuse of children in our enlightened society?

Considering the proximity of these events, could it be that one of God's celestial signs in the last days (Acts 2:19-21) manifests as the convergence of two rare Solar Eclipses directly over "The Empty Cross," a seven-story sculpture within The Coming King Sculpture Prayer Garden in Kerrville, Texas?

This location, situated on the same latitude as Israel, holds a special significance to God, supported by undeniable supernatural occurrences.

Beyond its resemblance to the Holy Land in terrain and appearance, this Texas Hill Country land has been a site of documented miracles, signs and wonders. Over a million people from around the world have sought God's intervention, salvation, healing and deliverance at this Christian site.

Thousands have witnessed the manifestation of Shekinah Glory Dust (Exod. 34:29; Isa. 60:1) on their clothes, faces, hands and Bibles—a spiritual substance that resembles fine glitter, verified by scientific analysis. Additionally, thousands have captured images of peculiar luminous orbs believed to be angels (Ezek. 1:15-22) in flight, suggesting a connection to heavenly realms. Many Christians perceive this specific location as a portal where angels ascend and descend (John 1:51).

The 77' 7" hollow cross sculpture at this site has been seen by millions of people traveling on Interstate 10, connecting California and Florida. Countless others have learned about this unique spiritual art garden through various media channels. Remarkably, the paths of the Oct. 14, 2023, Annular Solar Eclipse and the April 8, 2024, Total Solar Eclipse converge deliberately. Many believe this convergence, forming a colossal cross in the sky directly above "The Empty Cross," is not a random occurrence but a divine sign—a message from the Creator Himself.

The Babylon Bee's Guide to Gender: Using Humor to Navigate a Secular World

California's Assembly and Senate have passed a contentious bill, AB 957, raising concerns among conservative and Christian communities that it will infringe on parental rights in custody disputes involving a child's "gender identity." The Democrat-backed legislation, which awaits California Governor Gavin Newsom's signature, calls for judges to consider a parent's stance on their child's gender identity as a factor in custody battles.

The bill asserts that a parent's affirmation of a child's gender identity or expression falls under the umbrella of "health, safety and welfare of the child." The term 'affirmation' encompasses a wide range of actions unique to each child but is mandated to promote the child's overall well-being, according to the bill's language.

Assembly member Lori Wilson clarified that "affirmation" might include a parent's provision of gender-specific toys, nail polish and even choices regarding the child's hair length, as reported by the Associated Press.

In a lopsided Assembly vote of 57-16, AB 957 gained Democratic approval but faced strong opposition from California Republicans and conservative groups. Critics argue that the bill could erode parental rights and be easily manipulated to the detriment of parents who may not fully endorse their child's gender identity.

The California Family Council expressed its concerns, stating, "This bill will require judges to equate 'affirmation of child gender transition' directly with a child's 'health, safety and welfare' when determining custody or visitation rights. Consequently, parents who do not affirm the chosen gender identity of their child (of any age) risk having their child taken from them."

During the bill's legislative journey earlier this year, attorney Erin Friday, representing a mother whose child previously experienced gender dysphoria, warned about potential manipulation of the law. She stated, "Family court judges will be compelled to favor the parent who will affirm the child's delusion. Parents can easily game the system and use gender as retaliation against each other. What happens when one parent will socially affirm the child but will not agree to medicalize? Does the parent willing to do more transitioning prevail?"

The controversial nature of AB 957 has drawn attention beyond California's borders. Billionaire entrepreneur Elon Musk, known for his critical stance on transgender ideology, voiced his concerns, calling the bill "a wolf in sheep's clothing" on the social media platform X. Musk contended, "What it actually means is that if you disagree with the other parent about sterilizing your child, you lose custody. Utter madness!"
