

10-Year-Old Girl Leads Younger Brother to Christ Using TikTok

Miranda DuBrey-Lefler, leader of 420 FIRE International in Wilmington, North Carolina, ignites the spiritual fire that stirs within every believer and captures the curiosity of those seeking the truth and transformation found in the presence of Jesus. Garnering 17,626 TikTok followers since posting her first video on Dec. 10, 2020, DuBrey-Lefler has impacted countless viewers through her transparent Spirit-led teaching videos.

But on June 29, the TikTok influencer reaped an unsurprising but unexpected harvest when her 10-year-old daughter, Madysen, asked her mom if she could record a TikTok video about Jesus too.

"I told her yes, but you have to ask Jesus what He wants you to say," DuBrey-Lefler told Charisma News in a recent interview. "She said, 'I already did. I think He gave me a verse. Is John 3:16 something?'"

Madysen shared her first evangelical TikTok video under the alias "jesusgirltalks," following her mother's example.

Several days later, DuBrey-Lefler says, her 6-year-old son, Madden, snuggled close to her on the couch. "You want to watch Sissy's TikTok video?" she asked. Right away, DuBrey-Lefler says, "He said, 'Mom, how do I do what Sissy said? How do I give my life to Jesus? How does Jesus come into my heart?'"

The two prayed together, and before the mother could even process what had just happened, Madden asked, "Mom, can I go get baptized?" The young boy suggested that they waste no time, and he made a public profession of his faith in the family swimming pool immediately following his decision to accept Jesus as his Savior.

Now, all of heaven is "throwing a party," DuBrey-LeFler explained to Madden. {eoa}
