

3 Keys to Embracing Your Breakthrough to Success

I'll never forget the day Mark got his breakthrough.

At an executive coaching weekend I led where men and women came to embrace their calling, his eyes brimming with tears, Mark took the index card scribbled with lies and forcefully thrust it into the fire.

He could hardly believe that the lie had cost him 20 years of his dream.

Relief washed over him with waves of emotion as he separated himself from the limiting beliefs that had held him back far too long.

3 Keys to Embracing Your Breakthrough to Success

1. Believe it is possible—for you.

We've all had the experience of going to a conference and seeing others get a word, receive healing or experience a breakthrough. We walk away thinking, What about me?

The challenge for busy men and women is that we believe all things are possible with God but often struggle to believe it's possible for us personally.

You don't have to wait any longer. Believe now, forgive those who have hurt you, release the fear and receive the breakthrough God has for you today.

2. Resist isolation and reach out to those who believe in you.

It's so easy to isolate ourselves, especially when things get tough. But often your answer lies within someone else. It's by God's design that we get in strategic conversations with others where destiny is clarified and worked out. Talk today to a trusted friend or confidant about the breakthrough you desire.

3. Make room in your life for your future.

We all have dreams. We all want to believe deep down inside that we can achieve our goals and make a difference in the world. But for far too many of us, our dreams are drowning in the frustrations and routines of daily life.

We're all busy. We fool ourselves into thinking that if we just grind it out, one day, we'll arrive. But one day never seems to come. If you want a breakthrough, you must make room in your life for your future.

Schedule some time to write out the breakthrough God has for you now.

Believe it, pray it and take one step forward.

Breakthrough is here!
