

A Hidden Remnant Is Being Released From Chains of Fear and Anxiety

While I was driving yesterday, I heard the words “fear and anxiety.” What followed was an immediate vision of a group of believers with chains and shackles around their ankles. Some were even chained to each other. These people had been rendered powerless for years with fears, phobias and anxieties.

In an instant, the chains were broken, and the people were freed and began to move in signs, wonders and God’s power. Once He freed them, God would soon give them “marching orders.” I also sensed this would spark a great move of evangelism.

I inquired of the Lord, and He further impressed on me that this would be a sovereign move of deliverance!

Furthermore, I sensed that this was going to be a very powerful, almost elite force of believers that would be released. They would be “formidable foes” to the enemy of their souls who had held them immobile and isolated. Please note: What had held them captive was going to be given them a great authority to release others, particularly those also struggling with fear and anxiety.

When these believers walked out the fullness of their deliverance, they would leave large, spiritual imprints of release that would never disappear. Even when they walked into a room, every fear demon around would “run for the hills.”

God is punching a hole in the darkness of fear and anxiety with those who have suffered in this bondage for years.

I also felt that those who know who they bound are should start praising and thanking Him for this deliverance now! They should embrace with excited expectation (hope) for their impending freedom.

Fear demons are trembling in their boots, for their days are numbered. For whom the Son sets free is free indeed. {eoa}
