

A 'Kairos' Moment for Cuba

When I went to Cuba in 1997, I cried myself to sleep every night over the conditions of the people. I was staying in the home of a Cuban family, and we spent many days together as they taught me about their nation.

A year ago, I prophesied about a vision I had concerning the end of the embargo in the short-term. I am praying the protests that have broken out around Cuba and now Miami will be the catalyst for change. This is a hinge moment in history for the oppressed island nation.

The people did not choose this government or this rule of law. This is a behemoth spirit spreading the ideology of communism. Will you pray with me at this kairos time? Please watch the above and agree with me in prayer.
