

3 Prayers That Will Change Everything

Can prayer really change your life?

In a new video posted to Instagram, author Dayne Kamela shared three short prayers that have the power to move heaven and earth for your life and for the kingdom of God.

Prayer #1: Prayer to Hear the Holy Spirit Above Distraction

“Dear God, open up my ears so I can hear Your voice above every distraction,” Kamela prays.

We all know what it is like to be distracted, to have our eyes and ears focused on something outside of the Gospel. When we intentionally seek the Lord first and ask to hear Him, He is sure to answer.

Prayer #2: Prayer to Trust God’s Supernatural Timing

“Dear God, teach me to trust Your timing even when I don’t understand the process,” Kamela prays.

God often answers our prayers on a different timeline than we anticipated or would have hoped for. However, what He has for us is always better. Learning to trust Him through every high and love is a key piece of learning to walk in the Christian faith.

Prayer #3: Prayer for Discipline

“Dear God, fill me with discipline to seek You daily and stay consistent in prayer,” prays Kamela.

It takes discipline to open up our Bibles, actively pray and share the Gospel with the world around us. Godly discipline isn't something we can do on our own, but requires the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

In a world where individuality often overshadows community, the church must be reminded of a foundational truth: we are one body—the body of Christ. This body is not defined by one church building, one ministry or one denomination. It is global, diverse and united by one Spirit, one Lord and one mission.

In a recent message by Kathryn Krick, she explained why unity in the body of Christ is critical for Christians if we desire to see God move throughout the earth.

“It’s not supposed to be separate teams,” she says. “It’s not supposed to be the hand chopped off of the body doing its thing over here and the knee downwards chopped off doing its thing over here. It’s not going to work.”

God never intended for His people to operate in isolation. When one part of the body functions independently—like a detached limb—it cannot fulfill its purpose, and the whole body suffers. True power and effectiveness in the Kingdom of God are unlocked when we embrace our unity and recognize that we are all on the same team.

Krick emphasizes that while it's important to be faithful to where God has planted us—"because where you're planted is where you're being equipped... it's God releasing prophetic words of what you need right now"—we must not forget that we have "brothers and sisters around the world." The body is made up of many members, and every one is vital.

Division is one of the enemy's most effective strategies against the church. "A kingdom divided against itself cannot stand," Krick warns. Satan weakens the church's authority by stirring skepticism and superiority among believers. When churches or ministries say, "I'm the only right one here," it leads to disunity, which hinders God's greater purpose.

Even though God can still move in the midst of division, He desires more. "He can still move, but He can't do all that He wants to do if we would actually be united," says Krick.

We are called to build one another up—not wound each other. "We're supposed to lift one another up off the ground... but what we have in the body of Christ so often is instead helping the devil beat down the person," she says.

This is a serious issue, according to Krick. "God sees. We can't hide that from God." Personal success in ministry or life means little if it comes at the expense of tearing others down.

The time for division in the body of Christ is over. As Kathryn Krick boldly declares, we are not separate teams—we are one body, called to move in unity, power, and love. The enemy knows he cannot defeat a church that stands together, so he works overtime to divide us. But when we refuse to tear each other down and instead choose to lift one another up, we become the unstoppable force God intended.

This is not just a call to be nicer—it's a call to war against the schemes of darkness with the weapon of unity. The revival we long for, the miracles we pray for, and the transformation we cry out for—they're all waiting on the other side of a unified church.

Jack Hibbs Exposes Satan's Greatest Lie, and Why It Still Deceives Millions

John and Lisa Bevere want believers to know something simple but deeply transformative: "You are called."

That's not just the title of their new book—it's the core message of their ministry and latest podcast episode.

"Every single Christian, every single Christian, gift," Lisa emphasized. "So you talked about the calling, the gifts comes with a gift. Yes. To accomplish the calling."

Too often, people assume calling is reserved for pastors or church leaders. But as John pointed out, "God has called every single one of His children. And with those callings, He gives us very unique gifts to fulfill that calling. They're supernatural gifts." He recounted a story of a businessman who once told him, "I've worked so hard. Why should I work this hard for the next 10 years of my life? I mean, we're set." John's answer? "Your gifts are more valuable than my gifts."

And that truth doesn't just apply to CEOs. Lisa reminded listeners that the barrier to hearing God is often personal compromise: "The only times I wouldn't hear God is when I was in rebellion or sin." John added, "If we walk in darkness and we say we have fellowship with Him, we lie to ourselves.”

They also emphasized that God’s voice requires tuning in. “God is always broadcasting. He’s always speaking,” Lisa said, “I’m just not tuned in.” John added, “You were aware that God was still with you, but you weren’t hearing His voice because of sin.”

