

Is the Magic in 'Frozen II' Safe for Your Children?

With Frozen II likely to take over the box office this weekend, families across the U.S. may be wondering whether Disney's animated sequel is safe for their kids. After all, both the original movie and the sequel heavily feature and discuss magic. Despite this, Movieguide®'s Dr. Ted Baehr believes this film is appropriate for any children "4 and up."

In a video review of Frozen II, Baehr explains, "This is really an acceptable movie. The way you deal with the enchanted forest and some of the magic—now the magical thinking gets superseded by the end of the movie by the Christian redemptive content. The good triumphs over all the bad. But you may want to talk to your children first."

Chick-fil-A Says It Will No Longer Donate to Anti-LGBTQ Organizations Like FCA, Salvation Army

Eager to expand its footprint overseas and into liberal cities in the U.S., executives at Chick-fil-A have made the decision to no longer donate to perennially controversial charities like the Salvation Army and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

After donating to more than 300 charities this year, Chick-fil-A is planning to refine its philanthropic structure, according to a report from Bisnow. And that apparently includes no longer donating cash to organizations that have been perceived by some on the left to be anti-LGBTQ.

Over the years, both the Salvation Army and the FCA have opposed same-sex marriage, a position that has apparently proved untenable for the Christian-owned Chick-fil-A, at least from a marketing standpoint.

“We made multi-year commitments to both organizations and we fulfilled those obligations in 2018,” a representative for the Atlanta-based restaurant chain said in a statement, noting the quick-service eatery will focus its philanthropy on “education, homelessness and hunger.”

Chick-fil-A president and COO Tim Tassopoulos said that, as the company expands into more places, “We need to be clear about who we are.” He added, “There are lots of articles and newscasts about Chick-fil-A, and we thought we needed to be clear about our message.”

WATCH: Kanye West Defends Joel Osteen at Lakewood Church

Kanye West spoke at Joel Osteen's Lakewood Church on Sunday morning. Lakewood Church streamed the service live through its website and Facebook page. You can watch the embedded stream from Facebook here.

At one point, West broke into a passionate defense of Osteen against some in the Christian community who criticize his emphasis on positivity and prosperity. His remarks came in the middle of a section in which West was opining about the U.S. as a Christian nation.

"They're attempting to take prayer out of schools," West says. "When you remove the fear and love of God, you create the fear and love of everything else. ... Reinstate the fear and love of God, and eliminate the fear and love of everything else. That slight difference of wording, I got that from Joel. Because there's a lot of people in the Christian community that try to give Joel a hard time, because when you turn on the radio, he keeps on showing you how good God is. God is not the enemy. God is not the negative part. God is not just a perception of fire and brimstone. God is love. He's the greatest. He's glory. God is family. God is friendship. God is prosperity. Keep our eye on the sparrow. Keep your eye on the beauty and the love and the grace of God, the grace that allows us to be here today with all of our sins. We know that when we accept Jesus Christ as our Lord and Savior, we know that we will be granted eternal life."

"When you've got Kanye defending you, you've made it, man," Osteen joked.

The service also featured a musical performance by Tauren

Wells.
