

Lauren Daigle Reveals Her Favorite Songs to Sing in Concert

Lauren Daigle says “Love Like This” and “How Can It Be” are two of her favorite songs to perform live in concert. During video taken at an October 31 concert in Brussels, Belgium, Daigle discusses her favorite songs to perform live during a transition between songs.

“I love this song so much,” Daigle says. “People ask me, ‘What’s your favorite song to sing every night?’ One of them is ‘How Can It Be,’ the one we just did. And then the next one is one of my favorites as well. So this song is ‘Love Like This.’”

Watch the video of her live performance of “Love Like This” here.

Steffany Gretzinger Debuts New Song About Communion

Steffany Gretzinger may no longer be at Bethel Church in Redding, California, but she’s still producing new worship music. Gretzinger and fellow Bethel Music worship leader Brandon Lake recently released a new song about communion with Maverick City Music.

On “Communion,” Gretzinger sings, “Bring me back to communion/

Lead me back to the moment I saw Your face.”

Watch the 14-minute music video here.

Anne Graham Lotz Issues Call to Prayer for Israel

Anne Graham Lotz says Christians must pray for Israel now more than ever. During an appearance on The Jim Bakker Show, Lotz confided that she does not approve of Trump’s retreat from Syria and believes it puts many allies in the area in danger. But Lotz then said that perhaps the U.S.’s retreat could trigger the war prophesied in Ezekiel 38, setting in motion end-times events for Israel.

Referencing both the regional unrest and Israel’s ongoing efforts to establish a coalition government, Lotz referenced Psalm 122:6 and said it’s a critical time for believers to intercede for Israel.

“It’s a time to pray for the peace of Jerusalem,” Lotz said. “...And what my prayer would be is that when the enemy comes against Israel, that she’ll know—and right now, you know, she’s in an election flux where I don’t think Rivlin is going to approve Netanyahu. They’re just in a mess. They don’t have a leadership right now. The Israelis are divided when the enemies are surrounding them. And could it be that it gets so bad, that like they did in Judges, they’ll cry out? But this time, they’ll cry out to God and say, ‘God, help us,’ and will He send the Messiah to deliver them? So it’s a very critical, strategic time for the nation of Israel, and I believe God’s Word when it says that He blesses those who bless Israel and bless His people. So we can bless them through our prayers for them. Just follow the news. Pray for the leadership. Pray for Israel.”

Watch the embedded video to hear more.

Mike Bickle Prays God Will Touch, Protect and Strengthen Kanye West

Mike Bickle—founder of the International House of Prayer (IHOPKC) in Kansas City, Missouri—prayed that God would bolster Kanye West’s young faith and thanked God for his salvation. Bickle’s prayer was part of a YouTube video posted Friday by IHOPKC in which Bickle reacted to news of West’s radical conversion.

“I think of a man that’s on a platform with millions of people—and therefore millions of opinions—and already I feel empathy,” Bickle says. “Anybody on that kind of platform making a stand for Jesus—some will say you’re a fake, others think you’re utter perfection [and] ready for sainthood, you know, whatever that might mean. And I think our approach should be different from either one of those polarized views. I think we look at him and say, here’s a person who’s making confession: ‘Jesus is King. He’s King of my life.’ It’s a recent confession, and we need to take it at face value that it’s sincere unless he gives us strong evidence in his character in the days to come that it’s false. ... But even then, we don’t need to have a big opinion on it because we’re not taking our doctrine from him. We’re not taking our model of Christianity from him. He's, by his confession, a brand-new believer."

Bickle encourages fellow believers to give West time and space to grow and mature in his faith, and not to prematurely judge him for inevitable mistakes he will make in the next couple of years.

On the song "Hands On," West muses that Christians will be the "first ones to judge me" and speculates he will get little love from his fellow believers because of his prior lifestyle.

"I say we give him time," Bickle says. "As a born-again believer in the family of God, we need to be in a spirit of encouragement to him. He might find some stumbling and some tripping, like all of us in our early days in the Lord. He isn't going to come out of the 'spiritual womb' [with] perfect doctrine and perfect maturity and perfect humility and perfect—no one does. We give each other tons of grace, and I look at this man and I think, 'You know, I'm so grateful for your confession.' It says we overcome by the blood of the Lamb and the word of our testimony, and he's giving a bold testimony."

At the end of the video, Bickle concludes by praying for West.

"Lord, thank You for Your testimony," he says. "Thank You that many are checking out the testimony of the gospel of the Lord Jesus in a new way. And Lord, I ask that You'd put Your hand on this young man's life—Kanye West—and God, I ask You that You would touch him, protect him, visit him, strengthen him. Put godly men and women around him who love Jesus and the Word, and that are not after his platform—they're not after his money, they're not after his notoriety—but they're standing in faith for his soul and for his growth in the love of God and in the grace of God."

Kevin Hart: What God Told Me After My Near-Death Accident