One Scripture stood out to John recently: “Be on your guard, constantly alert, and watch and pray for you do not know when the time will come that your master will return... He puts his servants in charge... each with his particular task.” For John, that revelation from Mark 13:33-34 confirmed, “God has instructions for every single one of us on the work we’re supposed to do.”

The Beveres urged listeners not to underestimate everyday faithfulness. “Just do what you do know. Just serve,” Lisa said. “What is in your hand, what is in your life, do your next.” John echoed, “Your calling right now is to serve your pastor and your local church and you stay with it.”

God’s calling isn’t confined to the pulpit. It’s just as present in the parking lot, the salon, the boardroom and the mechanic’s garage. As Lisa beautifully concluded, “We are called but we are not called to attack other people. We are called to pursue God. And we are called to flourish in the gifting and calling of God on our lives.”

And to those still wondering if they’ve missed the voice of God, John left them with this encouragement: “Father, in the name of Jesus... I speak to those distractions... and I break the power of those strongholds off of your life... so they can walk and fulfill what You’ve created them to do on this earth.”

This is the #1 Thing Christians Get Wrong About Identity

God chose you before He created the very foundations of the earth. However, sometimes just because we know this truth in our mind doesn't mean it connect well with your heart. So, what should you do when struggling with your identity in Christ?

In a community post to YouTube, Richard Lorenzo Jr. shared some biblical, psychological and scientific truths about the mind to help Christians understand better what it means to have our identities rooted in Christ.

Breaking News. Spirit-Filled Stories. Subscribe to Charisma on YouTube now!

I caught a deep revelation about identity, and the Lord impressed on me that this isn't just encouragement—it's a key to transformation. Some of y'all have been wondering, "Why do I still struggle to believe who God says I am?" or "Why do I feel so on fire one week, and then so unsure the next?" Let's go deep—because God wants to set you free from false identity and raise you up in truth.

1. You're Born with Purpose—but Not Awareness

Jeremiah 1:5 says, "Before I formed you in the womb, I knew you."

That means your identity was already established in heaven—but when you entered the world, you entered unaware.

You were born into:

- Noise*
- Culture*
- Pain*
- Voices that don't speak truth*

And unless someone teaches you how to hear God's voice, you'll start listening to the world to tell you who you are.

This very first truth from Lorenzo speaks volumes. We still live in a broken and fallen world and because of that we must understand we will be bombarded on all sides from the beginning of our life about false viewpoints on purpose and identity.

To order Richard Lorenzo Jr.'s new book, What's the Purpose of Life? visit .

2. Identity Begins With Exposure, Not Essence

From a psychological and neurological standpoint:

- Your prefrontal cortex (the part of your brain responsible for self-awareness, reasoning, and identity) isn't fully developed until age 25.
- That means for the first two decades of your life, your identity is shaped mostly by what happens to you, not by who you truly are.

So what defines you?

- What your parents did or didn't do
- What your friends or bullies said
- What your culture praised or rejected
- What your trauma whispered to your soul

And now that you've come to Christ, you're saved—but not yet rewired.

That's why Paul says in Romans 12:2, "Be transformed by the renewing of your mind."

Your spirit is reborn instantly, but your soul goes through sanctification—day by day, word by word, fire by fire.

Each and every day we should pray to take off the old and put on the new, and for the Lord to suit us up in his full armor so we can stand against the wicked schemes of this world. It takes true relationship, time and the Holy Spirit's assistance and guidance to be transformed.

3. We're Wired to Form Identity Through Mirrors

From childhood, we look for mirrors to tell us who we are:

- If the mirror was abuse, we reflect shame.
- If the mirror was abandonment, we reflect unworthiness.
- If the mirror was performance, we reflect pressure.

That's why people end up building identities based on survival, not design.

They become what they needed to be to get by. But that was never who they were called to be.

4. Scientific Truth: Your Brain Was Wired By Experience

This isn't just emotional—it's physiological.

- Your limbic system stores emotional memories and trauma.
- Your brain builds neural pathways based on repeated thoughts and emotions.

- The more you experience fear, rejection, or shame—the more those paths get cemented.

So when someone comes to Christ later in life—in their 30s, 40s or 50s—they're not less saved, but they may have decades of identity lies carved into their nervous system.

It takes longer to unlearn what's been deeply embedded.

But by the Spirit, by the Word, and through consistent surrender, God can and will rewire you.

While our experiences shape what we think of ourselves, God does want to completely restore and renew our minds, that we may be made new like Christ. No matter how quick or how long the process is, God is the God of love, peace and a sound mind. He is the One we can completely put our trust in no matter what.

