Together they explore how understanding God’s truth helps believers stand firm in a world that often confuses right and wrong. Drawing from 2 Thessalonians 2 and Matthew 24, they encourage listeners to recognize deception, cling to truth and walk in the freedom that comes from living according to God’s ways.

Throughout the discussion the Beveres remind listeners that God’s laws are not meant to restrict but to protect and bless His people. They share how returning to biblical principles brings clarity, peace and strength even in a culture that often drifts from God’s design. Their message highlights that through grace believers can walk in holiness and experience the power of a life fully surrendered to Christ.

'He's feeling the demons!' Isaiah Saldivar Reacts to IShowSpeed's Visit to a Witch's House

World-famous streamer IShowSpeed, whose broadcasts draw hundreds of thousands of live viewers, recently entered the home of a self-proclaimed witch for a spiritual "reading." The video has since gone viral, prompting revivalist and deliverance minister Isaiah Saldivar to issue a strong warning to believers and young viewers alike: "Run from this demonic

“This is the largest streamer right now, period,” Saldivar said. “He’s making a huge impact on the youth, good or bad.” For that reason, Saldivar reacted to the clip to expose what he calls the spiritual danger behind “modern witchcraft” and “New Age deception.”

“Reiki is Witchcraft”

In the video, the woman describes herself as a Reiki master, life doula and intuitive, a blend of New Age spiritualism and energy work. Saldivar didn’t mince words. “Reiki is witchcraft. The Bible says it’s detestable,” he said. “Mediums, psychics and witches are talking to demons and getting information from demons. I’ve done deliverance on people who came out of this and are now Christians.”

As the woman instructed IShowSpeed to “be open” to the experience, Saldivar explained what was really happening behind the scenes. “That’s what the devil wants,” he said. “He wants you to be open so these spirits can enter. These demons want to live inside of people.”

Crystals and Chakras: “An Open Door for Demons”

The witch then handed IShowSpeed a crystal and began discussing “chakras,” spiritual energy centers in the body according to Eastern religion. Saldivar rebuked the entire ritual. “All these crystals and demonic items, they seem innocent. They’re not. The devil comes masking as an angel of light. This is how he enters into people.”

He explained that these practices are a distortion of what the Bible teaches about the body being a temple of the Holy Spirit. "It's all demonic," he said. "It's a perversion of God's design."

IShowSpeed's Fear and Escape

During the encounter, IShowSpeed became visibly uncomfortable. "He's feeling the demons in the room," Saldivar said. "He probably grew up in the church. He's feeling the demonic spirits and the atmosphere."

Moments later, the streamer suddenly stood up and left, claiming he had forgotten something outside. Saldivar applauded the decision. "I never thought I'd say this, but what he did was exactly what all of you should do. Run. Run from witchcraft. Run from this demonic stuff. It's all detestable."

This Is Not a Game

Saldivar called the situation a sobering example of how witchcraft and New Age spirituality have infiltrated mainstream entertainment. "This is the largest live streamer in the world casually going to a witch's house for a reading," he said. "She was about to start communicating with a demon that's familiar with him. It's all divination. It's all witchcraft. Don't get involved in this."

He warned that once people invite demonic spirits through occult practices, deliverance is not simple. "Once you get a demon in, it's not as easy as you think to get it out," he cautioned. "If you're involved in Ouija boards, crystals, seances or any of that, you're opening yourself up to demons."

Pray for IShowSpeed

Despite the serious tone of his message, Saldivar's heart for IShowSpeed was clearly revealed. "Keep praying for him," he said. "I'm praying he gets saved. If he ever watches this and wants deliverance, hit me up because he definitely needs it."

Saldivar closed by reminding viewers that deliverance from demonic bondage is possible only through Jesus Christ. "I deal with people constantly that have demons because of this stuff," he said. "But Jesus came to set the captives free."

The encounter serves as a modern reminder of Scripture's warning in Ephesians 5:11: "Have nothing to do with the fruitless deeds of darkness but rather expose them." Saldivar's message stands as a call for believers to stay vigilant against the spiritual deception now disguised as entertainment.

Tony Evans Reveals What God Taught Him in His Season of Repentance

Polk County's Sheriff Grady Judd, known by many as "America's Sheriff," delivered a stirring message at Victory Church North Campus calling on Christians to reclaim America's spiritual foundation. His words went beyond law enforcement and became a plea for revival.

"It is truly my honor to be your sheriff and to be with you," Judd said, thanking the community that has helped make Polk County's crime rate the lowest it's been in 53 years. But even as he celebrated local safety, he warned that "peace is fragile every place in the United States."

The Decline of Faith

Judd spoke bluntly about America's moral decay. "We are up against the evil spirits of the world," he said, noting that Christian identity in the U.S. dropped from 78% to 68% in just a decade. "What happened to the 10%? We need to have the Holy Spirit working in us. We've got to push harder to bring people to understand we must have faith and belief in God or things will continue to go the wrong way."

A Culture of Chaos

The sheriff warned of a growing culture of violence and hostility, citing recent national attacks including the "Charlie Kirk massacre," the stabbing of a 23-year-old woman on a subway and a shooting at a Michigan church.

“These attacks aren’t isolated,” he said. “There’s a culture of hostility that’s occurring because you have the 24-hour news cycle.”

He blamed both mainstream and social media for spreading negativity and fueling division. “Dirty laundry sells,” he said. “Social media is a breeding ground for conflict. No one seems to be able to have civil discourse anymore.”

The Drug Epidemic and a Moral Crisis

Having served in law enforcement for five decades, Judd tied America’s drug crisis to a deeper spiritual problem. “The overdose deaths go up and up and up. The suicides go up and up and up. The mental health issues go up and up and up,” he said.

He warned of the deadly spread of fentanyl which he said has killed 250,000 Americans in four years. “Why when you’re flipping through your social media isn’t there ‘Fentanyl kills you’?” he asked.

Fighting the Devil Where He Is

Rather than retreat from technology, Judd urged Christians to take the fight to the digital front lines. “We’ve got to fight the devil where he is, not where we want him to be,” he said to applause.

He challenged churches and believers to flood social media with light instead of darkness. “What if every church, every synagogue, every person of faith set up a Facebook or Instagram profile and pumped positive out to the kids like the negative they're seeing now?"

The Roots of Decline

Judd shared lessons from his late father, a minister of music, who warned that America's downfall began when it removed prayer from schools, discipline from classrooms and patriotism from the nation's youth.

- The loss of prayer weakened the moral foundation of students and removed a daily reminder of faith from their lives.
- The end of classroom discipline shifted respect away from authority and encouraged disobedience in children.
- The decline of patriotism led young people to lose pride in their country and the sense of duty once instilled through national service.

Judd said his father's warnings have come true. "He lived long enough to see the beginning of it."

A Call to Revival

Quoting 2 Chronicles 7:14, Judd reminded believers that healing begins with humility and prayer. "The communication media that people are on today is not the evening news. It's social media news," he said. "We've got to make sure that we sell what's really right, what's really good, what's really positive."

Closing his remarks, the sheriff challenged Christians to rise up. "Far too long we've sat quiet. If Christians do not speak up, if we do not stand up, if we do not become loud and positive, we're going to continue to slip in our numbers. As leaders in the community, we can do better. God bless you all."
