

A Bittersweet Miracle: Autumn Nelon Streetman Has Baby on Late Mother's Birthday After Plane Crash

The only surviving member of a beloved Gospel group is celebrating the birth of a new family member, just five months after losing most of her family in a plane crash.

Autumn Nelon Streetman, the last surviving member of The Nelons, gave birth to her son on December 1, the same birthday as her late mother, Kelly Nelon Clark, who died in that crash.

The singer shared the news on Instagram earlier this month that she welcomed her first son, Rhett, with husband Jamie Streetman.

"The sweetest blessing God has ever given us," she wrote in a caption last week.

Autumn shared shortly after delivery that giving birth to her son was "the hardest, but most rewarding thing" she has ever done.

"Happy Birthday Mama, I think you would love this birthday gift," she added.