Transformation is a process, not a performance. The enemy may have spent years trying to write lies into your identity, but the Author of your life holds the final word. Every time you choose God's voice over the noise, every moment you stand on His Word instead of your wounds, you're being rewired for truth. So keep pressing in. Keep renewing your mind. Because your identity isn't something you achieve—it's rooted in being a son or a daughter of the most High King.

'I Don't Care Where You Were Last Night': This Pastor's Bold Message Will Shock You!

What if there was one spot in Scripture that held all the keys to your protection, breakthrough and rest?

In a new livestream by Fresh Oil's Chris Garcia, he shared how the Lord is currently calling His people back to the secret place. As Garcia points out, Psalm 91:1 declares, "He who dwells in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty." This single verse contains a profound truth: the place of true spiritual power, protection, and intimacy is not in the public eye but in the hidden corners of our lives where only God sees.

To “dwell” means to live, to settle, to remain. It’s not a fleeting visit or a hurried devotional—it’s a permanent residence in the presence of God. The “secret place” is not a physical location but a spiritual posture. It’s where we meet God privately, away from applause, recognition and distraction. It’s where we learn to value His voice above all others.

In the Gospels, Jesus repeatedly emphasized doing spiritual disciplines in secret. He said, “When you pray, go into your room and shut the door” (Matt. 6:6). Public expressions of faith—prayer, worship, fasting—are important, but they must be rooted in private devotion. Without a secret life with God, public ministry becomes empty and powerless.

Like Garcia says, Psalm 91 is often quoted for its promises of divine protection—deliverance from danger, victory over the enemy, and peace in chaos. But these promises are conditional. They are reserved for those who dwell in the secret place. Too often, believers recite this Psalm like a charm, expecting the benefits without cultivating the relationship it requires. The shadow of the Almighty—His glory, His covering, His presence—is only found when we remain close to Him in the hidden place.

In our digital age, where social media and public platforms dominate the spiritual landscape, the temptation is strong to trade intimacy for influence. But we must resist. The secret place must be protected. It is the source of joy, strength and direction. Without it, we risk burnout, pride and spiritual dryness.

True satisfaction is not found in ministry success or public affirmation. It’s found in being alone with the Lord—where there are no cameras, no followers and no need to perform. That’s where transformation happens. That’s where heaven speaks.

If you long for greater authority, deeper peace and a more vibrant walk with God, the answer is simple: return to the secret place. Value it above all else. Make your home there. And you will find yourself dwelling under the shadow of the Almighty.

Let the secret place be your sanctuary. There, in the stillness, God will meet you.

Rabbi Sees Jesus in Vivid Dream: God Revealed Himself to Me

God has the power to transform anyone for His kingdom and glory.

Rabbi Kirt Schneider, host of Discovering the Jewish Jesus, recently joined Pastor Troy Brewer for an inspiring conversation about his journey to faith in Jesus and the calling he's embraced ever since.

A Messianic Jewish believer, Rabbi Schneider has devoted his life to awakening the church to the Jewish roots of Christianity and boldly declaring Jesus as Messiah—despite facing rejection from both Jewish and Christian communities.

Pastor Troy praised Schneider's courage and grace, calling him "a man on a mission" and a personal hero. "When you stand and boldly proclaim Yeshua HaMashiach as a rabbi," Brewer said, "you are catching it from both ends. I love bravery, and I love the grace that you carry."

Rabbi Schneider acknowledged the emotional cost of his calling, admitting that years of rejection have brought hidden pain. "When I meet the Lord face to face, there's going to be a lot of pain released from my heart," he shared. "But we're appointed not only to reign with Him, but to suffer with Him."

He then recounted the supernatural vision that changed his life forever. At 20 years old, with no knowledge of Jesus and no exposure to the New Testament, he was in emotional turmoil after losing his identity as a competitive wrestler. One night in 1978, while reading a book on Eastern mysticism, he fell asleep—and everything changed.

“Jesus appeared to me in my sleep,” he said. “I saw Him on the cross in full color, and a ray of red light came through the sky and landed on His head. I instantly knew it was God showing me that Jesus is the way.”

The encounter, though brief, birthed hope in his heart. “I didn’t know theology, I didn’t know sin—I just knew that God had revealed Himself to me.”

Both Schneider and Brewer reflected on the mystery of God’s choosing. “The reason the Lord revealed Himself to you,” Schneider told Brewer, “is because He chose you. Jesus said, ‘No one comes to Me unless it’s been granted by the Father.’”

Now a voice crying out with boldness and grace, Rabbi Schneider continues his mission: to declare the name of Yeshua to the world and to call both Jew and Gentile into the revelation of Jesus as Messiah.
