

6-Year-Old Accepts Jesus, Dies Weeks Later in Bizarre Accident

A six-year-old girl passed away in a freak accident just weeks after accepting Christ as her Lord and Savior.

As Fox News reported, Lucy Morgan and her family were enjoying their last day of vacation in Maine when a bizarre badminton accident occurred.

"This morning was beautiful just like every other morning had been this week," Lucy's father, Jesse Morgan wrote on his New Creation Living Blog.

"Due to a freak accident with a racquet that broke on a downward swing, a sharp piece had entered Lucy's skull while she was sitting on the sideline and caused catastrophic injury. She was still breathing but unresponsive as I held her with Bethany crying out to God."

Lucy eventually passed away from the traumatic injuries she endured. The timing of Lucy's death comes just weeks after she wanted to know more about Jesus.

"Four weeks ago, she asked Bethany how to be with God and be saved. Bethany explained it to her and offered to pray with her, but 'Miss Independent' wanted to do it herself. She went to her room and prayed to God to forgive her and that she believed in Jesus' death and resurrection. What a gift,"

Morgan writes.

Lucy kept a prayer journal where she wrote “God is amazing and He is so amazing.” She also wrote “God and Lucy. God is so amazing and He is the true God and He created everything and He died on the cross for our sins.”

Pray for the Morgan family as they walk out this difficult journey of losing a precious daughter and sister.
