

Edge of Apocalypse

 Tim LaHaye and Craig Parshall | Zondervan

Best-selling author Tim LaHaye (Left Behind series) partners with Craig Parshall for Edge of Apocalypse, the debut in their new prophecy-based fiction series The End.

Joshua Jordan, former U.S. spy-plane-hero-turned-weapons-designer, has created a missile defense system christened "Return to Sender." He uses it to diffuse a North Korean attack intended to level New York City.

Following that success, he is caught in a web of political double-dealing, international intrigue and personal danger.

Jordan's integrity, personal values and patriotism are put to the test, as he feels his wife pushing him to accept a Savior he is not ready for. With a vice president who is actively vocal about her plans to be the next president and a president who is strangely AWOL when needed most, it's difficult for Jordan to distinguish the heroes from the villains.

Though it's fiction combined with eschatology, Edge of Apocalypse has a realistic feel, as if it were lifted from tomorrow's headlines. Readers seeking end-times adventure will welcome this action-packed beginning and look forward to future releases in the series.
